NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

Members of the North London C.B.A. held their 9th annual show on Dec. 1st and 2nd in the Library Hall, Stoke Newington. The hall is beautifully adapted for a show, as the light is quite good both by day and night. The birds are staged upon tiers running the length of the hall, and these being covered with dark green baize show up the exhibits to perfection. There was as usual a capital entry, the numbers being equally divided between Nor., Yorks., and Brit., with a nice sprinkling of Borders and Foreign birds. The Norwich were really good high-class birds. Mr. R. P. Harper won the special with a lovely clear yell., a bird of grand size and type. Yorks. were an interesting lot, and included some real toppers. Messrs. Green's and W. H. Cook's birds were real good ones. The amateurs and novices made a brave display, some of the winners being quite high-class, the cup winner in the former section proving to be Mr. W. Lacey's lovely unflighted yell. Yorks. The novice section was a good one, Mr. W. H. Burchell staging a grand unflighted buff Nor., which secured special for best bird. The Yorks. also contained some well-filled classes. The British birds were well worth a visit to see. Mr. A. J. A. Marley staged well-known winners, and secured the special. The management of the show was in the capable hands of Mr. R. P. Harper, the popular secretary. He has now been several years with the society, and knows how everything should be arranged to make the venture successful. His committee consists of the following well-known fanciers, Messrs. Bell, Ayling, Penton, Cook, Lacey, Cawthorne, Mortlock, and Castell, with Mr. G. Mortlock as chairman. Mr. J. Robson judged Canaries, and Mr. A. Silver Hybrids and British.

BOWBURN C.B.S.

First annual show, held Nov. 25th, at Mr. Toulson's Wheat Sheaf Inn, when the eight classes provided brought about 66 entries, which made up into a nice little show. The exhibition was opened by the manager of Bowburn Colliery, who congratulated the society upon the success which seemed to crown their efforts, and he was highly delighted with the splendid specimens present. In Mr. R. Lofthouse the Society have a good and energetic secretary, who was very obliging to every one. The committee also deserve great praise for the manner in which everything was carried out. Mr. A. J. Notley (Hetton-le-Hole) judged.

COALTOWN OF WEMYSS

Second annual show held in the Victoria Hall on Dec. 2nd. The hall is very comfortable for a bird show; but slightly on the small side, and the light not quite so good as we would wish. We learned, however, that the society are likely to get Wemyss Hall next year; if they succeed it will be well worth exhibitors' while sending out more entries, as the management of this society deserves to be encouraged. They are all genuine fanciers here, and know how to handle and take care of the birds under their charge. The Scotch Fancy and Crest classes had to be cancelled through lack of entries, but we were pleased to see that the other sections came up well. The Nor. were numerous and good. and Mr. Holmes had his work cut out to judge them. Borders and Yorks. also turned up well, and Mr. Spence handled them in his usual good style. Mules and British birds came up splendidly, and were a great attraction. Mr. Goodfellow judged, and must have had some very close runs, competition being very keen. As far as we could hear all three judges gave every satisfaction. Mr. Storrar, the secretary, is one of the most obliging secretaries we could desire to see, and well deserves the support he got. He was well backed up by the president, Mr. Nicol, the assistant secretary, Mr. Murray, and a grand working committee that ought to get special mention, as we never saw judges better attended to. Taking the show all over it was a great success, the entries being a good bit up on last year's, even although the Scots. Fancy classes were cancelled.

BACKWORTH (Northumb.)

Third annual open show held Dec. 2, in the Backworth Institute Hall. The cage birds were staged on the platform at the end of the hall, which was rather small for the good entry received. We think the committee would be well advised to have the cage-bird section in a separate room another year. Entries came up well, totalling 211 in 20 classes, an increase on last year's. The quality of the exhibits was very good, the Norwich being the pick, and in this section several well-known winners were staged. In the Mule and Hybrid class, however, was found the winner of the silver cup for best bird, the honour going to Mr. J. Maddison with his noted clear Goldfinch Mule. The special of 30lbs. of canary seed for best bird, opposite sex to cup winner, went to Mr. Wm. Marshall, with his well-known variег. Dark Crest, and it would be a difficult matter to find two better birds in their respective classes. The secretary, Mr. T. Hunter, had charge of all the show, and the arrangements were capitally carried out; and although he has a great deal to do in looking after so many sections, we always found him cheerful, and most obliging, with all the details of his secretarial duties at his finger's ends. The assistant secretary, Mr. H. Elliot, acted as his deputy in the cage-bird section, and this gentleman carried out his duties in a most creditable manner, everything passing off without the slightest hitch. He was ably assisted by a fine body of workers, all keen upon doing their best to make the show a success. The show was well attended, and we noticed many well-known fanciers present. Mr. T. Dixon (Bedlington) judged.

FORRES.

Forres and Northern O.A. 25th annual show, held Dec. 2nd, in the large hall of the Mechanics' Institute. The hall is well adapted for a show of the kind, being well lighted, and free from draughts. The cage birds were staged at one side of the hall. The exhibits were well looked after, and staged at a nice height for one to see them easily. Entries totalled 380 altogether, an increase on last year's. Our section remained about the same as last year, and the quality was as good as in former years. Mr. W. Cumming, the energetic secretary, had all the arrangements well in hand, and must he complimented on the success of his labours. He was ably assisted by a band of willing workers, and everything went off well. Specials were won as follows: Silver medal for best Nor., Mr. Garden; second best, Mr. Stanford; silver medal for most points in cage birds, Mr. Garden; Hyde's, Mr. J. Watson, jun.; silver medal for best Brit., Mr. Main; ditto (local), Mr. Main; second best, Brit., Mr. Main; members' specials., handsome picture (presented by CAGE BIRDS for best bird), Mr. Maclean; special for best Nor., Mr. Maclean; best col. fed bird, Mr. Maclean; most points in Nor. (local), Mr. Maclean. The awards were made by Mr. A. Harris.

Club Reports.

PAISLEY, TANNAHILL O.S.

Meeting held Lockie's, 2, St. James' St., Mr. R. Neil presiding. Mr. T. Hamilton gave report of amalgamation meetings with surplus for same, which was passed. Judges were next nominated for our next annual show, also one new member was made. A few songs by various members were sung.—J. Stewart.

COLLINGTON AND CURRIE PARISHES O.S.

Meeting held Drill Hall, Juniper Green, Dec. 2, Councillor Begbie in chair. Mr. J. Michie was appointed Vice-president. Rules were drawn up. Secretary instructed to have same printed, and supply each member with a copy free. Three new members were admitted, namely, Messrs. A. Fleming, J. Calder, and H. Napier (all of Juniper Green). A fair number of members were present.—James Napier, Sec, KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Annual meeting held December 2nd, Mr. J. Stenhouse (President) in chair. Balance-sheet read and passed. It showed a grand balance on the right side. We are in the fortunate position of having a good banking account, and it says much for our committee that we increase it as the years go by. Agreed to elect the whole of the office bearers for ensuing year; also to advertise our show as formerly in the "Guarantee column" of CAGE BIRDS. Next annual open show October 19th, 1912; and agreed to try and engage the large new Gothenburgh Hall. —A Dickson, Sec.

SHIPLEY O.S.

Second members' judging competition held headquarters Nov. 27th. These competitions are of a very interesting character, and should be a means of bringing out the qualities of members as judges. After the competition members and friends were entertained to supper by the landlord (Mr. W. Smith) in commemoration of his birthday. The repast finished, the rest of the evening was given over to music under the capable direction of Messrs. H. Martin, J. Robinson, L. Crossland. Prize winners: Messrs. H. Hudson, H. Martin, W. Battye, H. Long, H. Bradshaw, L. Crossland. Mr. H. Martin won two specials—best cock and best hen. Mr. H. Sutcliffe acted as neutral judge.—A. Tillotson, Sec.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting held November 16th, Duke of York Hotel, Mr. F. J. Weaer presided over a good attendance. Prize-money and specials were paid out, and ticket money received. Mr. R. Willoughby won Messrs. Fry and Son's spl. for most points; Mr. J. Gibbons second; Mr. F. J. Weaver third. Mr. F. J. Weaver won Sandiford's medal for hottest fed bird; Mr Willoughby, Hyde's; Mr. J. Gibbons Trowers, and gold medal for most points at the three shows (Birmingham, West Bromwich, and Wolverhampton). We have again engaged Mr. Robson to judge our open show for 1912 (Nov. 1 and 2). After business, a lengthy chat on the amalgamation of Cage Bird Societies in the Midlands ensued. We think this the best suggestion ever brought forward.—J. Gibbons, Sec.

SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD, &c., C.B.S

Fifth annual supper held December 2nd, at Mason's Arms, Eastfield Side, when about 50 members and their wives sat down to a grand spread laid by Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Bradbury; and full justice was done to the good things put before them. The room looked splendid with its numerous decorations; whilst on a table at one end was a fine array of special prizes to be distributed to members. After supper we had a good night's entertainment, the secretary having secured the services of Mr. J. Carlen (piano) and Mr. A. Tearson, a good comedian, who made things go merrily along. Mr. J. W. Burton was in the chair. Mrs. Bradbury presented the specials. For most points gained by members throughout year: 1, W. Vardy; 2, Nuttall Bros.; 3, J. Suedley; 4, T. Hawksley; 5, C. Connah; 6, Caunt and Keeling; 7, M. Norwood; 8, J. W. Burton; 9, Hall Bros.; 10, J. Norwood; 11, H. Handley; 12, Shaw and Booth; 13, J. L. Wright; 14th, C. Waldrom; 15, W. Strange; 16th, G. Norwood; 17, W. Bentley; 18, W. Osborne; 19, S. Woolley; 20, J. Leam; 21, W. Owen; 22, G. Marshall. Mr. A. Wright got himself up as a goliwogg or a lollipop, or something like that and sang "It's me," and "You've got a long way to go." A hearty vote of thanks to the host and hostess, given with musical honours, and the singing of the National Anthem brought a merry evening to a close.—R. Nuttall, Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Meeting held Mr. Johnston's Rooms, Dec. 4, presided over by Mr. W. H. Stoakley. Mr. H. Smith (Sec.) was able, with business-like promptness, to furnish an estimate of the result of the show held in November, which was in every way satisfactory. A lady and gentleman were elected members, and six others were nominated. Cups won at show and points prize presented. Cup for best unflig. Can., Mrs. M. M. Owen, and that for best unflig. Nor. to Mr. H. Dixon. Chairman said he had won his own guinea points prize with 83 points, but he had no intention of taking it, and had therefore divided it in halves, one prize would go to Messrs. Easterling and Carson, 70 points, and the other to Mrs. L. M. Thynne, 69. Report of show then presented, showing that in spite of many adverse conditions it was well supported. No complaints had been received as to birds being sent home wrong, and this was especially noteworthy considering that, though there were nearly 150 more birds than last year, there were fewer helpers. The estimated accounts showed the expenses to be £82 19s. 6d., while receipts were £85 14s. 6d., leaving an estimated balance of about £3. Judging competition of British birds took place, 20 members taking part, Mr. Dewhurst kindly acting as final judge. Result: Mr. G. W. Saunders, 35 points; Mr. Soper, 14; Mrs. E. Mullis, 11; Mr. W. A. Truelove and Mr. G. Griffiths 9 each; Mr. F. Whiting, 7; Mrs. Thynne, 6; Mr. C. R. Taylor, 4; Mrs. Griffiths and Mr. E. Gibbs, 3 each; Mrs. Owen and Mr. H. Veen 2 each; Mr. E. W. Bell, 1; and Messrs. F. W. Owen, E. J. Whittome, J. Carson, H. Dixon, A. H. Dyke, G. W. Baker, and L. G. Owen, nil. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Dewhurst by acclamation. It was decided, after some little discussion, that the Society resign its membership of the London Federation of C.B.S. Secretary announced that 13 essays on the show had been received from Boy Scouts who were competing for prizes, and these had been duly scheduled. Decided that "Questions and Answers" should be the subject for meeting on second Monday in the month in consequence of New Year's Day falling on the ordinary meeting night.—H. Smith, Sec.

"CAGE BIRDS"
WATCH COUPON
Dec. 9th, 1911.

Manager, "CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

WEST STANLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held December 2nd, Mr. M. Butler chairman. Result of table show: BORD., YELL.: 1, 3, Goodchild; 2, Hunter. YORKS., BUFF: 1, Goodchild; 2, 3, Burdon. GREENFINCH: 1, Boyle; 2, Robson; 3, Goodchild. During the evening a long discussion took place regarding members buying birds from so-called dealers; in some cases they had to get legal advice before they got their birds; others had to be threatened by the Chief of Police for their town. Some 16 names were given, and it was decided to keep a record of them. If other societies would take this matter up it would prevent many young fanciers being "done." Many names that were mentioned have not a two-compartment cage, let alone an aviary. It would be a good thing if all intending buyers would insist on the deposit system; the out-lay is only a few pence, and to get into touch with reliable dealers this is acknowledged to be the surest way.—W. Elliott, Sec.

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Weekly Linnet contest for quality held Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon-street, Dec. 3rd, when 27 picked birds of Leeds sang. 1st, T. Stead; 2nd, A. Richardson; 3rd, Stead; 4th, Butler. Judges, Messrs. Wall Naylor and J. Thompson.—T. C. Summers, Hon. Sec.

Quality singing contest, held Skinners' Arms, Buslingthorpe Lane, 19 birds sang. 1, Chippingdale; 2, Turner; 3, Richardson. Judges, Messrs. Butler, Clayton and Hullen. Also a grand contest on Dec. 3rd, when 33 birds sang. The singing was perfect. 1, 2, shared by Sellars and Turner; 3, Ward. Judges, Messrs. Biss, Sissons, Reed. Also Canary contest took place, when 12 good birds also sang. 1, Binner; 2, Ward; 3, Blackburn. Judges, Messrs. Sissons and Biss. A Canary match will take place Dec. 10th, open to all, at 8 o'clock.—C. Clayton, Hon. Sec.

SALFORD.

Contest for time, held Boat House Hotel, Dec. 2nd, for members and Manchester and Dist. fanciers; 14 birds entered. Good singing was done. We agreed to have four minutes singing owing to the bad light. Winners: 1, J. Green, copper kettle; 2, W. Cain, pair of vases; 3, J. Gedson, Gorton (Lr. Seed): 4, A. Marshall, glass aviary. Timekeepers, Messrs. A. Parker, W. Cain and J. Green; birdkeeper, Mr. B. Wharton. The match between J. Cresswell and B. Wharton resulted in the former winning with his quality bird, and a special card was awarded. After the contest a very enjoyable evening was spent. After the meeting on Dec. 10, a gashlight contest among the members at 7.30 prompt; we want all the members to join in it. Next contest Dec. 16, 2 p.m.; novices will be given every encouragement. Two new members were made. Any of our members going to the Tyldesley contest are assured of a hearty welcome.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Week-end Linnet contest held Prince Albert Inn, December 3rd, when 14 birds sang. Judges, Messrs. J. Smith and J. Clarke; time-keeper, Mr. E. Wood. 1, A. Binns; 2, James Chippendale; 3, John Chippendale. Also Canary contest, December 3rd., when 19 birds entered. Judges, Messrs. J. Smith and P. Madden; time-keeper, Mr. E. Wood. 1, 2, J. Chippendale; 3, W. Juke.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*The Deaf Parrot.

"Sir," said the customer, "didn't you guarantee that that Parrot would repeat every word he heard?" "Certainly I did," replied the bird dealer. "But he doesn't repeat a single word." "He repeats every word he hears," said the shopman, "but he never hears any because he is as deaf as a post."—Sent by W. Watson, aged 12 years, Codnor, Derbyshire.

*A Tame Starling.

One day early in the past summer I picked up a young Starling which had fallen out of a nest in the roof of our house. I took it in and fed it until it was able to fly. I christened it "Bob." It became so tame that we were able to allow its freedom. When I called "Bob" it would fly down from the tree to my shoulder to be fed. Every night it would fly into our kitchen, where its cage hung. I kept it for about two months, and then it flew away. But it came back in ten days' time, and was glad to get back.—Sent by Alan Somerfield (aged 12 years), 168, Alexandra Road, Sheffield.

Sparrow's Curious Home

The time of day is announced to the garrison and neighbourhood of Woolwich every day at 1 p.m. and 9.30 p.m. by firing a blank charge of powder from a 9-pounder bronze gun. The gun is mounted in the Gun Park on a wooden travelling carriage, which is fitted with two boxes, each 1ft. square by 6ins. deep, and each divided into several compartments. The box holds case, shot, and cartridges with gun in action. The right box had a small hole in it, and some time ago the man, on firing the one o'clock gun, saw a Sparrow come out of the hole. He looked in the box and saw a nest with five eggs. One morning five birds came out. Three have died, and two went with their mother. (Taken from "Varieties.")—G. Nixon (age 12 years), 84, Common Side, Church Greasley.

A Universal Favourite.

Our tuneful common Linnet is not by any means confined to Great Britain. He is met with all over Europe, and the best part of Asia; and migrates to Egypt and Abyssinia during the winter. Everywhere he appears to appeal to the inhabitants. He is caught, caged, and tended on account of his delightful song.

Food of the Woodpigeon.

Wild fruits figure largely in the Cushat's meals. From the crop of one have been taken six hundred and ten ivy berries. He eats corn in all its stages, peas, beans, vetches; any quantity of acorns, beech mast, the seeds of fir cones; wild mustard and other small seeds, green clover, turnip top, and the roots in hard weather.

The "Hovering" Kestrel.

The Kestrel hovers anywhere and everywhere, without the slightest choice. He hovers over the meadows and cornfields; over the tops of the highest downs, and sometimes at the very edge of a precipice or chalk quarry; over gardens, waste ground; over the highway; and over stables where mice abound. He has no preference for one side of a hedge or grove, and cares not the least which way the wind blows. His hovering is entirely determined by his judgment as to the chance of prey.

Glorious opportunity for exhibitors! Blackburn Show, Dec. 15 and 16. See large advert.—Advt.

Palace Cage Bird Show, Feb. 2 to 6, 1912. Record Classificatiou. Novices specially catered for.—Advt.

Your coloured plate of last week is splendid—a masterpiece, writes Mr. J. Robinson (Hebburn Colliery).

Please accept my best thanks for such a splendid report in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. H. Smith, sec. of the Wimbledon and Dist. C.B.S. Show.

When Mr. J. Watts, who wrote us a letter from Greenwich, dated Nov. 24, sends us his correct address his communication will receive attentiou.

Will secretaries kindly note, in order to avoid clashing, that Sheffield O.S. have fixed their open show for Nov. 1 and 2, 1912? writes Mr. T. Bishop, the sec.

Your report and critique of the L.C.B.A. Show are perfection, and reflect great credit upon the able staff of CAGE BIRDS.—H. E. Parrott (Weybridge).

Our annual show will be held on Dec. 9 in the Avenue Hall, Main Avenue, Bush Hill Park, writes Mr. H. G. Mercer, hon. sec. of the Bush Hill Park Society.

Kindly note my change of address from Hett Hills to 18, Grange Terrace, Pelton Fell, S.O., Co., Durham, writes Mr. W. Forster, sec. of the Pelton Fell and Dis. C.B.S.

At time of writing not a singlo eutry has been received for Llanrwst Show, writes the sec., Mr. J. Kershaw, A.R.S.I.; entries will be accepted bearing Saturday's postmark.

Mr. A. C. Brotherhood (Salop) has, we learn, beeu engaged to judge the cage bird section of the Manx Canine, etc., Association's Show, to be held at Douglas on Boxing Day.

Schedules are now ready for our open show at Pelton Fell on Dec. 23, writes Mr. Wm. Forster, the sec. Artistic prize cards, quite seasonable for the time of year, will be used.

Allow me to thank you for the splendid report given of our show in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. Duncan Grant, hon. sec. of the Lochore and Glencraig C.B.S.

At a meeting held on Dec. 2 it was decided, writes Mr. Geo. Havver, sec. of the Blaydon-on-Tyne C.B.S., to pay members' prize-money in full, and to hold another annual show next year.

Alnwick Cage Bird Society.—Winning numbers of draw: 1063, 375, 388, 1170, 1140, 1423, 384, 987, 206, 1335, 1096, 783, 79, 1962, 243, 1417, 925, 1719, 607, 1156.—R. Forster, hon. sec. —Advt.

Many thanks for the grand report of our annual show in CAGE BIRDS. All our members are delighted with it. We wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—Thos. Smith, hon. secretary of Ilkeston C.B.S.

I was very pleased to see that the Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid had been produced, writes Mr. W. Jeffrey (Edinburgh). I was sure it would come, and Miss Reeves is to be congratulated on her success.

We are asked to request the British and foreign bird exhibitors who have received letters from Mr. J. M. Walsh not to forget the Blackburn Show on Dec. 15 and 16. All birds will have every attention and care.

Allow me to express my pleasure at receiving the prettiest plate ever issued by CAGE BIRDS—the one presented with "C.B." of Dec. 2. It is a treat both for gardeners and bird fanciers alike.—F. Purser (Leicester).

We regret to note that the name of the winner of 1st, 3rd, and special prizes in the Crest-bred cock class at Dundee Show was omitted in our report; Mr. R. Whitton (of Broughty Ferry) secured these honours.

Exhibitors should not overlook our Blackburn Show on Dec. 15 and 16, with its grand classification (sixty classes), writes Mr. J. Cook, sec., excellent prize money, and specials for every class, including cups, rose bowls, medals, etc. We have good novice classes, too.

We have been notified of the following corrections to show reports:—Windsor, 1st in the Buff Yorks. hens, Mr. J. A. Taylor (not Bousfield); Great Harwood, 2nd in Yorks Yell. and Buff hen classes, and 1st in Buffs, Mr. C. Morrison (not Harrisou); Newark, in class for exhibitors who had not won at previous shows, Mr. Padgett (not Mr. W. Lidgett); Holywood introduction, Mr. J. Patty, jun., winner of 1st and spl, 2 cups, and gold medal, also 2 seconds; Windsor, 1st in Novice Nor. hens, Mr. A. L. Hawkes (not Jones).

Will members who are competing for the Society Cup, the Ure Cup, and specials please note that full points will count only in classes with six entries or over, writes Mr. W. McLaren, sec. of the Broxburn and Dis. C.B.S. In classes with five entries or under, points will be reduced according to number of entries.

We are holding a table show of British birds at our meeting on Dec. 13, classification as follows, writes Mr. James Sloan, sec., Ayr and Dis. C.B.C.:—Goldfinch or Bullfinch; Linnet, Siskin, Redpoll, or Twite; and Any Other Species British. Mr. Kelly has kindly consented to judge, and I trust members will give him a good entry.

The Edmonton F.A. are holding their eighth annual show of cage birds, etc. (for members only) at the Town Hall, Lower Edmonton, on Dec. 14, when it is hoped there will be a good attendance of fanciers and friends. The show opens at two o'clock, and there is likely to be a capital display of cage birds in the twenty-one classes provided.

All birds must be staged before eight o'clock on Dec. 14 at our table show, writes Mr. W. Richinson, sec., Attercliffe and Dis. C.B.S. All prize-money and specials due will he distrihuted along with the points specials at same meeting. Contributions and ticket moneys are due on that night, and we shall also elect officers for the ensuing year.

The meeting arranged for Dec. 6 is unavoidably postponed till Dec. 13, when I hope all members will attend and "cash up" for tickets and anything else they may have, writes Mr. G. E. Wilkinson, hon. sec. of the Nottingham and Notts O.S. If not able to attend, please send particulars and cash to me by post by end of this week and oblige.

OBITUARY.

It is with the deepest regret that I have to inform you of the death late on Saturday night of Mrs. Jeff Walsh, wife of our esteemed member, writes Mr. J. Cook, sec. of the Blackburn and Dis. C.B.S. It is all the more painful owing to its suddenness, as only so late as Tuesday last she gave us a piece of black silk to be won at our coming show, and was apparently then in her usual good health. Being of a quiet and unassuming nature, she won the esteem of all who knew her. Our sympathy goes out to Mr. Walsh and his family, who have lost a good wife and mother.

I am pleased to say that entries for the open show of the Sheffield C.B.S. are 100 in advance of last year, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, the assist. sec.

On account of our open show date being close to the Coventry O.S. open show date, we have decided to alter ours to Nov. 30, 1912, writes Mr. R. Symonds, hon. sec., Coventry Godiva C.B.S.

No one was more proud than "your humble" when, on getting my CAGE BIRDS on Friday last, I saw my 1st prize Yorkshire depicted amongst the wiuners at the L.C.B.A. Show I must say I owe most of my success to your splendid paper, which I always look forward to every week I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.—E T. Bush (Tottenham).

Owing to an error in the Frome Show schedule the Hybrid class was omitted, write Messrs. King and Yeo, the secs. Our Mule aud Hyhrid classes should read: "Class 30, Mule, clear, ticked, or lightly variegated," "Class 31, Mule, heavily variegated," "Class 32, Dark Mule, any variety except Canary-Bullfinch," "Class 32a, Hyhrid, any variety, including Canary-Bullfinch."

Mr. B. C. Smith, show manager and reporter to the East Ham C.B.S., writes: We are holding a general meeting on Dec. 14 at headquarters for the distribution of cups, prize money, diplomas, etc., gained by members at the annual show, at which Mr. H. Norman judged. The society also take this opportunity of thanking the Fancy Press and all other interested fanciers for the support given them throughout the year. Mr. J. H. Priestman, the popular secretary of Ilford F. and F.S., and Mr. C. Gibbs have been appointed auditors. Mr. F. Fox, the secretary, will be pleased to receive from members any outstanding ticket money, etc., as the books will shortly close for the year.

I must congratulate you upon the grand report of the L.C.B.A. Great Show, writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg, hon. sec. Mid-Rhondda and Dis. C.B.S. I found one thing standing out very clearly, and that was that you gave the report without fear or favour. Novice bird fanciers thinking of exhibiting should read the reports in CAGE BIRDS and see how the birds are spoken of. They will then know what is wanted for the show bench. The Coloured Plate that accompanied the issue was really very beautiful. Birds and flowers appeal to me very much, and both looked very fine here. I heartily congratulate Mr. H. Norman upon this, and I am not afraid to say that Mr. Norman is the very best bird artist in the Fancy.

Bradford National Show.

The entries for the above show have reached the magnificent total of 1,112 in all sections, which looks very encouragiug indeed, writes Mr. H. Hill, the sec.

CAGE BIRDS. 154. Fleet Street. London, E.C.

In your report of Epsom Show my bird, which was first and winner of cup for best bird, was credited with being the first unflighted at the Horticultural Hall, but in justice to the owner of that bird, I am writing to say my bird was not at that show, but was first at Wimbledon (unflighted Buff), the week before, writes Mr. G. W. Saunders (Sutton).

The principal feature of the December number of the "Avicultural Magazine" is an interesting series of "Notes on Some Fijian Birds in Captivity," by Mr. Philip H. Barr, M.A. The article is embellished hy a heautiful coloured drawing of the Fijian Parrot Finch by Mr. Goodchild, and contains a full account of the catching, importation, and suhsequent keeping of twenty-one examples of the species. Other articles include "A Red Tanager," by Miss K. Curry, "Notes on the British and Foreign Classes at the L.C.B.A. Show," by Mr. Bonhote, "The Keeping of Quails in Captivity," by Mr. Seth Smith.

Stormy Petrel at Brighton.

A Stormy Petrel was caught inland near here on Nov. 27, writes Mr. Walter Swaysland (Brighton).

Another Record at Gateshead.

"A record show, over 1,500 entries," telegraphs Mr. Holden, the Gateshead secretary, just as we go to press. We hope there may be record crowds of visitors to see this grand collection of birds.

A Flightless Bird.

The Penguins are closely related to the Great Auk, a now extinct bird. The Penguins have long bodies and short wings, and are therefore flightless. Their plumage is not, as in other birds, in tracts, but covers the whole body; it consists of small scalelike feathers. They inhabit desolate islands in the Antarctic regions, and havo been found as far south as navigators have penetrated.

Get your Money, please!

Will winners at Lowestoft F.S. Show get their cheques cashed without further delay, writes Mr. E. L. A. Crow, the sec, as I am wanting to get the show business settled up? I do not know if there is anything peculiar or interesting about our cheques, but I notice some of our friends are inclined to hang on to them a very long time before producing them at the bank for payment. I hope this gentle reminder will have the desired effect.

Lending a Helping Hand.

I regret to say that financially our show was a failure, writes Mr. H. Davidson, sec. of Lockerbie C.B.A.; hut through the kindness of a few local fanciers and others returniug a certain amount of their prize-money, we hope to be able to settle the few remaining accounts and trust at least to be able to start clear for next show. Next year we will close earlier at night to allow fanciers to get trains to suit themselves, and we trust that any inconvenience caused through our rules will he rectified another year. We pride ourselves upon adhering to our rules.

Brown Paper and String!

At Pentrebach Show all exhibits were handed to the railway company hefore nine o'clock the same evening, writes Mr. A. E. Brown, the sec. I may say that this was partly due to the good and willing stewards. On Dec. 2 I sent out all prize money. As I am secretary to the Welsh Cage Bird Club, I must say it was very gratifying to me to see such a number of the members put in an appearance at our show. The members of the society have all expressed their delight at the presence of our President (Mrs. R. F. Hankey). I should like to draw attention to a numher of exhibitors who sent their birds to our show packed in brown paper, and also without water tins, as I think that travelling cases and water tins are within the reach of all.

A Quick Clearance.

At Backworth Show, writes Mr. H. Elliott, the assist. sec., the room was emptied of spectators at 5 p.m., and those who had come for their birds were told at the door that if they would oblige us by staying outside we would soon have the birds unpenned and packed. We were told we would be all night (there were some 800 entries)! However, we have a committee of about twelve, and each memher brought an exhibitor into the hall, had his birds packed, and saw him outside. Afterwards we packed the remaining birds, and finished at 6.10 p.m., being one hour and ten minutes packing 800 birds! Further, all the pens were taken down and packed, the benches taken down and outside, and the floor all swept and ready to commence a dance at 7.15. It took us but two hours and fifteen minutes to completely clear the hall! Surely this is satisfactory, and shows what can be done at Backworth.

Kindly thank all who replied to my advt. in "Cage Birds." I had replies from all parts, and could answer only those who sent a stamp.—Geo. Street (Crouch End, N.).

I had a host of answers to my advt. in "Cage Birds," but no one sent a stamp for reply, so I could not afford to reply to all.—H. C. Ainge (Melton Mowbray).

Kindly thank all who wrote to me for birds which I advertised in "Cage Birds" of November 25th. I could not write to all of them. I wish "Cage Birds" every success.—C. Pearce (Par Station).

This week I am shipping some valuable Canaries to Montreal, Canada, per s.s. "Hesperian." Also some to Liege, Belgium. These orders through my advt. in "Cage Birds," writes Mr. J. Taylor, the well-known dealer, of Frizinghall, Bradford.

Wire Holders for Bird Bottles.

Sent by Mr. H. Renouf, 11, Beresford St., S. Helier, Jersey.

These may easily be made at home in the following manner:—Procure a small, hard wood board about one inch thick; drive in six nails in position as shown in diagram. Nip off the heads, leaving about ¼in. of nail above the board. Then cut lengths of wire (16 or 18g.) 10½in. for ordinary bottles, and bend each end around the nails, starting at X, as shown by the dotted line. This done, finish off by shaping for round or square bottle, whichever you have in use. These holders may be used inside as well as out. The illustration shows the actual position of nails.—H. Renouf.

No. 554.

Fixing Perches in Box Cages.

Sent by Mr. H. White, Buxton, Derbyshire.

Take a piece of stiff wire; bend it round sides of perch; then pierce the back of cage and place the two ends of wire through. Bend these over at the back of cage, allowing about ½in. to hang over the inside of cage; this is to rest perch on. I think this will prove handy for removing perches for cleaning.—H. White.

Best Bird at Uddingston.

We regret that our report of Uddingston Show omitted to mention that the grand variegated yellow cock which secured first and special for Mr. G. E. McLaggan also won the special for best bird in the hall.

In Canada.

We note that the National Cage Bird Society of Toronto (Canada), at the annual show being held this week-end (Dec. 8 and 9) offer a remarkably comprehensive classification. There are no fewer than ninety-eight classes, and practically all varieties of Canaries are well catered for, while Mules, certain British birds (Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, and Redpoll), and Parrots and Parrakeets find places in the schedule.

Support Wanted at Market Weighton

I have persuaded our committee to try four open cage bird classes and cancel the members' classes, writes Mr. D. Consitt, sec., Market Weighton F.S., allowing the members to exhibit at reduced fees. The prize money will be 8s., 4s., 2s., 1s., for 1s. entry fee. The exhibits will be in capable cage bird fanciers' hands, and all prize-money will be paid in three days. We shall advertise full classification with you on Dec. 15, and I trust fanciers will help me all they can.

A Youthful "Old-timer."

At Derby Show, writes our representative, I had the pleasuro of meetiug that well-known and highly esteemed old-time judge, Mr. Jos. Bexson. I am extremely pleased to say that good health prevails with him. Laughs and jokes were much in evidence; "Jovial Joe" delights in such, and can still "crack 'em" with the best. He was keenly scrutinising the various exhibits, bobbing about in his well-nigh inimitable style, and exclaiming to whoever approached, "Ah! grand bird! grand bird!" in the old-time familiar manner.

Wagon-loads of Canaries.

A subdued chirping emanated from a hundred wooden boxes which porters were handling with care at the Halifax Old Station on Nov. 29, says the "Manchester Dispatch," the proceedings causing a large crowd of spectators to gather. A colossal consignment of Canaries to the United States, over two thousand of the tiny birds, of many varieties, including Yorkshires, Norwich, and Border Fancies, not forgetting Lizards and Lancashires, was being got away. Mr. Joe Thomas, of Ambler Thorn, was the consignee. In each of the hundred wooden cages an average of twenty birds was housed. Altogether they occupied four luggage trucks, and attached to the 11.30 train for Liverpool left to join the "Baltic" for their long trip. Mr. Thomas is going to America with the birds, and expects to be kept busy feeding them. Mr. Thomas has already forwarded consignments of Canaries to New Zealand, Canada, India, South Africa, France, and Belgium, but this is by far his biggest exportation.

A Londoner and His Norwich Plainhead Canaries.

By T. D. Jackson (West Green).

I do not use any heat in my bird-room; neither do I think it necessary, especially where good roomy cages are used. My own cages are of the two-compartment pattern, these being, in my opinion, a lot better than the single breeders, for they have all the advantages of single breeding cages, whereas the latter does not possess half the advantages of the two-compartment breeder. One advantage is that there is no need to put one's hand inside the cage to separate the birds when that is found to be necessary, as is the case with the single breeder. Again, about the time the young birds are leaving the nest the back of the cage where the nest has hung, often becomes very fouled with their droppings; that dirt should be all cleaned away before the hen is allowed to go to nest again; now, all that would be necessary with a two-compartment cage would be to insert the sliding partition, keeping the birds, old and young, in the one compartment, while the other was being scraped, etc., without flurrying the birds unnecessarily.

The lower part of my own partitions is wired to enable the birds to feed each other; also to enable the old birds to feed the young ones when it has been found necessary to part them, but I have also a smaller slide that covers the wired part and makes it a blank partition. Whatever cage you favour, allow the birds plenty of room.

Getting the Birds Ready.

Towards the end of February you can start in real earnest to get the birds into breeding condition, having, of course, previously got the room, cages, utensils, etc., thoroughly clean and in order. If the birds have been flying together in flights, they should now be separated and placed in their respective cages with the blank slide between them. They should now have a little egg-food each, with a little maw seed and rape, also a little niger seed; the niger for the hens especially, as it has a tendency to prevent egg binding. I continue this treatment until I pair the birds up, which I do generally about the third week in March, provided they are in full breeding condition. I satisfy myself on that point by blowing up the feathers at the vent. If the vent of the cock is very prominent then I know the bird is in breeding condition. The mere fact of a cock singing is no criterion of its being in breeding condition. The action of a hen is generally very reliable; she becomes very restless, hopping from perch to perch, flapping her wings and calling to the cock continually; and if the feathers at the vent are blown up, it will be seen that the vent is very full and extended. When the birds are like that you may rest assured they are ready to be paired up.

Covering the Cage Floors.

With regard to the covering for the cage bottoms, I much prefer saw-dust to sand. Pitch pine saw-dust has a tendency to keep down the red-mite; it also gives off a very pleasant odour, and absorbs the birds' droppings quickly; and in addition there is not that rasping sound when the scraper is used for cleaning purposes that there is when sand is spread on the cage bottom; when, too, a young bird is dragged out of the nest, as sometimes happens, it will live much longer when lying on sawdust than when lying on sand. Of course, grit is necessary, and I give it in small tins which I hang on the middle cross-bar of the cage front. In that position the grit does not become fouled, as is the case when placed on the cage floor.

About four days before I allow the birds to fly together I remove the small slide previously mentioned; they are then able to feed, and become acquainted with each other, which reduces to a minimum any chances of their quarrelling when they are allowed to fly together.

When they have been together for about a week the nest-pan and a little building material may be given them; if the latter is given before, it only gets strewn about the cage and wasted. Occasionally you may have a hen that evinces a desire to build her nest anywhere but where you want her to; their favourite place is generally on the cage bottom in front of the seed box. Such a hen, usually a young one, must, of course, be humoured, for it is useless your trying to make a hen build where she does not want to. In such cases I make a nest box, or, I should say, four sides of a box, for I do not put a bottom on it; on the top edge I tack a piece of cloth so that the hen can build in it. In each of the four bottom corners I drive a nail to raise the box about half inch from the cage floor; this allows a current of air to pass under the nest.

As the hen lays her eggs they should be removed and placed in a partitioned box, the compartments of which should be numbered to correspond with the numbers that should be on the cages. On the evening when the third egg is laid they should be returned to the nest; then if they are fertile they should hatch in about fourteen days. After the first few days of incubation the hen may have the bath, especially if the weather is at all dry.

While the hen is sitting I give plain canary seed only, with a little egg food once a week. On the evening before the young are due to hatch I give a little egg food, German rape and hemp, increasing the quantity as the young birds get older.

I might say that if the cock is docile and behaves himself I always allow him to remain with the hen, for if he will feed the young ones it will be of great benefit to them, as the future of a young bird depends greatly upon the feeding it gets during the first three weeks of its existence. For green food there is nothing I like better than seedling rape, or chickweed. Watercress is undoubtedly very good when one can rely upon getting it fresh and from proper watercress beds, which is not always the case, at least, that is my experience.

When the Hen Plucks the Young.

If all goes well, and the youngsters are being fed alright, they will be leaving the nest when about three weeks old, when a sharp look-out must be kept in case the hen plucks them; should she do so they must be separated by means of the wire partition, when the old birds will continue to feed them. But do not have a perch running along-side the partition, or the hen will still be able to pluck them. If the wire partition is about 2½ inches from the cage floor it will be quite low enough to enable the youngsters to be fed, but the hen will be unable to pluck them.

When the youngsters begin to get about they should have a little egg food, a little soaked German rape and a little cracked hemp seed (not crushed, as it turns rancid too quickly). These I give in small deep china pots. By so doing they are not so easily thrown about the cage. At this time the cage bottom must be kept scrupulously clean; the dirt should be scraped out each evening to avoid the young birds picking up any stale food. At this period, too, a little milk sop is very good for the young birds, say about twice a week, in fact it is very good at all times where birds are a little ran down in condition. There is no need to give the egg-food on the days when you give the sop. When the young birds are easily able to remove the husks from the canary seed (which they will do when about six weeks old) the egg food should be gradually reduced, both in quantity and quality; also the hemp and rape. When the youngsters are well on seed they should be transferred to as large a flight as you can give them, for if there is the making of big birds in them, the exercise they will get in such flight cage will bring it out.

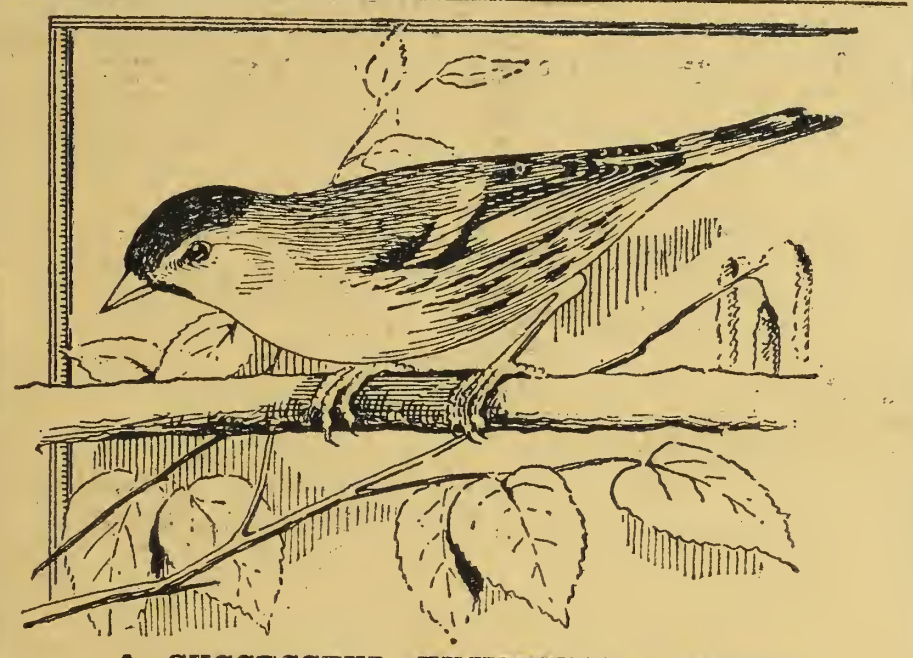
My Three Favourite Finches.



By L. GIBBS (Edmonton).

The Goldfinch.

The Goldfinch is one of our most beautiful birds. Perhaps most fanciers would put this Finch first of all our Finches on account of its song and its usefulness to hybrid breeders. Let us have a look first of all at his natural life. Like the Linnet, the Goldfinch is to be found on waste lands, especially where thistles abound. He is very wary, so if you would see him busily opening the thistle-heads you must be quiet, and quietness is all that is required.

About the beginning of May breeding operations are commenced. The nest is usually placed on the branch of an elm tree, or an apple- or pear-tree. The nest is as well made as the Chaffinch's, and is composed of moss and roots, thickly lined with the down of the thistle and a few hairs. Four or five eggs are laid of a very pale green colour, spotted with purple and brown markings.

A SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITION SISKIN.

Winner of many prizes, including 1st at the Horticultural Hall, for Mr. H. W. Casemore (Canterbury).

In the Greypate State.

The young birds are called Greypates until their first muult, when they attain their adult plumage. Both cocks and hens are very much alike dressed in their first suit, but the cock birds are usually the larger and bolder looking birds. The colour of a Greypate is greyish brown on the head and back, the wing and tail feathers being of a darker hue, with yellow bars about the centre of the wings as in the case of adult Goldies. As soon as they have moulted their nestling plumage they look practically different birds; their backs assume a beautiful chestnut colour and they have a jet black cap; a beautiful red face also appears, called the blaze. The yellow wing marking is all that remains to show that they are still the same Goldies.

Cock birds are easily distinguished from the hens by the blaze, which should come well back behind the eyes and form practically a right angle on the side of the face. They have a fiercer look than hens, and are altogether superior in colour and carriage.

Now for a peep into the Goldie's domestic life. A Greypate, or first yearling, is the best to procure, as the older ones are usually very sulky or wild. Put him into a cage about twelve inches long by 6ins. wide and 9ins. high; he will not then be able to dash about. His food must be soaked seeds and plenty of thistle heads, docks, etc.

Give the Goldie plenty of wild seeds and a little canary seed until he becomes accustomed to his new home. When he settles down a bit his food may be changed slightly, but not too suddenly. As a stock mixture give the following: Equal parts of teazel and linseed with just a sprinkling of canary. Give a small teaspoonful of hemp seed daily and a couple of thistle heads and plaintain stalks.

The bird should have a daily feed of wild seeds, also a fruit maggot occasionally, which greatly helps to keep his plumage in condition. A little greenstuff, such as watercress, seeding chickweed or groundsel should be given daily; and a bath once a week on bright days should keep him in sound condition. If he gets a little out of sorts, increase the thistle, etc., and he will invariably come right. If the bird should be an old one he will take much more steadying, and a too sudden change of diet will affect him more than it will a young one.

Follow out the above, and not many Goldies should go under. On the contrary they should live long to cheer us with their song. Give plenty of sand on the cage bottom and supply clean water every morning. In winter when green food is scarce a little ripe apple or banana can be substituted, but be careful not to give too much, or diarrhœa will set in. In the event of your bird getting diarrhœa keep him warm, and feed him on egg and bread, to which a little powdered chalk has been added.

The Bullfinch.

The Bullfinch is the most docile of all our native Finches. Almost tropical in colour I wonder he has escaped the eyes of his captors so long. He does not belong to the general run of Finches, as his food and general appearance are unlike those of any of our other Finches. Take, for instance, his beak, and compare it with that of the Goldfinch. It is as different as chalk is from cheese. While the other Finches, too, exist chiefly on wild seeds, the Bullfinch finds his daily bread in all kinds of berries and fruit, and in the buds of trees. I do not say that the Bullie does not eat seeds, for any one who has kept one will know his fondness for hemp seed.

Taking a look at his wild life we find he is not a bird of the hedgerows. If you would see him in his sylvan haunts look in the thickest of woods where there are plenty of blackthorn or sloe bushes. About the beginning of May it commences to build, usually choosing a blackthorn bush. The nest is built upon a platform of sticks, and is composed of moss and roots, lined with hair and wool. Four or five eggs are laid of a bluish ground colour and spotted at the larger end with dark spots. The young are fed upon the buds of the whitethorn, blackthorn, etc, and receive a goodly number of insects.

Handrearing Bullies.

With regard to the cage life of Mr. Bullie; although many people prefer Siberian birds to ours on account of their size, I like the Britishers best. These, if taken young and hand-reared, are much tamer than Siberian birds. Just a word or two about handrearing, so that you may try it yourselves. The birds should be fed with a quill every two hours on the following: The yolk of an egg boiled for ten minutes and mixed with three Osborne biscuits; keep this dry, or it will turn sour. Boil a piece of bread in half milk and half water with just a little sugar to taste. Mix just enough of this with the egg and biscuit for one feed, and make it fresh every day. As soon as the young begin to pick up for themselves give a little crushed hemp, rape and canary seed for them to pick at. When a Bullie can be got to feed itself a more docile pet cannot be found.

If you wish your Bullies to be pipers, a little training will be necessary, as they have no natural song of their own. As soon as they begin to pick up, procure a tin whistle, and begin by playing the first few notes of the tune they are to learn. As soon as they acquire the first few notes, play some more; and so on. Patience and perseverance are required for this, but you will be well rewarded if you have a little of each. Some very fine pipers are imported every year from Germany, birds that have been trained by organs, but they command rather high prices.

Sexing and Feeding.

The cocks are easily distinguished from the hens by the colour; they have crimson breasts and jet black caps. Hens lack the breast-colouring, being more of a slaty chocolate colour. The hens are in as great demand as the cocks, for it is with these that in nearly all cases Bullfinch hybrids are produced. The cock birds seem not able freely to fertilise the eggs, which is why I think they are not true Finches. Should a fancier succeed in getting eggs from his Bullfinch hen they should be placed under a sitting Canary, as the Bullfinch will not rear its young in confinement.

As I have said, Bullies require a different kind of food to that of our other Finches, and in confinement should be fed thus: As a stock mixture, give the following: Canary 3 parts, teazel 3 parts, rape and linseed 1 part each, and a little hemp, maw, niger, thistle and dandelion seed occasionally as tit-bits. Buds of fruit trees, whitethorn, etc., in the spring, and all kinds of fruit and berries when in season, such as rowan or ash, privet and blackberries. I like blackberries on account of the coloured juice they contain; this greatly helps the breast colour.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mule and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Price of Crests.

Chough.—(1) Am afraid your ideas of the value of high-class Crests likely to produce exhibition birds are rather too moderate. A really good exhibition Crest will readily fetch anything from, say, £10 up to £25. Is it likely you will get a pair which the breeder knows is likely to produce such birds for £2 or £3 the pair? It is, of course, quite possible to get nice moderate Crests at the price you name, which may get "in the cards" at local events, or which may be built up in a few years into a fairly good strain, but to take a place amongst high-class birds at once you will probably have to treble your proposed purchase price. Start with birds at the price you name, if you must do so, but be prepared to breed up for a few years before exhibiting, and to do this you cannot do better than provide yourself with "Our Canaries." Many of the best Crests are very poor feeders, so you should keep a few good feeding pairs on hand to take over the hatching and feeding of the young Crests when necessary. (2) Unless you have very good reason to believe the deformity of this hen's feet was inherited, there is no reason why you should not breed with her. Personally, I don't believe it was inherited. Give perches varying from the ordinary size down to the thickness of a lead pencil. This will keep all the muscles in play, and the feet will get quite strong.

Roller Out of Condition.

M. K. B.—Age has probably something to do with the bird's condition. If the cage hangs near the glass of window by all means move it to a bright position within the room, as it is almost impossible to avoid draughts and extremes of heat and cold in such a position. Also look closely at its eyes to see if either has a milky iris. If this is so the bird is blind with cataract on that side, and this would largely account for its peculiar carriage of the head. Treat generally as follows for a month: Staple diet, a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a week give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with equal parts of maw and gold of pleasure seed. On the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and teazle, and a morsel of banana. After the first week give the sponge cake twice a week only, the mixed seed on two other days, and a morsel of banana, apple, or green stuff on each remaining day. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and in the next week four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. You might also bathe the feet and legs for a few minutes in very warm water, and gently remove any coarse scale that becomes quite loose in the bathing.

Best Food for Hen (W. J. L.).—Unquestionably a good real Sib-bred hen is the very best with which to try for a light Mule. That is, a hen which has been bred in-and-in for a number of generations—the more the better in a general way—until practically all trace of the green blood has disappeared. If there is a dash of cinnamon blood in the strain, so much the better. A large bird of the Norwich or Yorkshire type is preferable, but as a rule such birds run rather small. Genuine Sib-bred hens of this description are not very easy to get hold of. You next ask if it is "possible" to mate a hen Goldfinch with a cock Canary, and say you "have known it to be done." Surely this puts the "possibility" quite beyond question. I see no reason why such a pair should not mate in a breeding cage by selecting a suitable hen in high breeding condition, and preferably a hand-reared one, but it would be advisable to remove the eggs and place them under a hen Canary to hatch and rear, instead of trusting the Finch with this part of the programme.

That Milky Spot (G. H. O.).—I am sorry to tell you that the bird's condition is absolutely hopeless. That small white spot in the centre of each eye is the hall-mark of cataract, and the bird is in consequence hopelessly blind. Nothing you can do will be of any avail. Of course, the bird may be perfectly healthy in a general way, and will find its way about, and its food and water, quite readily. Indeed, many such afflicted birds quickly become exceedingly clever in finding their way about and taking care of Number One.

Canaries in Aviary (Hudson).—It depends upon the size and position—whether in or out of doors—whether it would be well to put in two or three hens to one cock. I presume you mean with an object of breeding. Unless the aviary is really of large size you must not expect much success in breeding in a mixed collection of Canaries, British and Foreign birds. Without plenty of elbow room, and a fair amount of cover to ensure privacy of nesting sites, the most usual result is to make a hash of things generally. See Part III. of "Our Canaries" for information on breeding in aviaries.

Seeds and Song (F. H. C.).—(1) I see nothing at all wrong with the seeds sent to suggest they might be the cause of death of the bird. They are all small and of second-rate quality, but still quite sweet and sound, and I should say perfectly safe for feeding birds upon. The mixture also is not bad, though it precludes the birds having any wholesome change. For this reason I never advise these elaborate mixtures as a general diet. The bird probably died from general congestion, though only a post-mortem could have revealed the fact with any certainty. (2) Treat the Norwich cock the same as advised to "No Nom-de-plume," for two or three weeks, when he will probably open out better.

Shaking Body (Doubtful).—You should first make yourself sure that you are feeding correctly, and that all your foods are sweet and sound. To do this, look through these replies in previous issues, or get the Nutshell booklet on "The Canary." Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence to the drinking water every second day for a week, and in the second week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

Moisture from Beak (Hock).—I suspect this bird is kept in a cold damp position and probably also exposed to great fluctuations of temperature. You must first of all remove all such causes and keep the bird in a comfortable and equable place, not necessarily very warm. Keep cage and perches as clean as possible, and feed the bird for a month the same as advised to "M.K.B." Also give the same aperient as advised in reply referred to daily for three days, and afterwards add to the water six drops each of tincture of gentian and dilute sulphuric acid, and three of tincture of opium, every second day for a week.

Norwich Coughing (No Nom-de-plume).—Here, again, the draught fiend has been at work. Treatment without removal of causes is perfectly useless, therefore your first step must be to see that the bird is kept in a comfortable place, as equable as possible, though not necessarily very warm, and quite free from cold draughts, or the fumes of burning lights. Having done this, give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and otherwise feed for a month the same as advised to "M.K.B." In the drinking water give also the same aperient for two consecutive days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight if necessary. You may, of course, drop it earlier if bird is quite well.

Torn Mandible (H. G. H.).—Yes, you are doing quite right to feed on soft food the bird which has torn its mandible so that it cannot crack seed. As a staple give crumbs of stale household bread and sponge cake, and as soon as the mandible gains a little strength, add first a little soaked rape, wiped dry, and prepared fresh daily, then a little crushed dry biscuit, and this, with a little egg food occasionally, will keep it going very well until it can again crack seed. Whether the mandible will quite recover depends solely upon the extent and position of the damage. If the bird can now feed on soft food, I should say it has a very good chance of recovery.

Right Class (Novice).—I have no schedule of the show in question by me, and am therefore assuming that you give the correct wording of Classes 1 and 2, and that there was no other class that included even-marked Norwich. In this case the first prize bird in Class 10 was certainly in its proper class. The bird you describe was an even-marked Norwich, and what is termed a four-pointed bird. Being even-marked it was not eligible to compete in a class for "clear ticked, or variegated" birds, unless the schedule made it clear that even-marked birds were included. See Part XIV. of "Our Canaries," for definition of markings.

Drowsy, and Shelling Seed (R. Traill).—Put all the birds that are shelling the seed (I presume, by the way, that they do so and leave the kernel) on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape, as a staple. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, or its equivalent in bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and about a quarter teaspoonful of maw. On the alternating days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and teazel, and a morsel of banana or watercress. In the drinking water give six drops syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts every second day for a week, as will cover a sixpence. In the following week give four drops each tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. At the end of the fortnight you may return to ordinary treatment, but omit all linseed. Treat the hen the same as above, except that in the second week, instead of the above tonic, dissolve a dram of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine; and give 20 drops of this in the water every second day. The seed sent is perfectly sound and good.

Two Rollers (W. W.).—(1) I rather suspect the supposed young cock will turn out a "wrong 'un." If he does not open out in another six weeks at latest, my advice is to put him "among the girls." Give a staple diet of two parts canary to one part rape. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of egg-food, or sponge cake crumbs, sprinkled with equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazel. Feed thus for two or three weeks. (2) Keep the hen in a cosy temperature, but do not overheat her. See she is quite free from draughts, damp, or great fluctuations of temperature, and see she is free from insect pests. Give same staple as above. For a fortnight give a small teaspoonful of sponge cake lightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw; and on the alternate days add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece, and give a pinch of the mixed seed as above. At the end of the fortnight stop the above, and if feathers have ceased dropping, give the tonic advised to "R. Traill."

Converting Cupboard into Cages (L. G. S.).—You give no measurements either of room or cupboard, so I am somewhat at a loss. As regards the damp, see reply to "New Beginner" last week, which applies in the main to your case. Any success you may meet with at the beginning will prove but transient so long as the room is badly affected by damp; hence the need for getting rid of it at the start. As a wall covering, Hall's Distemper is far better than paper. If the room gets overheated in summer it should be an easy matter to increase the ventilation sufficient to cope with passing needs, but much depends upon the size and structure, of which I know nothing. I do not quite like your idea of utilising the cupboard. Suppose you do as you suggest, and put wire doors on the cupboard, how are you going to gain access to each compartment separately for cleaning, etc.? A much better plan is to remove the wood doors and to utilise the shelves to hold single or double-breeding cages, the same as you would use a cage rack.

CANARY QUERISTS.

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy." BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

A Question of Song (Goldie).—Siberian and Russian Goldfinches most certainly sing, many of them quite as well, if not better (louder, at any rate) than English Goldies. Possibly the bird you have is a hen.

Identity of Bird (M.A.B.).—The portions of plumage you send me once adorned the body of a Snow Bunting—a hen, I should think. This species is very common this winter; like the Mealy Redpoll was last winter.

A Mealworm Matter (T.P.).—You can begin to utilise the box as soon as the worms grow to a suitable size. Don't deplete the stock too much; if you do, put a few more worms into the box next spring. Keep it in a warm place; not a cold room.

Colours for Show Cages (Cambria).—The outsides in all cases should be black. The regulation tint for Norwich is "Hedge Sparrow blue"; personally I prefer a slightly warmer tint, and for Cinnamons a sky blue. The wires should be black for all kinds of Canaries. Goldfinch and Linnet, inside and wires a very dark sage green; some exhibitors like to use sky-blue for Linnets, but personally I think the green decidedly the best.

An Aviary Question (W. Watson).—Kindly note the reply to "Novice" this week, the opening remarks in which apply equally to your own case. It is impossible to really help you in so large a matter in these query columns. Shall be pleased to advise upon any particular points you may wish to raise.

A Seed Sample (W. W. Goldfinches).—I do not see anything in the seed you send that could account for the death of your Goldfinches. As a matter of fact, I have a high opinion of this particular packet mixture, and not infrequently buy it myself for use as a change. I should not think of giving it regularly to newly-caught Goldies, however; these need different treatment, and you will be well advised to stick to the procedure outlined in the "Nutshell" booklet.

Knapweed Seed (Cobweb).—I don't quite understand your letter. What were you under the impression the seed of the knapweed resembled? The sample of seed is the seed of the knapweed (or hardhead) right enough, and a very good sample, too. No wonder your Goldies like it. I wish I had a pound or two of it in my own bird-room. The knapweed may be described as a kind of "small thistle"; it is closely related to the thistles, according to the classification of plants.

The Case of a Chaffinch (L.D.).—Follow the advice given in the latter part of the answer to "E.R.C." this week. Old age very likely has something to do with the trouble. Your menu does not seem to be a very varied one. It is like a human being living on bread and cheese year in year out! Surely you vary it now and again; also give a little green food?

To Breed or Not to Breed (Hudson).—I can't say, of course, whether your particular Siberian Goldie will be "fit for breeding next season"—he may, for instance, have left this "vale of tears" (and unfertile eggs)—but I can say this, that there is no reason why a black-legged (i.e., not house-moulted) Goldfinch should not breed Mules next summer. I have very frequently been successful with black-legged Finches, when steady and got into breeding condition.

A Quintette (Adventurer).—A very good nom-de-plume for a would-be Hybrid breeder. (1) A Twite-Canary is of value if very large and good in colour. Any of the following would be valuable Hybrids:—Twite-Bullie, Goldie, Siskin, or Greenfinch. The first-named has never been produced, but is certainly a possibility. (2) Let the cock Canary and hen Bullie run together until the spring. (3) I did not know that I advised mating cock Bullie to hen Canary, unless by way of experiment (I haven't the issue you mention handy when writing these lines), for the reverse method of mating is the one I favour and always adopt. It may be that the cock Bullie to hen Canary mating has been successful, but I cannot call to mind any really well-authenticated case. (4) I should think your prize-winning Siskin ought to make a fine bird for mating purposes. I would sooner mate him with a hen Goldie or Redpoll than a hen Linnet. Don't bother about "Canary-reared Linnets," anyway, they are the biggest frauds, as regards tameness and usefulness, in the whole of bird-dom. Which is saying things! (5) It is best to get a hen steady, or reasonably so, before trying to utilise her for breeding in a cage. I think the Chaffinch-Canary cross one of the best you could adventure upon.

A Hybrid Couple (Green-bull).—Mate a steady, lusty cock Greenfinch to a steady, healthy hen Bullfinch. Hen Bullies will usually make a bit of a nest, though they vary very much in this respect; many of them lay their eggs in the nest-box, but many drop them on the cage-floor. The latter should be very thickly covered with coarse-cut sawdust, or malt-culm, or other suitable material. The eggs should be removed as laid and put under hen Canaries. It is not by any means absolutely essential that the British birds should be house-moulted. You certainly ought to read a book dealing with hybrid-breeding; it would help you very much and be always useful for reference.

Skylark and Blackbird (E.R.C.).—I do not advise you to keep the Skylark. Give it its liberty. The growths and places you describe are due to organisms of septic origin, and are practically incurable. Disinfect the cage and perches well before introducing another bird into it. With regard to the Blackbird, wash the head and neck with warm water to which a little good disinfectant has been added (Izal or Jeyes'). Afterwards anoint the place every day with a little boracic ointment, rubbing gently the way the feathers should lie. This will soon restore the part to a normal state.

British Hardbills (Amateur).—Yours is a very tall query, and I should have to write a small book to answer it. I couldn't possibly give here the method of feeding every kind of British hardbill and how to treat them when fresh caught. Mr. Norman's "British Bird Manual" is the book you want; or the series of "Nutshell" booklets dealing with the various Finches. You will find all this valuable information therein. I certainly strongly advise you to cage up all the newly-caught birds for at least a fortnight before turning them into the aviary, and to see that the food and water vessels in the aviary are placed in an easily accessible, prominent position. The Buntings can certainly be kept with the other Finches, and make a pleasing variety.

The Yellowhammer's "Full Dress" (S.S.).—The Yellowhammer is certainly better in colour after its second moult; in fact, I have always found this bird improve even after that for a year or so. The three-year-old bird carries more yellow in its plumage, and is freer from dark markings on throat, cheeks, etc. Of course, the wild Yellowhammers have a winter and summer plumage, the former being much more dingy-looking than the latter, the feathers being edged with brown, which disappears in the spring, leaving exposed the golden yellow underneath. Young cocks resemble the hens until they moult; and the hens are very brownish in appearance at all times, showing very little yellow in their dress, though some old hens are good in this respect. You want to choose a very big bird, as good in colour as possible, and with a bold head, showing distinct (heavy) signs of the V-shaped crown marking and horse-shoe shaped cheek marks. Then put him on one side until you see how he looks after he has "cleared up" (as fanciers term it) in colour at the approach of the breeding season.

The Fasting of Owls (An Old Subscriber).—I have had no personal experience of the fasting of owls, but I have read that they will go without food for what seem long periods. Have you tried them with live mice? I should think they would prove irresistible to any sane-minded Tawny Owl. And the same remark applies in the case of live Sparrows. I should imagine that you will find the birds suddenly make up their minds to feast and be merry, and then have a regular gorge. The Tawny Owl, especially when hand-reared, evinces considerable affection towards its owner, but whether separation would induce suicidal tendencies, culminating in deliberate starvation, I must respectfully decline to discuss—the question, frankly speaking, is beyond me.

A Garden Aviary (Novice).—It really is not possible to describe the fitting up of an aviary in the brief space allowed for these answers. Special articles on the subject have been published by CAGE BIRDS, and a back number containing one could no doubt be obtained; while in Mr. Norman's book upon aviaries (published by CAGE BIRDS) the subject is exhaustively dealt with, and the fittings both illustrated and described. You could keep in the place either Canaries, British or Foreign birds, or a judicious mixture of the three kinds. If you put in hen Canaries (say 8 or 9) and two or three hen Bullfinches, with 18 to 20 cock British birds, you would have a nice collection, and as your place is spacious, ought to get a few Mules. You could put in 3 or 4 Goldfinches (British and Siberian), 3 or 4 Linnets, and make up the remainder from the small Finches (Redpolls, Twite, Siskin, Greenfinch, Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, Reed, Snow, Cirl and Yellow Buntings being some of the attractive and suitable species).

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Occupants of Birdroom.

W. A. S.—There is always a risk in associating Finch-like birds with Parrakeets, but the species you name are all well able to look after themselves, and I do not think you need trouble. Cockatiels are quite harmless, but the mischievousness of Budgerigars and Lovebirds sometimes means a broken leg or damaged wing for members of the Finch tribe housed with them. The seven pairs you name will not be too numerous, but I should not add more than at the most 1 pair, say Blue-winged Lovebirds (Passerine Parrakeets), as the young, if you have any luck, will soon increase numbers. There ought never to be more than 30 birds in the room, and you must get rid of the young as they are able to fend for themselves, so as to keep within this margin. Floor of room should be covered either with lino or sheet zinc to prevent sand or excreta getting under the boards, and it should be periodically scoured with water containing Jeyes Fluid or some similar disinfectant.

Amazon Parrot.

Miss Hendry.—Bathe or spray (you can use either a mop camel hair brush or "mist" sprayer) the nostrils with diluted glyco-thymoline, and keep its bowels moving freely with an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one part magnesia, two parts water, to be given in lieu of the ordinary drinking water; the condition of the voidings, which must not be watery-loose, must regulate the frequency of the doses. When not giving the magnesia, put Byno-phosphates into the drinking water—one teaspoonful to two tablespoonfuls of water. This should be sufficient for a day's supply. Diet: Seed mixture canary, millet, oats, hemp, dari, maize, paddy rice and sunflower seeds, in about equal parts, also ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit and a little boiled maize two or three times a week. Grit (a pinch in the daily supply of seed), and cuttlebone, must be regularly supplied. I am of the opinion the loss of feathers is the ordinary moult, but as a precaution spray it occasionally with quassia solution. Keep it where it will get fresh air, but strictly out of draught.

What Parrot, etc.

Miss Bull.—It is a Blue-fronted Amazon. The various items of the seed mixture regularly advised in this column can be procured from any of our advertisers or your local corn chandler. Get a quart or pint each of the respective kinds as the case may be; well mix and you will find it cheap and wholesome. In addition to seed, supply ripe fruit, green food, nuts, plain biscuit, and occasionally a little boiled maize, but the latter only keeps fresh one day. Keep clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½): Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. Once a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water, and on other days the same quantity of Byno-phosphates (get both from your chemist). I opine the loss of plumage is the moult, and time will remedy this. Spray once a week (use a "mist" sprayer) with quassia solution. Keep where it will get fresh air, but keep strictly out of draught.

African Weaver Bird (L.N.).—(1) The African Weaver Birds are legion, but the treatment of all is very similar. They are very shy breeders in captivity, even in aviaries, and I know no instance of their doing so in a cage. In a London aviary, young of the Red-billed Weaver have been fully reared this year. They adapt themselves to our summer, that is in such few instances as young have been reared. (2) Add to your dietary spray millet, green food, and an occasional mealworm, spider, or other insect.

Brass Cages (W. Thomas).—The objection to brass cages in the formation of verdegris (this appears as a green sediment in corners and crevices). If you keep it well cleaned and do not allow it to form, no harm will accrue from the brass bands. As regards the food hoppers, it is far better to cut the bottom out of these and get china vessels to fit them, retaining only a narrow ledge at bottom of metal hopper to support the china vessel. This is much the more hygienic method. Just a word of warning. Verdegris is poison. It is merely a case with brass adornments of careful cleaning and seeing that it is not allowed to form in stray corners. The water vessels would need to be kept under strict observation, as damp encourages the formation.

Pekin Robin ("Leiothrix").—Do not give seed at present; confine its dietary to milk sop, ripe fruit liberally (banana, apple, etc.), soft food and live insects (mealworms, spiders, etc.). Cover the cage bottom with mould and let the bird have a fly round room occasionally, but there must be a fire-guard. Give three or four doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, with an interval of two days between each.—one teaspoonful of magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of water will be ample. Give this in lieu of the ordinary drinking water. Take water away overnight and supply the prepared water first thing in the morning. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist and put a little on the swelling daily; use a camel hair brush and well cleanse same after use.

Cutthroats (Leslie).—There is no reason why the young Cutthroats should not be reared; only this morning I heard young of this species shouting for food, in the shelter attached to my garden aviary, and judging by the noise, lusty youngsters too. If young are hatched, supply millet sprays, and also keep a saucer of dry ants' "eggs" standing in the aviary, also supply green food. At this season a leaf of lettuce is the best, it must be fresh, and it will be best to cut the centre stem from the leaf and not to supply the stem, only the thin green portion of the leaf.

Foreign Songsters (H. R. Young).—The matter of cost limits your choice materially. The Serins among cheap foreigners are the best songsters, and the Siskins also are above the average, but then, as you say, in confined quarters they are pugnacious I do not think you would find the Grey Singing Finch too pugnacious for you. The Orange-cheeked and St. Helena Waxbills have a sweet little lay. The African Silverbill also has a pretty soft rippling sort of song, and are very inoffensive. I am rather doubtful about the Cutthroats in such small quarters, they are well able to take care of themselves in almost any company, and some pairs turn out really murderous in confined quarters. Zebra Finches would breed and would be safe with the other birds, and he, in spite of his "penny-trumpet sort of song," is a pretty little chap, and of fairly interesting demeanour.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

R. D. Tucker.—The Goldie I find died of pneumonia following on congestion of the lungs, probably induced by cold.

John Allen.—Congestion of liver associated with enteritis, the result of irritant poisons.

B.W.—Pleurisy and pneumonia succeeding a cold. All the membranes were in a catarrhal condition, and the cold must have existed some time, for the nasal passages and sinuses of the head were full of thick mucous. I have conformed with your wish re burial of remains.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

Bowburn Show (A. J. Notley).—Thanks for your kindness.

A Letter (John Kay).—Once again, thanks; and many more pleasant Sunday evenings to you.

Specimen Copy (E. L. A. Crow).—Have had a specimen copy forwarded. Many thanks.

A Hinge (J. Wright).—We hardly understand how the hinge you describe is intended to work. Will you explain this?

Mealworm Breeding (Halifax).—In "Nutshell" booklet No. 26 (post free 2½d.) you will find details of the breeding of mealworms; also other live foods for insectivorous birds.

The Mishap at Stoke-on-Trent Show (Exhibitor No. 1).—We appreciate your motive in writing, but we do not care to publish letters on this topic written over a nom-de-plume.

Novices at Southend (Nosey Parker).—We are afraid you have but a poor appreciation of the law of libel if you think we can publish with impunity such a letter as that you send us. Why did you not make sure of your ground and then lodge a protest with the officials of Southend show?

Staining (McFarlane or McLean).—We must please refer you to the first sentence of our reply to "Nosey Parker." Further, one of the chief persons mentioned in your letter completely denies (upon enquiry) your version of the affair.

Method of Feeding (Thos. Scott).—The most economical method of feeding aviary birds is to supply the principal seeds (say, canary, hemp, summer rape, teazle and sunflower) in separate dishes, or hoppers of the "self-supplying" type. A mixture of other seeds can be supplied in another dish, and varied with wild seeds, etc., on different days. If all the seeds are mixed together, and supplied in one dish, considerable waste ensues, the birds scattering a lot of seed on the floor searching for their favourite king—generally hemp.

Wild-Bird Life.

Increase of Small Birds.

While we are doubtless losing many of our larger birds, such as the Ravens, Kites, Eagles, Choughs, etc., there is to all appearances a corresponding increase in the smaller birds that frequent the hedgerows and copse. One has only to take a ramble at this time of the year along country lanes or footpaths leading across stubble and meadow land to be convinced that the flocks of Sparrows, Linnets, Greenbirds, and Starlings are considerably larger than they were a few years ago. The enclosure of waste ground and the watchful care of the farmer to ward off trespassers, allows the majority of our smaller birds to nest in comparative security, and although during the summer months (when cover is plentiful) we hardly notice how many birds are really around us, we get them at this time of the year gathered together, so that they come under the eye at once, and we then note how huge the flocks are, and how the gatherings are much more frequent than formerly. Our smaller Finches, etc., do not migrate to the same extent as the Warblers, although many home-bred birds are carried across the "waste of waters" by the autumn flittings; consequently their ranks are not thinned upon the long journey southwards; having to contend only with the few predatory birds now left to us, and with the chances of starvation during a severe winter. Although the Warblers have probably increased very little in number, we have still, as far as we know, lost no known species. We have still the Nightingale ("the King of Songsters") that Spencer loved; the "Throstle" with his note so true that sang to Shakespeare in the woods on the banks of the Avon, the sober Whitethroat and fluttering Flycatcher, and many others equally graceful and charming. We have almost obliterated the Hawks and Owls, and possibly in time to come this will be accomplished. Nature very rarely suffers any species to be "wiped out." It is only when man comes upon the scene that the balance is disturbed, and when one wanders abroad and sees the thousands of small birds crowding each other on the stubble and meadow land it appears as though Nature has determined to retaliate by multiplying unduly the smaller Finches and Sparrows. Even the Blackbirds and Thrushes are unusually plentiful. These, like the Starlings, are not sought for for food purposes, and so are therefore thriving amazingly.

In the Courts.

Siberian Goldfinch Stolen from Dysart Show.

At the Burgh Court, Dysart, James Penman, 29 years of age, a pony-driver, residing at South Street, was charged with having, on Oct. 28 last, from Dysart Cage Bird Society's show at the Normand Hall, stolen a Goldfinch. He pleaded guilty, but stated that he was under the influence of drink at the time, and did not know what he was doing.

The Fiscal stated that the bird was a valuable one, and had been sent to the show by an Alloa fancier (Mr. Arnott). Accused did not gain anything by the theft, as the bird died the day after he stole it. These thefts, which were very difficult to trace, had been occurring at different shows throughout the country, and there had been a good deal of inquiry before the police were able to bring the theft home to accused.

The magistrate complimented the police on the success of their efforts to trace what he chaarcterised as a particularly mean form of theft, and imposed a fine of £2, with the option of twenty days in gaol.

The Real Bird-lover.

Hooligans and thoughtless boys are a constant source of danger to wild birds during the spring and early summer, but, happily for bird life, all bird-nesters are not to be classed as destroyers. Of later years there has sprung up a class of nature lovers who love to watch and protect all feathered life. The Song Thrush and Blackbird nest securely in the gardens of such. The Flycatcher builds fearlessly in their trelliswork, and even one of our rarest visitors could build its home within reach of hand with absolute safety.

Correspondence.

Is it a Sale or Borrowing?

Sir,—I was at the same meeting as Mr. Stead when this question arose, but I think it very unfair of Mr. Stead to bring this forward through the columns of CAGE BIRDS before he has ample proof for doing so. I think it would be far better if Mr. Stead attended more to the interests of the society instead of making statements which he cannot prove to be true, and also causing ill-feeling amongst the members.

A DISGUSTED MEMBER.

Yorkshires at Doncaster Show.

Sir,—Seeing it recommended for a beginner to put himself into the hands of someone who keeps good birds, I would like to know through your valuable paper if someone will give me the address of a gentleman who exhibited Yorkshires at Doncaster Show and was awarded some prizes, whose cages had part of a luggage label tied thereon, with words printed in red. I asked a fancier if he could tell me whose birds they were, but he laughed and said the gentleman was in the boat and ought to be tossed out; but I thought this man had been at sea, or was a disappointed exhibitor.

IGNORANCE.

Mice in the Bird Room.

Sir,—When a bird house or aviary is all wood in construction, mice can get anywhere. I have one such. Poison I fear, as mishaps occur in its use, and man is forgetful. I have as yet failed to find any remedy, save trapping. I have myself six box and "Nipper" traps in use, and by a continual changing of baits from toasted cheese, quaker oats, etc., and changing position of traps, and taking away all seed vessels at nights, I am able to get a rest—until a fresh pair find the aviary and breed us another lot. My last clearance was rather tough—it took me eight weeks to catch about twelve: I suppose the whole family.

Sir,—I was somewhat surprised to read in your splendid report of the L.C.B.A. Show that some fanciers present were not satisfied that our Light Linnet Mule was a genuine hybrid, because I consider the bird shows its parentage very plainly. The clear body, as a Canary, and the dark wings and tail of the Linnet show the cross as well as a Light Hybrid can do. The tail and the dark feathers in the wings are much darker than on a Linnet, and also show the whites in the wings, though not nearly so pronounced. It is very interesting to hear that these fanciers could see so much of the Linnet in its appearance as to consider it an albino, yet when I first exhibited the bird at Stoke several local fanciers could not tell what the British cross was, and the judge, Mr. F. Bate, had to handle the bird to satisfy himself. Of course, that is where a judge has an advantage over a critic. I did not breed the bird, but before it passed into our possession I was quite satisfied that it was a genuine Hybrid. It was bred in the ordinary way with cock Linnet and hen Canary, by a man residing within a few miles of this town. The above incident recalls to my mind a similar experience. Some years ago I was exhibiting a Siskin-Greenfinch Hybrid at Stoke, Mr. Roe judging and awarding the bird 2nd prize. One of our most experienced local Hybrid fanciers, after looking over this class, expressed his opinion that he could see no Siskin in it. A few minutes afterwards a lady, accompanied by a little girl, came looking at the same class. "Look, mamma," said the little girl, pointing at my bird, "there's a Siskin like ours!" I may just mention that could the bird have been heard to sing at the L.C.B.A. Show it would have dispelled any doubt there might have been. It has a loud Canary song, with some Linnet notes, but such as no Linnet could possess.

J. PITCHFORD.

Liverpool O.S. and Its Novice Rule.

Does it Mean Novices for Ever?

Sir,—I would like to draw your readers' attention to the rule for novices at the Liverpool Ornithological Society's recent show. I was under the impression that all societies were practically unanimous in regard to the novice question, but it has recently been brought to my notice that I have been under a misapprehension. Some time during the life of the C.B.U. the novice question was put to the "referendum," and I think that societies were pretty generally in favour of the rule that when novices have won three first prizes in open novice competition they became champions. That rule was adopted by the C.B.U., and I think every other society in the kingdom, Liverpool excepted. It may interest them to know that, so far as I can trace, they are in a position of "splendid isolation" regarding the novice question, which is no doubt very gratifying to them. On referring to last year's schedule I find they held their show under C.B.U. rules, yet their own novice rule was in force then. On receiving the catalogue of this year's show I found an exhibitor in the novice classes had won three prizes who had won three first prizes in open novice classes at a show a few weeks earlier. Not being then aware that the Liverpool novice rule was different to that adopted by most societies, I wrote the secretary informing him of the exhibitor's ineligibility, and mentioned the show where he had won the three first prizes; and in the course of a few days received a letter from the secretary that the exhibitor was, according to their novice rule, eligible. On referring to their schedule, and on reading the rule in question, you may judge of my astonishment when I read: "Novice to mean one who has not won a first prize in All-England competition." I wonder if it has ever occurred to the Liverpool O.S. how absurd that rule is? If all societies were to adopt the same rule, novices would be novices for ever, and in time champions would become as extinct as the Dodo. Again, if we were to abide by the strict reading of the rule, a fancier can win a first in champion classes in either Scotland or Wales and still be eligible to show in the L.O.S. novice classes. This is a matter that I hope will engage the attention of the Liverpool O.S. committee before their next annual event, or they will have very few entries in the champion classes. I happen to know a few champion fanciers who, if they steer clear of the first prizes next year in champion classes, will certainly show in the novice classes at Liverpool if the rule remains as it is. I can imagine the rumpus it will cause. Personally, I hope wiser counsels may prevail.

SUB ROSA.

Is Linseed Harmful to Gold-Finches?

Sir,—If too much linseed is given to Goldfinches and others birds, it is undoubtedly harmful. You should not give too much linseed to Goldfinches, nor yet inga seed. I do not believe in inga seed for Goldfinches. Your correspondent should get from you the Nutshell Booklet on the Goldfinch; it will tell him how to feed it. Give plenty of water and green food, and do not give rich seed too freely.

FANCIER.

The Mishap at Stoke-on-Trent Show.

Sir,—I had no intention of writing you re the above, preferring, unlike your correspondent, Mr. J. England, to mind my own business; but his letter casts a reflection on Mr. Wellings' truthfulness, and so I consider it my duty to write. The two birds in question (Starling and Thrush) were not at Preston Show. I received a note with class tickets, saying they would not be coming. I encloso same, Mr. Editor, for your inspection. Mr. England's statement that they were not marked absent in catalogue was a printer's error, which, owing to the rush in getting catalogue out in good time, had been overlooked. Then, again, how was it possible for the birds to be out of the cards when there were only seven birds entered in the class? I am afraid you have put your foot in it this time, Mr. England.

J. P. LEEMING.

Hon. Sec., Preston O.S.

[We have received the note referred to by Mr. Leeming, and find it bears out his statement.—Editor.]

Sir,—I mentioned that I should answer about the mishap at Stoke Show this week, but I see that Mr. Pitchford is not quite "empty" yet; therefore I will wait until he gets empty. I wish to inform you that this person Bibby, whose statement cannot be accepted, is a young lady, Miss Elizabeth Bibby, of Cook Street, Prescot, and one who may become as much interested in the Fancy as either Mr. Pitchford or Mr. England, so will these gentlemen please address her in future as Miss, and not Mr. Bibby. She is not inclined to further correspondence on account that her statement cannot be accepted, but she accepts J. Pitchford's ignorance all the same. The letter from John England makes it appear to your readers that the statement of Miss Bibby is not true (that my birds were absent at Preston Show). He says: "I feel positive I saw them at Preston on Nov. 18 in classes 31, No. 4 and 5, cardless; also that he remarked to another fancier about them being so far down." Surely, Mr. England, this other fancier was not the same as yourself, labouring under some weakness? (I hope you have not fallen out of the trap.) I can understand Mr. England standing there imagining he was looking at my birds, but I cannot believe that the second man would be there with the same weakness as John England! He says perhaps I sent the two birds to Preston without informing Mr. Bibby. I have no recollection of sending them, sir, and if I did send them the Preston Society have not returned them yet. If John England will look at the report of Preston Show in CAGE BIRDS he will see that they are stated to be "absent" in the report. I notice that the foreign classes follow the British, but I do not know what birds were in these classes. I am wondering whether Mr. England was among the foreign and saw a glossy Starling and Pekin Robin, No. 4 and 5, and mistook them for my Starling and Thrush. If Mr. England has found his mistake out, he may let your readers know that it was his mistake, and that Miss Bibby's letter will be correct.

A. WELLINGS.

What Causes Short Entries?

Sir,—In reference to Mr. Ivor Morgan's letter and short entries, how on earth does he think the societies are going to pay the prize-money if they only charge an entry fee of 1s. per cage? I think he has not had much experience with any society or he would not talk like he does. There is not much enthusiasm about him. I think 2s. per cage is little enough; it would help the societies to pay their way, instead of being in debt, as a good many small clubs are—even giving up, as they cannot afford to go on. My experience is that there are dozens of bird fanciers who will not show birds in a mixed class. I think myself there would be more entries if the British birds were shown in separate classes.

A. HOLT.

Sir,—Your correspondent, Mr. Ivor M. Morgan, has certainly hit one nail on the head as to the cause of short entries. There are to my knowledge in this part many working men who would gladly exhibit birds that would do well if it were not for the cost of entries. Take the case of a man making three entries at 1s. 6d. each—4s. 6d.—the 6d. knocked off would make all the difference, and I believe it would make for good so far as concerns show secretaries' complaints re short entries. Personally I am beginning to think that the cause of short entries is that the secretaries of some shows do not attend to applications for schedules. I sent to the Royal Windsor and Derby secretaries respectively asking for schedules, but did not receive one from either. Is it because I sent the postcards unstamped; I may have done, but I don't think so. I should like to know if others have been treated in the same way.

ARTHUR J. DAZELEY.

The Chortle of an Anti-colourfoodite.

Sir,—At a beauty show a competitor turned up with his face a brilliant green. He informed the judge that he had discovered a chemical which, taken internally, produced this result, and that he had also brought with him a bag to take home the first prize. The judge, thinking him mad, sent for the police, who discovered that he was a Canary breeder, who, knowing that to win with Canaries it was necessary to produce a colour which was entirely unnatural, had tried the same idea on himself. He was let off with a caution!

S. STEPHENS.

Sir,—Is colour-feeding injurious? That is a question many thinking fanciers have asked and are asking themselves yearly, and, to judge from his last letter on the subject, it has occupied Mr. Moore's mind for some time; but whilst some of us are willing to enter into argument with an open mind, he is almost fanatically prejudiced. He assures us that he, along with others, welcomes scientific research, but assures us also that he is confident as to the result! "To convince a man against his will is to leave him in the same mind still" never struck me as being the embodiment of all that is brilliant in philosophy, but it is particularly applicable to Mr. Moore's case. Perhaps he is one of those fanciers who have never colour-fed a bird; or, if so, he has not gone about the business intelligently, and consequently has made a hash of it. Or perhaps he is one who objects to colour-feeding on the supposition that it entails a great expense. I hope to convince him on the latter point, at any rate. I happen to be one of the "imbeciles," as Mr. Moore calls them, who colour-feed through necessity, and much as I should welcome the time when the Fancy will be unanimous in its decision to entirely do away with it, I am not going to admit that colour-feed is the cause of the ills a Canary is heir to. Many birds are constitutionally weak, and even if not fed would still show signs of illness even in the first year. If colour food is so harmful, how comes it that, to cite a few cases, Mr. Seed's "Little King," or Mr. Jimmy Evans' "Sign of the Cross," Mr. Davies's old champion yellow, and that old clinking Light Mule (late Mr. Colton's) have not long since passed to where all good birds go? They have all been winning long years now, and I saw all three Norwich birds at one show a week or so ago. Needless to say, they were looking "in the pink." These are not isolated cases. Many of the Yorkshire champions are getting on in years, and still keep winning; and I know of a stud of Yorkshires where three hens were breeding at the age of seven years, and one of them was paired up to her own great-grandson six times removed! Or, to be more clear, she was paired to a year-old cock that was related in a direct line to her. Mr. Moore must admit that colour feed had not done that stud much harm, yet they had been colour-fed every year. Yes, I admit that there are ailing birds, but I think we must look further than colour food for the cause. Stuffy atmospheres have more to do with ailing birds than we all admit, and conservatism in the feeding of all stock—that is, one stock food for all our Canaries. The old saying, "What's one man's meat is another man's poison" is applicable to Canaries. Some birds will keep well no matter how they are fed; others will be ailing no matter how much attention or what food they get. It is a wonder to me how some Canaries keep as healthy as they do, getting the everlasting canary and rape seeds, and the next day rape and canary for a change. No wonder they get liverish! Mr. Moore raises another point. He says it is the "highest dyed" birds which get the prizes. Mr. Moore either hasn't attended many first-class shows or he is a poor judge of type and all that goes to the making of a real good bird. How many times does a colour-vendor's medal go to a bird that is out of the tickets? I have noticed very many cases, and if the "highest-dyed" birds were to get the prizes, then these medal winners would always be sure of first prize. There is another view of the question which Mr. Moore doesn't mention. In colour-feeding, every faucier has an equal chance. Some birds are certainly better fed than others, but still, as Mr. Moore would have it, we all start at scratch. We are none of us handicapped. But what of the natural-colour classes? If Mr. Moore is an observant man, he will have noticed that some Borders have been disqualified both in England and Scotland for alleged colour-feeding. The owners deny colour-feeding, but then the judge's decision is final. It is probable that if these disqualified birds belonged to Mr. Moore he would get a great amount of self-satisfaction from a clear conscience, but a clear conscience will not pay a working fancier his prize-money if his birds ought to have won. At present, as I said before, we all have the same chance. With regard to the cost, I have proved beyond doubt that forty birds can be successfully fed and exhibited on 2lbs. of cool pepper—no hot. It may seem incredible to some of the older hands, but it is a fact nevertheless. If cool pepper is injurious, Mr. Moore must admit that 2lbs. of colour food given to forty birds over a period of four months is reducing the ill-effects to a minimum, not to mention the cost, which is 3s.! Many fanciers cram their birds as poultry fanciers do chickens, on the assumption that the more they eat the better colour they get. Never was there an assumption so fallacious. I know fanciers who used colour food at 50 per cent. strength, yet their birds are no better in colour than mine. I never take my seed hoppers away from my birds; I find they eat the colour food readily. Certainly, when young, they have to be taught. No doubt it tastes funny at first, but they get to liking it. Perhaps it is like tomatoes to the human being—it is an acquired taste. Yet another question is raised by Mr. Moore. He says that much of the non-sitting and non-feeding troubles are brought on through constitutional weakness caused by colour-feeding, and he mentions Borders as being used for foster parents. They are used as foster-parents, but chiefly for fanciers who breed Lancashires, Crests, Scotch Fancies, and Belgians; birds which are not colour-fed, therefore should not be constitutionally weak or bad feeders and sitters! Those four varieties are notoriously bad feeders, and if a variety that has never been colour-fed is the embodiment of all that is healthy, then those four varieties ought to be as common as blackberries, which they are not. I would like to refer to Mr. Moore's former letter. Personally I appreciated his humour, but I do not agree with him that the best way in which to treat ignorance is with ridicule. I have been chaffed by my friends for the "slating" Mr. Moore gave me in that letter, and in vain have I tried to explain that he was not getting at me at all. I had thought that the absurdity of the amount of hot pepper he was advising to give to the Greenie would have been sufficient to convince the greatest dullard that he was only pulling someone's leg. But no, a great many fanciers took him seriously! It was a brilliant piece of satire, no doubt, but the letters which followed clearly show that he was misunderstood.

T. JOHNSON.

My Goldfinch and My Nightingale.

Sir,—I was very pleased at seeing the fine picture of my Russian Goldfinch, winner of a fourth prize at the last L.C.B.A. Show, in your valuable paper, and must thank your artist for the beautiful drawing he has produced of my bird. I had heard it said that it is very difficult to cage-moult a Russian Goldfinch, so was ambitious to try my hand, but failed last year. Since then I studied closely all replies about Goldfinches given to enquirers in your journal by Mr. Weston, and made careful notes of anything particularly interesting, and it is with the help of these notes, wild seeds, a little soft food, and "tasteless," during moulting, that I succeeded this year in putting a cage-moulted (not aviary) Russian Goldfinch upon the show bench. It may interest lovers of Nightingales to hear that since last week I have had a 'Gale in full song. This bird has been caged since 1909. The first year he did not utter a note, but made up for it in song last year and again now. I think this is another good proof to "fuddists" that even the most difficult bird to cater for, if well looked after, will delight his keeper with song in captivity, and not only reward him for his pains, but demonstrate at the same time that his pet feels well and comfortable in his surroundings, else he would not come out into song at this time of year, when the climate is so changeable and whilst his brethren are sweltering under the heat of the sun in the Tropics. I may mention that I obtained both Goldfinch and Nightingale from the well-known dealers, Messrs. De Vos and Co. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

OTTO PUCK.

A Forward Young Minx!

Sir,—I have a Canary hen, aged now four days under seven months. She became "fresh," so I put her to a cock Canary, and to my surprise she laid this morning. I should like to know if this is a record? I will let you know how she gets on with her hatch. Please let me know the best feed for young birds at this time of the year. All kept in the kitchen.

J. Robinson.

[The food needed (seeing that the birds are in a heated room) will be the same, so far as the season allows, as for birds hatched in the spring. If green food is scarce, seedlings grown from summer rape will answer admirably.—Editor.]

Breeding Both Early and Late.

Sir,—Being a constant reader of Cage Birds, I thought I would tell you of my luck this season. I am a breeder of Roller Canaries, and I have seen some items about early and late breeding. One of my hens had four young ones on the perches the last week in February, and I have another hen feeding four young ones now. Two were hatched on Nov. 17, one on the 18th, and one on the 19th. They were all due to hatch on the 18th, so you see the first two were hatched on the 13th day. I am expecting them on the perches this week. I am the first and last breeder this season round about here. I am keeping the birds in the kitchen. I should like to know through the columns of your paper if this is an exceptional experience, or whether any other reader has done the same.

A Hybrid Problem.

The Parents Wrong; The Youngsters Right!

Sir,—Respecting my hybrid-breeding pair, cock Greenfinch and Siberian hen Bullfinch, "wrong-classed" at the L.C.B.A. Show, I did not notice that the classification read: "Pairs . . two British Birds," or I should not have exhibited a foreign hen. I am keeping my stock and trying to breed a few hybrids on the lines laid down by Mr. Houlton in his fine book, where the largest Siberian hen Bullies are advocated for this cross. Please do not misunderstand me; I am in no way a disappointed exhibitor, but am a little puzzled, for if the parents are "w.c.," how can the many beautiful large hybrids on the show bench to-day, obviously bred from foreign Finches, be exhibited in the class "A.V. Hybrid between two British birds"? A small hybrid, however good, stands very little chance in keen competition. May I suggest to how secretaries to word the class differently in future, say, "Suitable pairs for hybrid breeding"?

The Woes of Foreign Bird Judges.

A Suggested Help.

Sir,—I never quite understand why the names of species should not be either supplied to the judges or placed on the cages. In the classes for foreign birds it is often quite impossible to expect a judge to know every species of rare Tanager, Sugar Bird, etc., etc. There are very few, if any, judges who are well posted on every genus, still less so on every species of a genus. A judge may see a bird which is rare to him, but which may have been in the country for a year or more, especially if he does not visit the shows. Nowadays species new to aviculture are often imported—species, too, which so nearly resemble in some cases ones more commonly imported that it is absurd to imagine a judge can always recognise them as great rarities, hence one of the chief difficulties in judging foreign birds, for everyone knows what they have to deal with in the case of British ones. At dog shows, not only does a judge have no difficulty in this respect, but he also constantly knows the owners personally, and sees them before him with their dogs. At a cage bird show this is not the case, although very often a judge is perfectly aware of the name of the owner of a Paradise Bird, etc. It would be fairer if he knew all the names, so long as he knows any. But putting that point aside, let him, at any rate, be assisted in an uncommonly hard task by labels being attached to the cages with name of genus and species of each exhibit, and in the case of a great rarity, such additional words as "extremely rare," "new to aviculture," etc. In my case I do not, for instance, keep Tanagers, and their name is legion. All the members of the Calliste family are more or less showy and beautiful. A rare Calliste might arrive a few weeks before a show, perhaps not at all unlike some more commonly-imported species, and how on earth is one to be able to recognise it as something hitherto unimported and unexhibited? And then follows criticism: "So-and-so was very hardly treated, etc." Personally, I think it is sometimes the other way round. A wretched judge is apparently looked upon as omniscient, and people are astonished and chagrined when they discover that he isn't! Of course, criticism is all right, so long as it is reasonable. So long as certain assistance is withheld from judges it looks as if they were suspected of lacking in the spirit of a true judge, namely, impartiality. And sometimes exhibitors approach a judge when he has finished his task, or hopes he has, with puzzling questions anent one of their own exhibits, such as: "You haven't noticed my bird much. Now what species do you call that?" The judge humbly remarks that he thought it was so-and-so. "Oh, no it isn't," is the answer; "have you ever seen it before?" It would be much better to say straight out what the bird is, instead of trying to pose the poor judge, and finally walking away with a demeanour which plainly says: "Well, I don't think much of your powers of judgment." Another difficulty is as to awards of the "lower orders." For the most part foreign birds which are exhibited are shown in good condition, and constantly some of them deserve a prize as much as those to whom prizes have been awarded. If a judge withholds the v.h.c.'s it seems hard upon exhibitors, who are discouraged, and if once awards are given in one case, one has to continue to do so.

The Annfield Plain F. and F.C.B.S.

Sir,—A meeting was held on Nov. 25, and our efforts proved successful. We enrolled 22 members, and we have prospects of more—truly a good start. We are a grand pack of sportsmen all ready for the fray. The duties of chairman fell to Mr. Hall, who is the right man in the right place—a chip off the old block. Mr. J. Williams as treasurer; myself as hon. sec.; a committee for each section is to be appointed as new members are enrolled. It was proposed to hold a table show every month. A members' show is to be held shortly, confined to a £3 limit. If things prosper as we hope and expect, we intend venturing upon an open show next year. Eight miles radius. Membership sub., 2s. 6d. Now, ye cage bird fanciers, roll up and let us have a good strong society here. Next meeting. Dec. 16 at 7.30, at Smith Arms, Catchgate.

Colour-fed or Non-colour-fed?

The "Laughing-stock of the Fancy!"

Sir,—The question of colour in relation to the Border Fancy was bound to be reopened at some time or other, and Mr. Wellings' action has only precipitated the inevitable. What is colour-feeding and what is natural colour? Where does the one begin and the other end? It would be interesting to find someone bold enough to draw the line of demarcation. No man living can define the point, and for that reason I have always, by voice and vote, opposed the ruling of the B.F.C.C. in the matter, believing it to be both pernicious and misleading. It opens the way to fraud and injustice, places judges under a distasteful obligation, and leads to no end of wrangling and disappointment among exhibitors. I myself have had several birds passed this season for alleged colour-feeding, and the same birds have, a week later, taken first prizes under other judges. My birds have not tasted anything in the nature of so-called colour foods, and I am getting tired of this silly game. Were my love for the Border not deep-rooted, I should feel inclined to clear out altogether. Surely, Mr. Editor, it is time to end a position which is fast becoming intolerable. The plan I have always advocated is a simple one. Let every man feed his birds on what he likes, and let the schedules instruct judges that Borders are to be judged irrespective of colour. This, I believe, would not only settle this vexed question, but would be fair to everybody, and place the Border in its true position in the Canary kingdom. At present we are the laughing-stock of the entire Fancy.

J. S. Wilson.

How was it Done?

Sir,—If, as Mr. Wellings and some of the critics state, Mr. Bayley's birds were colour-fed, how do they account for this? About twelve months ago a certain Manchester man bought some birds from Mr. Bayley, and a few weeks ago took some to Mr. Bayley which had been bred from the above and asked Mr. Bayley to exchange (also bought some more), which he did. After this fancier had gone, Mr. B. washed a yellow cock, and it was, if anything, deeper in colour than any Mr. B. had. I have it on good authority that this Manchester man does not colour feed; how, then, do they account for colour?

A. E. Long.

Sir,—Kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper to answer Mr. Alfred Wellings' letter re colour-fed Borders at Liverpool Show. Mr. Wellings says in his letter the talk of the show was that the Borders were ablaze with colour. Well, Mr. Wellings, when I was at Liverpool Show on the Saturday afternoon the talk of the show was about lemon-coloured Buffs that were in the money. Mr. Wellings also says that asking the opinion of other judges will not alter his opinion. I have never thought for a moment that it would, but it might alter fanciers' opinions when some of these birds have already been under five different judges this season and been well in the money every time. Mr. Wellings says those who exhibit Borders will not stand losing their chance through Borders that are ablaze with colour. I should like to say neither will those who exhibit Borders and breed Borders for colour stand losing their chance through having them put out by a man who does not seem to know a good coloured bird from a lemon-coloured buff. Now, Mr. Wellings, ever since I began in the Fancy it has been my sole object to breed as much colour in them as I possibly can, and as long as I remain in the Fancy it will be my aim to do so, no matter what Mr. Wellings has done and thinks, because it seems to me it must be right when they have already passed five judges to one. Mr. Wellings says the other judges would not know whether they were the same birds that were left out at Liverpool. Well, Mr. Hadwin has answered him that in last week's Cage Birds. I should like to thank through Cage Birds the two gentlemen, Mr. Houlton and Mr. Hadwin, for their courtesy in answering my letter.

W. Bayley.

A Speaking Silence: Mutual Help at Dubmires: More Favours at Shows.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. C. H. RAYNOR, Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London. Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. CUSHNY, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham.

Reduced Admission to the Shows.

In addition to the shows mentioned in previous lists the charges of admission will be reduced to Cage Birds League members at Sandy Lane, Glasgow, and Scunthorpe. The reductions will be as announced in previous issues, namely, fourpence in the shilling. Including the three shows mentioned, the list of forthcoming exhibitions at which preferential treatment will be accorded to League members is as follows:—

Dec. 9. SHEFFIELD C.B.S., Montgomery Hall.
DALTON-IN-FURNESS.
HETTON-LE-HOLE.
BUSH HILL PARK.
SHETTLESTON, Hill St. Hall (free to League members).
Dec. 16. FELINFOEL.
Dec. 23. HEBDEN BRIDGE.
PELTON FELL.
Dec. 25. ELGIN.
Dec. 26. NORTH WALES C.B.S., Assembly Roome, Market St., Carnarvon.
SCUNTHORPE.
TONYPANDY (free to League members).
Jan. 2—3. GLASGOW & DISTRICT C.B.A., Crown Hall, Sauchiehall St.
Jan. 6. GUISBOROUGH.
Jan. 12—13. SUNDERLAND, Miners' Hall, Roker Avenue.

Free Admission.

At the show held by the MID-RHONDDA and DISTRICT. C.B.S. at Emrys-Richards Assembly Hall, Tonypandy, on Dec. 26, Cage Birds League members will be admitted free if wearing their badges or producing their membership receipts. Members in or near Shettleston should also remember the note of last week, that they will be admitted free to-day, Dec. 9, at the show held by the Shettleston and Dist. C.B.S. at Hill St. Hall, Shettleston.

Boxing Day at Tonypandy.

In conveying the news that League members will be admitted free to the show at Tonypandy, Mr. Legg, the hon. sec., writes: "League members of the Rhondda Valleys have a good chance to meet together at our show, and thereby know one another and make new friends." As we have a good number of League members in this part of Wales, there should be quite a large display of our badges at this Boxing Day show. Mr. Legg, whose address is 7, Primrose Terrace, Llwyncelyn, Porth, is local hon. sec. to Cage Birds League, and will be glad to give all information to any local fancier respecting the League.

The R.S.P.C.A. and Ourselves.

Members will recollect that in my notes of August 19 last I published an extract from "The Animal World," the official organ of the R.S.P.C.A., and publicly asked the Editor for an answer to a question or two. In our issue for Aug. 26 I reproduced a letter I had written to the Editor of the paper mentioned, and on the 9th Sept. I announced in these notes that I had received an official reply to the effect that the Editor was away on holiday and my letter would be handed to him as soon as he returned to town. This is all I have heard on the matter, and "The Animal World" has since been entirely silent on the subject of bird-keeping and its imaginary iniquities. It is now to be concluded either that the Editor is still away on holiday, or that the official organ of the R.S.P.C.A. wishes only to put one side of the case before those who supply the sinews of war.

Membership to the League as Special Prize.

Mr. Tugby, the League Hon. Sec. for Scunthorpe, writes that he is offering at Scunthorpe Show, mentioned in the list above, a Cage Birds League badge and membership for one year as a special in the non-fed Canary class. Spontaneous acts such as this show the good-fellowship existing among League members generally, and the desire of members to extend the good fellowship to their brother fanciers.

Cage Birds League at Dubmire.

Mr. B. Robinson, hon. sec. of Dubmire Workmen's Club, writes that the exhibition of Cage Birds League posters at the recent show called forth the general opinion that such an organisation has been for many years required. Mr. Robinson says that the show will result in the making of several recruits to his society, and that all these have promised to join Cage Birds League.

A Note as to Our Handbills.

I have received several communications from Secretaries asking if any charge is made for our handbills and posters. Will Secretaries please note that these are sent quite free of charge and carriage paid. Over a hundred thousand of the handbills have already been distributed, and a parcel will be sent to any Secretary applying for them. In making application, the name of the Society holding the show should be stated, in order that this may be printed at the foot of the handbills. A copy of the bill appeared in Cage Birds for Nov. 4.

POSTERS FOR THE SHOWS.

In response to the suggestions of several members, neat posters have been prepared conveying an invitation to visitors to shows to join Cage Birds League and assist to protect our hobby. I shall be glad to forward copies to anyone applying for them. I hope, therefore, that all secretaries will take advantage of the offer now made, and apply for the posters forthwith.

OUR LEAGUE SEALS.

These pretty seals are printed in gold and colours in exact fascimile of our Badges, and are an ornament to envelopes, notepaper, postcards, billheads, etc. All members should use them; price eightpence per hundred, post free. Smaller quantities at the hundred rate, but with one penny extra for postage.

OUR FREE BOOKLETS.

I have still some of each of the sixpenny pamphlets on British Bird Culture and on Canary and Hybrid Culture, and, as long as they last, one of either will be sent gratis to all new members applying for a copy at the time of joining. Old members who have not yet had a copy may receive one on sending a penny stamp for postage. Only one copy of either book can be sent, and when the stock in hand is exhausted, I may not be able to get a fresh supply, so applications (with membership fee) should be sent to me without delay.

SUBSCRIPTION AND BADGES.

The subscription to Cage Birds League is one shilling annually, and the badges sixpence or one shilling. The sixpenny badges are in three forms: (1) a button for coat lapel, (2) a pendant for watch chain, (3) a brooch for lapel, cycling cap, or for lady's wear. The badges at one shilling each are mounted in 9-carat rolled-gold, and are in two forms only: (1) a pendant for watch chain, (2) a brooch for a lady or for cycling cap or coat lapel. Members should distinctly state which form they prefer.

JUNIOR BRANCH.

The annual subscription to the Junior Branch, for members under fourteen years of age at the date of joining, is sixpence. Price of badges as above.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The qualification for Vice-Presidentship is an annual subscription of not less than half a guinea, and one-half of this subscription may be allotted to either the Literature Fund, the Defence Fund, or towards the purchase of special prizes to be given at any show nominated by the subscriber. Failing any such special allocation, the subscription will be devoted to the development and progressive work of the League, to advertising its objects and promoting its ideals.

PATRONS.

Ladies or gentlemen who are in sympathy with the objects of Cage Birds League may give practical expression to that sympathy by becoming Patrons of the League, and either making a lump sum donation to its funds or subscribing an annual amount of a guinea or upwards. One-half of such donation or subscription may be allotted to any individual object of the League.

Henry J. Fulljames,
Secretary, Cage Birds League.
154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Disappearing Dartford Warblers

There is one attractive and already very local little bird, the Dartford Warbler, which the conditions of the present year will have gone far towards exterminating, says a writer in "Country Life." It is a lover of the gorse, so much so that it may almost be said that gorse bushes and brakes are its sole habitat. The gorse is a plant of the wild, which has been becoming more restricted year by year for a very long while past. This dry summer there have been quite an unprecedented number of gorse and heath fires. They must have burnt out many of the habitations of the Dartford Warbler, which will now see these birds no more.

SOUTHAMPTON.

The 23rd show of the Southampton F.S. was held Dec. 6th, in the Carlton Drill Hall, which is well adopted for such a show. Entries were not so numerous as last year, but quality was good. Mr. Haysom judged. Mr. Kiddle, the sec., did everything to make the show a success, and is to be congratulated on his able efforts.

FALMOUTH.

Falmouth C.B.A. 6th annual show, held at the Town Hall, on December 6th. The hall is admirably adapted for a bird show, being well lighted and warm. The exhibits were well staged, in an up-to-date manner. Mr. W. J. Medlin, who is an old and tried fancier, did everything possible, both for the comfort of the birds and visitors. The entry was a great success, easily beating all previous records, there being 260 entries and an average of 14 per class in the open section. Norwich were particularly good, this part of the show being equal to many larger exhibitions, and the finest lot staged in Cornwall this year. Goldfinches were a strong class, and Yorkshires come up well, all the Cornish champions being present. Cinnamons were not as numerous as we should have liked, but we heard a rumour that it is probable an effort will be made next year to reinstate this variety into its old position in the West. Mr. Medlin was ably supported by a committee of good fanciers, Messrs. F. Beringer, E. Barnicoat., J. Treise, T. Medlin, J. Jeddy, sen., J. Cowan, all doing their level best to make matters run smoothly. Mr. Thos. Pope (Plymouth) judged, and the awards appeared to please all.

CANTERBURY.

Held Market Hall, December 6th. The birds were beautifully staged, quite an advance on previous years, and made a grand display. The quality of the Nor. was a revelation to Canterbury, several winners having taken premier honours at the late L.C.B.A. show. Mr. Ellis showed some grand ones, as also did Messrs. Gibbs and Taylor. The Yorkies were a fine lot; Mr. Gale showed a topper. The management was, as is usual, tip-top, Messrs. Gibbs, Taylor, Patterson and Casemore being old hands at the game. Mr. J. W. Sargeant, the secretary, had arrangements well in hand. Mr. Robson judged.

WEST OF SCOTLAND.

West of Scotland N. and B. F. C. M. B. and F.B.A. 22nd annual show, held Grand National Halls, Gorbals, Glasgow, 25th Nov. The weather was mild and clear, which means a lot to the holding of a show within the lofty walls of a populous city, and the venture proved a real success. Everything passed off without a hitch. The management, which is composed of real well-known fanciers, have as their secretary Mr. W. Hutchison, who knows all the ins and outs of working a show, and to him in a great measure is due much of the success of the show. The judging was in the hands of three capable men, who got through in grand time, and the hall was soon in readiness for the large numbers of friends. Mr. C. Campbell judged Nor., Mr. W. Mossie, Borders, and Mr. M. Craig, Mules, British and For., and on the whole their awards seemed to meet with general approval, as little grumbling was heard.

Canary Breeding for Beginners

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.

All the details of bird-breeding explained, while it shows the way out of all difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet St. London, E.C.

WANDSWORTH.

Wandsworth F.A. first cage bird show, held Dec. 6th and 7th, at Sutton Hall. This show is a good efforts made by the cage bird section of this society to do something special for their branch of the Fancy. There was a capital entry, and the birds were staged in a very comfortable room, well lighted both by day and night. Yorks. formed the main feature, and some good birds were staged. There were also a few nice classes of Nor., and among them come very fine specimens, some of the buffs being particularly good. Two classes of Borders filled well. British birds were a nice lot, particularly the Goldfinches. In this class Mr. C. Prior held the lead with a real good one. A few nice insectivorous birds and a capital class of foreigners made up a good collection. The hall was comfortably warmed, and during the evening there was a capital attendance. The show was ably managed by Mr. W. Lightfoot, the sec., who is all attention and has everything in capital order. He was ably assisted by Mrs. Owen and Messrs. Baker, Meats, Evershed, and Owen, junr., who paid every attention to the birds. Mr. H. Norman placed the cards.

TONBRIDGE.

Tonbridge 5th annual show, held in the Public Hall, on December 5th and 6th. Our section was staged away from the poultry, in a fine hall, with a good top light. The birds were nicely arranged down the centre, and made quite an imposing array. The entries were slightly in advance of last year's, and the quality considerably better. Yorks. were grouped upon the stage by themselves, and made quite a pretty display. Among them were some grand examples of the variety, some of the winners having fine length and quality of feather. Many members and local fanciers were exhibiting in the open, and did well in such competition. Nor. were a very fine lot, and in this section the local birds quite held their own. Mr. J. Bellamy's winning Yell. is quite high-class, and well deserves its position. There was a nice collection of Hybrids and British, the Goldfinch class being particularly good. The show was ably managed by the secretary, Mr. Percy Stonestreet, who is quite a capable man at the work. He had the assistance of Messrs. Smithers, Cross, Richards and Greenaway as stewards. Mr. J. Robson judged.

RUTHERGLEN.

Fifth annual show of the Rutherglen O.A., held November 18th, in the Rechabites' Hall, East King Street. Genial weather prevailed, and the management, all well-known fanciers, seemed all smiles at their good fortune. The Society have as their President Mr. Councillor Miller; Vice-President, Mr. R. H. Livingstone. The ever-green Mr. Jas. Lappin steers the ship, aye, and in the proper fashion, too. The committee, without exception, were all in the business, and deserved the thanks accorded them. Mr. Jas. Laurie (Govan) adjudicated, and his awards were well received.

LANCASTER (Primrose).

Lancaster Primrose C.B.A. fifth annual exhibition held in the Central Hall, Gt. John Street, on December 1st and 2nd. The room is large, and free from draughts; and it is well lighted. Mr. J. Johnson, the popular secretary, had the birds staged in good time, and the exhibits were well attended to during the show. In the Nor. and Yorks. section competition was very keen. The Borders, too, were a fine lot, if we bar the yellow class. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) judged Canaries, Selling, and Mules, and Mr. Mulliner (Lancaster) the Brit.

BETHESDA.

First annual show held in the United Club Room on Dec. 2nd. Rain came down in torrents early in the afternoon and kept on without a stop till hall was cleared; still the show was well attended by the quarry men. Serjeant Evans, the treasurer, is a good organiser in his new district. Mr. O. Thomas (secretary) was very courteous and obliging. Chairman of Committee, Dr. Lumley Roberts; Vice-Chairman, Dr. Bradley Hughes; the committee is a good one, the names being too numerous to mention. Mr. D. Roberts (Carnarvon), a capable hand, was well at work early in the day with the stewards. The show was carried on very well indeed. The room was a good size, but the light was not very pleasing, the birds having to be carried to the light in a good many instances. Entries numbered 250 in the 24 classes. Yorkshires were a record entry, quality very good. Nor. were not so well represented as we expected, but they were a level lot for size and quality. Mules were good in number and quality. Goldies, as usual, were a treat in themselves. We were pleased to see a class of Rollers added and a good class they were. Britisb showed a great improvement in condition. Specials were won by Serjeant Evans and Messrs. W. Jones, D. G. Jones, G. Jones, E. J. Jones, A. W. Huxley, R. Angel, Pike, Edwards, D. Roberts, J. Parry, Evans and Roberts, Lovell, J. W. Pritchard, R. E. Griffiths, Williams, and T. Owen. Mr. Battye (Huddersfield) made the awards.

BELFAST.

Ulster O.A. 19th annual open show held in the Clarence Hall, Belfast, on Dec. 1st and 2nd. This being our first visit to the "Ould Countrie" we were greatly impressed by the general state of the Fancy. We expected to find, naturally a good lot of birds, but they were put in the shade when compared with the good fellowship that exists in the Fancy at Belfast. No jealousy is to be found here; the loser congratulates the successful, and promises him a return "good hiding" at the next show. We have seen some systems at shows, but none to compare with the business methods adopted by this show management. Birds are staged in ideal positions, and there is no crushing to get to the winners, or kinks in one's neck by having to look up all the time. The room was lighted to perfection, and the doors were well curtained to keep out our arch-enemy, the draught. The hall is kept at an even temperature, with stewards at each section. No wonder the Ulster O.A. has earned the title of the Palace Show of Ireland. Long may it retain the title. The executive provided 57 open classes. These brought together a magnificent entry of over 400 birds, this number being a few ahead of last year's. Some excellent Scotch Fancies were on view, and, as Mr. Black the judge said, they would hold their own in "the land o' Burns." Nor. were eye-openers to us, and it would do some of the English N.P.C. members good to see the type and quality here. British birds and Mules turned up in force. A hot-red Greenie Mule, shown by Mr. Alexander, was brought out by Mr. Marlin for the hottest fed in show. Mr. Metcalfe nominated Mr. Thompson's noted buff, which got the verdict in a tight finish. The challenge cup was won outright by Mr. J. Thompson, this being his third win. Mr. Faith secured Sandiford's medal, Ramsden's going to Mr. Thompson's buff. Mr. Dunwoody won the Yorks. medal, and Mr. Laughlin the novice medal. We wondered where all the specials came from, as it took the judges over a hour to allot them. We cannot single out any of the workers for special mention, as everybody seemed to know what was required of him. The secretary, Mr. R. Trimble, is the man at the wheel, and a jolly good lot of fanciers he has at his finger ends. The following gentlemen placed the awards in the various sections: Scotch Fancy, Mr. Black (Glasgow); British and Mules, Mr. Marlin (Hamilton); Yorks. and Nor., Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool); and their placings gave entire satisfaction.

A VERY GOOD SHOW AT DERBY.

RECORD IN NUMBERS.

Fifty-second exhibition held Dec. 2nd and 4th. The St James' Hall, in which the exhibits were housed, is of a very spacious character, lofty and well ventilated, well lighted, and absolutely free from draughts. Upwards of 700 birds were staged, thus creating a record as regards numbers; but we are sorry to say that the society will be at least £6 down. Hard luck this, after offering so capital a schedule with 22/- per class prize money. Crests and Crestbreds were the main "back sliders"; and with the worthy president of the C.C.C. (Mr. R. Rhodes) officiating aa judge, there should have been a much better response. Norwich were the feature of the show as regards quality. The President is Mr. F. H. Rainsford, an excellent official; Chairman, Mr. W. H. Eley, who controls admirably, with Mr. J. H. Sharman as a capable understudy. The committee consists of a band of experienced and willing fanciers in Messrs. A. Dolman, T. W. Evans, G. Colledge, J. Watts, H. Bamsey, E. C. Johnson, R. Hodgkinson, J. Pegg, J. H. Drakeley, and A. Hicking. All worked with a will and deserve every praise. Mr. W. Stevens (the Treas., and Sec.) is the right man in the right place, always doing the right thing at the right time; being courteous and obliging and keeping top side of his dutiea throughout. We heard that he is retiring from the secretarial duties this year. Avoid such a thing occuring Derby; he is too useful a man to let slip. Amongst the many visitors present were Messrs. J. Hopkins (Bolton), W. Vardy (Hucknall), E. Fox (Long Eaton), H. Hathaway (Burton-on-Trent) and J. Bexson (our old and esteemed friend, in the best of spirits, and in his glory amongst them). Our attention was drawn by the secretary to a misprint in the catalogue; Class 5, Nos. 6 and 7 (S. Cook) should read bowl instead of cup. The exhibits of Mr. A. Wood arrived too late for judging, not getting delivered at the show until 4-30 p.m Saturday. Between 60 and 70 cases of exhibits did not arrive until 9 am. Saturday morning, which meant a later commencement of judging, both Messrs. J. Robson and R. Rhodes being ready for some time to make a start. Is it the railway company's fault again? Catalogues with awards printed were on sale, 45 minutes after the last slip was handed in—commendable promptness this. Mr. A. J. A. Marley won the President's spl. for most points in Brit., with J. M. Walsh a good 2nd; Sandiford's Mr. J. Pegg; Challenge Cup (members best young Nor.) Mr. T. Thompson; and Mr. G. Colledge cup for best young Yellow Crest. Stewards who acted in a praiseworthy manner were Messrs. T. Thomas, R. Barber, J. Baker, T. Thompson, G. H. Wharam, H. T. G. Bamsey, A. Hicking, F. J. Cockerham, and J. H. Drakeley, the last-mentioned seeing that the seeding and watering duties were correctly executed. Staging, three tier high, was admirably done, great credit being due to Mr. Ford for such a neat arrangement. The management throughout was superb. Judges, Messrs. R. Rhodes (Nottingham), Crests and Crest-breds, and J. Robson the remainder.

The Critique.

NOR. CHAMP. CL. ETC., YELL. HALIFAX.

Halifax O.S. 22nd annual open exhibition held Dec. 1 and 2, in the large room of the Saddle Hotel, Market Street, nearly 500 birds being staged in the 33 classes, this number, however, falling far short of that usually seen. Unfortunately, the society could not get their usual place for the show, i.e., the Mechanics' Hall, this being engaged as a picture-drome, and they had to revert to their old place. This, though a good room, is not as large as they require. The society hope, however, to be able to get a larger one in future. The society are happy in the possession of some hard workers, who, with Mr. J. J. Dunn, the able secretary, at their head, had everything in good order, prize money being paid out on the spot to those present. Amongst the workers we noted Mr. Ross (president), Messrs. Lee, Sutcliffe, and Armstrong (vice-pres.), Mr. F. Burdekin (assist. sec.), and Messrs. Jeffreys, Walsh, Robertshaw, Ball, J. Burdekin, Cundall, Clegg, Townsend, Sutcliffe, T. Pilling, Dewhurst, and Haigh. Messrs. Ogden Bros. secured first prize for points in the nine premier classes, Mr. J. Bailey taking second place, and Mr. Rigg third. In Classes 10 to 15, Mr. Towers took premier prize, Mr. Bailey second; in Classes 16 and 17, Mr. T. Pilling secured most points. Norwich section, Mr. J. Thomas first, Mr. Mallinson second; British, Mr. Lee premier honours. Messrs. Sutcliffe, Smith, and Grayshon won specials in the Yorks. novice section, whilst in the Nor. novice, Mr. Hudson held sway. Hyde's special, Mr. Robertshaw, Ramsden's Mr. W. Johnson; Sandiford's medals, Messrs. Broughton (Yorks.), and Thomas (Nor.). Messrs. A. Hirst (Accrington) and A. Wellings (Prescot) judged, the former taking all open Yorks. except greens, and all the Yorks. novice classes, the latter taking Nor., Brit., Sell., Greens, and Nor. Novice.

NEW CROSS.

New Cross C.B.S. show held at the People's Hall, Deptford, November 16th. Though the show was not large, many fine birds were staged. The whole of the exhibits were shown in beautiful condition. In the Brothers Barton this society have two excellent secretaries, and they were very ably supported by the chairman, Mr. G. Hill, and a good committee. A good attendance crowned their efforts. It was thought by some present that Mr. Gunnell's winning Nor. should not have taken special for best Canary owing to its being one too short; opinions on the point, however, differed. Mr. J. Robson judged.

GRANTHAM.

A Light Mule Disqualified for Alleged Artificial Colouring.

Grantham and Dis. C.B.S. first annual open show held in the Auction Mart, Fenkin Street, on November 30th. The members are to be congratulated upon having such a good entry, considering this was their first attempt at an open show. On Nov. 26, their entries closing date, the birds entered only numbered 80, but with an extra effort in sending out a few whip-up postcards, their efforts were rewarded with the good entry of 210 exhibits. Norwich were a disappointment, only averaging just over 7 per class. Although such a small average, winner for best bird in show fell to Mr. Holmes' variegated yellow Norwich. Yorks. were well to the front, and some excellent specimens were shown. The Mule or Hybrid class had an excellent entry. The British birds were far in advance of all other sections, all the birds in the Goldfinch class (17 entries) being worthy of a card. The sensation of the show in our way of thinking was a buff Dark Crest hen, winner in the "any other variety" class, shown by Mr. E. Cowperthwaite; this grand Crest found a great many admirers. The secretarial duties were ably carried by Mr. W. E. Allen, who was heart and soul in his work, and was intent on making the show a success. He was assisted by a hard working committee and stewards, all being practical fanciers, viz., Messrs. Bond, Cyrer, Parsons, Waite, Ratcliffe, Ward Vincent, Cragg, Louther, and Lockton. The Goldfinch Canary exhibited by Mr. H. Mackynder (Newark) was disqualified by Mr. Vardy for alleged staining. Mr. Vardy placed the cards, and his awards were well received.

GALSTON.

Galston O.A. annual show held in the Good Templars' Hall, on Dec. 2nd. We regret to have to chronicle the fact that it was unsatisfactory as regards quantity. The management is all that could be desired, and they deserved much more encouragement from the fanciers of the district. Mr. A. Frew, the secretary, is an able organiser, and knows how to run a show to a successful issue, providing the necessary support is forthcoming from the exhibiting public. Between 70 and 80 entries in 25 classes is most discouraging, and we should not wonder if the venture proved a costly one for those in charge. There are any number of well-known fanciers within easy reach, and we cannot account for such a poor entry in the cage bird section. Buck up, Galston, and make the next show a bumping success. Mr. Holden (Muirkirk) judged, and his awards were satisfactorily made.

WHITBURN (N.B.).

Annual show held December 2nd. It proved to be one of the society's most successful exhibitions. Norwich, although a shade down in number, were good in quality, and in this section was found the successful competitor for the Ure challenge cup—Mr. Morrison, who scored four 1sts and one 2nd with five nominated birds. Borders were the feature of the show, such a collection being seldom brought together at a country show. Medal for best Border was awarded to Mr. Haddow's yell. even, while Mr. J. Johnstone's ycll. foul green was runner up and secured spl. for best Green. The Greens were a great collection, and all the season's winners were again doing battle. We would like to draw the attention of the committee to the fact that it would probably pay them to add some individual hen classes in the Canary section, as a "cock or hen" classification tends to keep the hens from competing. Mules and British were a very fine lot, the well-known Scotch exhibitor, Mr. P. McQuiston having forward some very good ones. Mr. Wm. Bishop judged Nor. and Brit. up to the Redpoll or Twite class, and Mr. J. W. Bruce (Coldstream) the Borders and the remaining Brit., Mules and Foreign birds. They got through their work in a capable manner, and their awards were well received. Mr. Duncan, the worthy secretary, had everything well in hand, and was assisted by an enthusiastic committee. We were pleased to hear that the worthy President, Bailie Lambie, is now convalescent after his severe accident, and that he was able to journey to New Stevenston to fulfil his engagement of judging.

SHEERNESS.

Twenty-ninth annual show (open to Sheppey), held at Bethel Hall, Hope Street, an ideal place for a show. Our section was staged on the platform. There was a nice light, and all exhibits could easily be seen. Entries were small, but there were some very nice Norwich and Yorks. amongst the winners. We found Mr. Murphy, the secretary, most obliging, and with a good staff of stewards to help him. Everything was well carried out. We hope to see them next year, open to Kent in our section. Mr. F. J. Wickham (Chatham) judged, and gave satisfaction.

SITTINGBOURNE.

This young society brought off their 1st annual show of cage birds, Nov. 29. The room was free from draughts, a very excellent place for a show; but it might be improved with another light. The birds were well arranged, giving everyone a good view of them. The quality of the exhibits was well up to standard. It looks like becoming one of the leading C.B. shows in the County. Mr. B. Tidy was very obliging, and everything was carried out in an able manner. Besides looking after his splendid committee he was attending CAGE BIRDS' stall, where were displayed instructive books and pamphlets on cage bird keeping. There was a good attendance, and it looks like being a well-deserved first success. Mr. Gibbs judged.

CUPAR (Fife).

Twenty-fourth annual show of the Cupar O.S., held in the Corn Exchange, Dec. 2nd. Cage birds were staged in a room upstairs, but they were a failure. The whole of the Scotch Fancy classes, and all the Plainhead classes except two, had to be cancelled. Borders were a nice turnout, showing an average of about 10 per class. The Border Club medal was won by Mr. Munro's yellow cock bird. Hyde's teapot and special were won by Mr. J. S. Keltie, with a nice Scotch Fancy. Yorks. had only 4 birds in the cock class, and the hen class was cancelled. All British bird classes were cancelled, except Goldfinches and Linnets. It is difficult to understand the reason of such a poor entry. The classification was very good; in fact, much superior to that of many shows which get a good entry; while the members of the Committee who had charge of the birds gave every attention to them, and were also very courteous to visitors. The Secretary, Mr. D. J. Bruce, is also one of the best, and worked very hard indeed to make the show a success. It is to be hoped that fanciers will give him a lift when his next venture comes round, so that the cage bird section of this good old society will be carried on as successfully as other Fife shows are. Messrs. G. Hyslop, W. Thornton and A. W. Watson judged.

DEAL WALMER.

Seventh annual show (20 miles radius) held Nov. 22nd and 23rd, in the Nelson Hall, Nelson-street, a comfortable and suitable place for a show. The cage birds numbered 96, and were an interesting and good quality lot. Mr. G. Johnson won the "Chitty" cup, silver medal for most points in cage birds Mr. W. H. Thompson. Arrangements were admirably carried out by the secs., Messrs. Thompson and Lacy, and they received considerable assistance from Messrs. C. R. Mowle and G. Prior, the cage bird stewards. Mr. H. E. Taylor judged.

BLAIRGOWRIE.

Third annual exhibition of the East Perthshire O.A., held in the Public Hall, Blairgowrie, on Dec. 2. The hall, for splendid light and everything essential for a cage bird show, has few equals; it was kept at a very nice, even temperature, which made it a pleasure to visitors, who came out in large numbers. The cage birds were nicely staged on the platform, and, taken all over, the entry was a good one, being nearly 100 better than last year. Norwich, both Crests and Plainheads, were a sweet collection, several good ones being staged, and the quality throughout was of a very high order. Borders were out in large numbers, some lovely specimens of the "Wee Gem" being staged. The British classes made a fine display, both in numbers and quality. The feature of the show was the splendid team of foreign birds from Captain Rice's aviaries, such a lovely collection being seldom seen. The society are fortunate in having the liberal support of the gentry and merchants of the district. The hon. secretary and treasurer, Mr. M. Irvine, is an official whom any society would be proud of. He worked well to make the show a success, and was ably assisted by a committee of well-known fanciers, viz.: President, Mr. C. H. Scott; vice-president, Mr. T. Menzies; committee, Messrs. A. Anderson, A. C. Prain, J. Henderson, J. Rodger, D. Gow, R. Irvine, J. Keay, jun., D. R. Butchart, A. Blaikie, A. Thomson, W. Hovelsroud, and J. C. Hunter. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE leaflets were distributed to all who entered the hall, and it was hoped this would be the means of spreading the usefulness of the League to this part of Scotland. The judging was in the able hands of Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh), who got through his work in his incomparable and masterly manner, and his awards gave satisfaction to all.

DULWICH & PECKHAM C.B.S.

Eighth annual show, held Reindeer Hotel, Rye Lane, Peckham, Nov. 21st. Once again this Society-have to be congratulated upon having successfully carried out their annual show, which, while not remarkable for the number of exhibits, was particularly so in quality. That doughty champion from Devonport, Mr. W. Spillman, was successful in carrying off the members' Y.B. bowl, and also the fine "News of the World" trophy. The attendance was very heavy, so much so that movement was accomplished with difficulty. Judging (favoured by an excellent light) was over early, and catalogues with awards were on sale by 5.30. The show managers, Messrs. Hodson and Tomsett, were very busy, whilst assistance was rendered hy Messrs. Crawford, Austin, Richardson, and Tringham (chairman). Cup for most points throughout show was won by Mr. H. C. Tringham, after a close tussle with Mr. C. Botting, of British bird fame (last year's winner). Mr. J. Robson judged. During the evening the President, John Bright Crowe, Esq., congratulated the members upon the excellence of their exhibition, and also upon the fact which had just been communicated to him, that the Society were now free from all financial liability, which, he remarked, was much more than many influential concerns were able to say. In responding, the Chairman, Mr. H. E. Tringham, referred feelingly to the days of struggle and worry through which they had literally fought their way, in the face of the most bitter opposition, but pointed out that it was due to their indefatigable secretary, Mr. W. Hodson, that they were able to come through safely, and in recent years they were also ably assisted by one of the hest workers they ever could expect to have, in Mr. W. Tomsett. The Society, which had been doing much good work in a quiet way, would now make a big fight to obtain the place it formerly occupied in the very front rank of London societies. During the evening the President was asked to accept, as a memento of the appreciation and respect in which he was held by members, a Norwich Canary in cage, which was suitably acknowledged.

CRADLEY HEATH.

Fifth annual show in connection with this well-managed society, held Nov. 29 and 30, in the Graingers Lane School, kindly lent by the Managers. The place is well adapted for a show, being well lighted, free from draughts, and nicely warmed. The show upheld its reputation for being one of the best in the district. Entries came up well. The secretary, Mr. H. Grainger, had everything in good order, and was assisted by a capable band of stewards. Judging was over quickly and cards were soon up. Mr. A. de Winton judged.

PENTREBACH.

Second open show of the Pentrebach and Dis. F.S. held New Hall, Nov. 30. Our section was staged at the far end of the huge hall, which was kept nicely heated by means of four great fires, which gave the place a very cheery appearance. The stewards, Messrs. J. H. Jones and W. Williams, gave the exhibits every attention, and had the award cards up very promptly; Mr. G. L. Harber also lent valuable assistance to the stewards during judging. Mr. A. E. Brown made a very enthusiastic and courteous secretary, and to his untiring energy a great deal of the success of our section is to be attributed. Canaries were very strong, some real toppers being staged in the Nor. and Yorks. sections. Cup for best bird in show was won by Mr. H. S. Davies with his noted King Parrot, and special for second best by Messrs. James and Wells with a Cl. Yell. Yorks cock, a very fine exhibit. Mr. T. L. Castree judged.

Practical Handbooks for Bird Lovers.

Brief particulars of some of "Cage Birds" SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS for keepers of birds, with post free prices.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and eggs. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions npon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 250 2/-, 500 2/6, carriage paid.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Published in 8 Monthly Parts at 6d. each, post free 7d. Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid. The practical and comprehensive work for which all Hybrid breeders have been waiting.

The Manager, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

SELKIRK.

The 50th annual show was held on November 25th, in the Volunteer Hall. The cage birds were staged at the end at a nice height. The hall is well lighted from the roof and sides, and although the day was a cold one, the exhibits seemed quite comfortable. The entry in the Border Fancy section was similar to last year, and quality was very good. Mr. J. Patterson, jun., won B.F.C.C. medal, also special for best bird in show with a treat of a clear yellow hen. Messrs. A. and W. Thomson were close runners-up. The Society are fortunate in their secretary, Mr. R. Emond, jun., who, although very young, had everything well in band, being very courteous and obliging. Messrs. J. Pringle and A. Rodger were the stewards, assisted by Mr. Thomson. Mr. J. Alexander (Lilliesleaf) made the awards, which were well received. All Norwich classes were cancelled for want of entries.

STIRLING.

Stirling and Dist. C.B.S. annual exhibition held in the Lesser Albert Hall, Nov. 18th. Although confined to members, the very creditable entry of 400 birds in all proved the members all very much alive, and many open show managers could do worse than copy the methods of this up-to-date society. The hall is a grand one, well lit, and roomy, and the executive are a hard-working band, being ably led by the president, Mr. W. Summers. The post of secretary is always a difficult one to fill, and the society is to be congratulated on having the perfect model in Mr. W. Bishop, who goes about his duties in such a methodical manner that nothing is left to chance, while for tact and courtesy he is very bad to beat. Quality was of no mean order, a good few well-known winners being forward in all sections to do battle for their owners. Judging was over by two o'clock, and we were agreeably surprised to get a catalogue, fully marked with awards, by three o'clock. Do the printers also belong to the society? Mr. J. Winter (Edinburgh) placed the cards in the Norwich and Crest sections, Mr. D. Hamilton (Hamilton) in Scotch Fancy and Border sections, and Mr. R. V. Raine (Cathcart) Brit., Mules and Yorks. All the awards were well received. Principal special winners: Best Nor., W. Bishop; best Crest or C.B., A. McDougall; best Border, W. Munro; best Brit., P. Arnott.

BIGGAR, N.B.

Annual show held Nov. 18, in the Municipal Hall—a well-lighted, warm place, suitable in every way for such a show. The birds were nicely staged, and the quality was good throughout, especially in the British bird section. Messrs. Mossie (Annbank) and Mason (Peebles) judged, and their awards were well received. Much of the success of the show is undoubtedly due to the untiring efforts of the sec., Mr. F. H. Anderson, who was ably assisted by the members.

LOWESTOFT.

Lowestoft and Dis. C.B.S. 5th annual show held Nov. 23rd, in Mr. Kirk's rooms, Mill-road, which he kindly placed free of all charges at the society's disposal. Entries were larger than last years, and the quality in the Norwich section was especially noticeable, some rare good specimens facing the judge, Mr. W. E. Greeves. At this show Mr. Rackham won the cup presented to the society in 1907 by Mrs. R. Leach; having won it three times in four years it now becomes his own property. The society wish especially to thank Mr. Kirk for his great kindness and help, as also Messrs. Hart, Bagshaw and Saunders for their valuable assistance. The secretary, Mr. F. Rackham, had arrangements well in hand, and everything passed off well.

CAMBRIDGE.

Eighteenth open show of the Cambridge O.S. held Corn Exchange (one of the most spacious halls in the provinces), on Nov. 29th and 30th. We always anticipate a good show of cage birds, especially Britishers, at this annual event, but were disappointed to find that no less than 22 out of 28 classes had been cancelled, notwithstanding the fact that full prize money was guaranteed. All classes, however, were cancelled, having less than ten entries, and this, of course, was the chief cause of so few standing. The arrangements were all that could be desired, under the able leadership of the hon. secs., Messrs. Unwin and Howlett, while there was an excellent trio of stewards in Messrs. Edwards, Roff, and Wallman in the cage bird department. Mr. T. J. Ambrose made the awards.

CREST OR C.B. (11): 1, challenge cup for best Can. in show, Palmer, very fine buff, dark expensive crest of excellent formation and wealth of body feather; 2, r, Brooks, cl. bodied buff, with slightly grizzled crest, nicely made, good centre, r cl. body, very nice dark crest; 3, Harrison, very fine big green C.B., extra good lash, rare col.; vhc, Harrison; hc, Reeder; c, Betts. GOLDFINCH (10): 1, cup, Jupe, lovely Finch, rich col., expansive blaze, brilliant body col., in rare bloom; 2, Wallman, very smart, good square blaze, in excellent condition, hardly equal to winner in tanning yet; 3, Hawkins, nice bright blaze; r, Allington; vhc, King; hc, Baxter; c, Moore. LOCAL, £3, A.V. CAN., BRED 1911 (3): 1, sp, 2, 3, Papworth, really very fine Golden Liz., clear cap, well spangled, rich in col., wins, 2nd smart yell. Bord., 3rd another very nice Liz.; r, Miss Borrer; vhc, Brooks; hc, Wesson; c, Langley. LINNET, ETC. (11): 1, 2 sps, 2, Wallman, very nice steady Linnet, 2nd better col., distinct markings, some thought might have won; 3, Williams, very fine Mealy Redpoll, nice pencilling, good bill; r, Hearn, smart Siskin, good col; vhc, Roff; hc, Smith. GOLDFINCH, ETC. (11): 1, Botwright, very nice Goldfinch, excels in blaze and tanning; 2, 3, Wallman, nice steady Goldfinch, good col., blaze, 3rd good col. Bullfinch, well formed dense cap, a read Britisher; r, Smith, another nice Bullie; vhc, Williams; hc, Todd; c, Cutting.

CHICHESTER.

Held November 23rd and 24th, Corn Exchange, and was a great success. The entry was nearly 150—excellent, considering it was only a 12-miles radius show. The quality was good, especially in British birds. Mr. Burr captured most of the spoils, including cup for best British. Messrs. Stone and Hay are two capital secretaries, and were backed up by a good working committee. Mr. W. R. Miles judged.

AYR O.S.

Ayr O.S. 50th annual show, held 25th Nov. It was confidently considered that this, the Jubilee year of the society's existence, would have been of sufficient importance to have drawn all the cream of the Fancy from a wide radius. We regret, however, as one of the civic dignitaries of the "auld toon" would have said "it did not materialise." Perhaps the greatest attraction of the show was Mr. Miller's remarkably distinct talking Starling in the British Bird class. When it asked to "Play up the Band, Dicky wants a dance," all within hearing were greatly amused. Almost as attractive was Mr. White's Mynah, and the sayings of the two during the day put the visitors in good humour. On this occasion the venue was the spacious building put up comparatively recently as a skating rink, and for space, comfort and light we know of no superior place in the West of Scotland. We sympathise with Mr. C. W. Paterson, secretary, and his hard working brothers, and are sorry their untiring energies did not meet with a more merited reward. The other members of committee, all good Fanciers and true, also merit a word of praise for the business-like way in which they went about their work, and it is regrettable to record that the result of their labours will, we fear, end in financial loss. Mr. Robson judged.

DENNY & DUNIPACE, N.B.

Sixteenth annual show held in the Foresters' Hall, Denny, on Nov. 25, when a capital lot of birds were got together. It was a grand show right through. The Crests, Norwich, and Border Fancies were a particularly good lot, some of the winners being hard to separate. The management was excellent. The president is Mr. J. Marshall, the vice-president Mr. Gavin M'Murdo, and the sec. Mr. A. France (a real good worker), who all put themselves out to make the show a success. Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh) judged, and his awards appeared to please everyone present.

DUNDALK.

Fifth annual show of the Dundalk C.B.A. held November 16th and 17th, at the Market House. Yet another success was scored by this most enterprising society. The room utilised this season is one of the finest halls in Ireland for a show, and we understand, too, it is much cheaper than the Town Hall. The room is entirely free from draughts, and splendidly lighted. There is one thing about the Dundalk fanciers; they do look well after the birds during the time they are entrusted to their care, and this being well known throughout Ireland is it any wonder we find the show such a huge success? All the birds were staged on the three-tier system, so that every bird could be seen to the best advantage. The hon. secretary (Mr. T. Walters) had everything well in hand, and was ably assisted by a willing and hard-working body of experienced fanciers, every man having his own work cut out; and one and all did their utmost to make the birds comfortable. Dr. Lavery and Mr. Keating were again at their posts; both are old hands at staging and in the general running of a successful show. Exhibitors are also indebted to the following members of committee for looking after the welfare of their birds: Messrs. Byrne, Duff, McEntaggart, McArdle, Gaskin, McKeown, Kirk and Kelly. The quality of the exhibits was of the finest and far beyond that of all previous exhibitions. Yorks., the general favourite, came out on top. Norwich and Crests were conspicuous by their aims and objects. This section for some reason or other never has proved a success. Britishers and Hybrids turned up splendidly, Mr. Lavery holding leading honours and most points, while Mr. Dawson was a good second. The specials were numerous: 10s. 6d. to Mr. Tansey for best Yorks. cock; 10s. 6d. for best Yorks. hen, Mr. O'Rielly; other specials were won by Messrs. Hawkins, Gaskin, Devins, Holley, Faith, Carroll, Dawson, Cottrell and Herbert, Birse and Curley. Sales were pretty good. The cards were placed by Mr. R. Halliday (Shipley, Yorks.), and his awards gave entire satisfaction.

BRISTOL C.B.S

Fifth annual show, as last year was again confined to members; held Nov. 25th, at the Central Auction Mart, St. Stephen's Street. Although not over large, it was comfortable. The birds were tastefully arranged, and the benches decorated with ferns and palms, giving a very pleasing aspect to the showroom. Entries came up to those of last year. Nor. showed a decided improvement in entries and quality, and were a show in themselves. Yorks, too, showed an increase in entries. British birds were a failure in entries, but several noted winners appeared. Cup for best young Nor., Mrs. M. A. Tristem, also rose bowl for best ladies' exhibit, Mr. F. L. Folwell being reserve. Mr. A. A. Pool captured the Yorks. cup for the first time, Mr. A. E. Lovell being reserve; Mr. W. H. Manley secured the British cup (for bird moulted by a member) with a big bouncing Hawfinch, Mrs. Garland being reserve. Mr. J. Houghton captured medal for hottest fed; and Mr. E. Stonelake for best light mule. The ladies, Mrs. Pool, Mrs. Garland and Mrs. Tristem, once again worked hard, supported by an energetic committee. Mr. J. N. Harrison, judged.

GRANGEMOUTH (N.B.).

Thirteenth annual show held Town Hall, November 11th, when close upon 600 exhibits faced the judges. This number constitutes a record show. A well-lighted hall gave the judges every opportunity of placing the exhibits to advantage. Scotch Fancies were a fine lot, although the crisp frost in the morning put a few of them back for the time being. Crests, Crest-breds, and Plainheads were a good lot, many previous winners taking a back seat. Borders were the strongest lot, and included some tip-top specimens. Mules, British, and Foreign birds were the finest we have seen for a long time, both as to numbers and quality. The office-bearers are to be congratulated upon the businesslike way in which they conducted this great exhibition. Mr. J. Macpherson (president), Mr. J. Reid (vice-president), and Mr. Wm. Scaife (treasurer) were in constant attendance upon their guiding star, the secretary (Mr. J. D. Miller), who deserves much praise for his splendid management; and we are pleased to state that everything passed off satisfactorily. Borders and Scotch Fancies were placed by Mr. T. Todd (Edinburgh), Norwich by Mr. J. Smeaton (Musselburgb), and Mules, British, and Foreign by Mr. D. J. Gardner (Bathgate). During the afternoon the hall was packed with visitors.

WALLSEND.

Wallsend C.B.A. sixth annual show held A.O.F. Hall, Nov. 11th. The day proved fine and the birds were in fine condition, as the hall was warm and well lighted. Entries totalled 326. Norwich were a strong section and a great improvement on former years. Mr. McGinn won the Percy Hood cup for most points with 78 points, Mr. Slack coming next with 75, Mr. J. Hislop third, and Mr. J. Johnston fourth. Borders were the second strongest; 19 greens were classified, a stickler for the judge. Yorks were rather few, but of high quality. Cinnamons and Crests were not numerous, but they were good. The Mule and British section was not strong as formerly, but Mr. Maddison had some work to do in sorting the birds out. The President (the Mayor, Ald. M. W. Swinburn) and the Mayoress visited the show; they expressed themselves as highly delighted with the whole appearance of the show. The success of the show proved the ability and hard work of the committee; everything was ready for the judges by 9 o'clock. Messrs. T. Dixon and J. Maddison judged and gave every satisfaction. Mr. J. Johnston (show manager) showed visitors round and welcomed all. The secretarial duties were carefully and admirably carried out by Messrs. J. M. Macdonald and J. Evans. A large number of ladies visited the exhibition and seemed very much interested in the birds.

KING'S LYNN.

King's Lynn annual show, held Nov. 13, Blackfriars Hall, with a record entry. In 25 classes, 300 birds were staged, and a grand display they made, especially in the Nor. section. The Clear Buff Norwich, exhibited by Mr. T. Edmunds, took prize for best bird in show, also taking cup for best unflighted Nor. The Secretary (Mr. A. R. Kent) ever willing, courteous and obliging, is the right man for the position; and such practical fanciers as Messrs. R. Hately, T. Ricketts, W. Breeze, and R. Harrod acted as stewards, and did their best to bring the show to a successful issue. They are to be complimented on the selection of the hall, this being in the centre of the town; it is very spacious, and has plenty of light, and is free from draughts. The judge, Mr. W. P. Barnes (Grantham) placed the cards, and his awards appeared to please everyone.

LEEDS ROLLER C.C.

Sixth annual contest held Nov. 10th, Temperance Society's Rooms, New York St., an ideal place for a cage bird contest, being free from draughts, well lighted, and kept at a nice temperature. Entries turned up well, there being 152 in 5 classes. Judges, Messrs. Lester (London) and Wareing (Bury). Many visitors and friends from a distance attended. The contest was a success all through. Much of the success of the show is undoubtedly due to the efforts of the hon. sec., Mr. H. L. Davis, who left no stone unturned to ensure the successful issue of the event. Dr. A. E. Reed won the challenge cup (members').

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eigh teen. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

NOT ONE OR TWO

but hundreds upon hundreds of testimonials have been published in this paper from purchasers of my catching appliances. I do not wish to boast, but have no hesitation in saying that I have published more testimonials in one week than any other net maker has in a year. Surely this fact should prove to you who is really the man to supply genuine articles at rock bottom prices. Everything I sell is guaranteed exactly as described, and you are at liberty to smash them up if you find them not so, and I will refund every penny of your money. Clap-nets made from superfine thread netting, ½in. mesh, 3 yards long, 6½ft. deep and 4ft. fly, 4/- pair, ditto 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. All clap-nets have two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed size as stated, and all are fitted complete with hemp lines, stave poles, and pegs ready for immediate use. These nets are the only clap-nets on the market that are geared or armed all round, and have no old-fashioned socket and iron arrangement about them, the fittings I supply being far better and easier to work. Sparrow-nets, made with extra stout ½ mesh netting, fitted on best quality bamboo poles, with latest improved elbows, 15ft. poles, 5/6; 17ft., 6/-; 19ft., 6/6 complete. Latest improved self-acting spring net traps (all metal, not a particle of wood about them) 24ins. long 18ins. wide, 1/- each, ditto 18 by 14ins., 9d. each. These net traps are different to any other on the market, and although far larger, may be carried in the pocket, and are invisible when set. May be used with call bird inside them, and do not go off with a bang. Carriage on these treps, 8d. extra. Round or square topped call cages, all wire tops and wood bottoms, 4d. each, 3/- dozen. Loose thread netting, as used in above clap-nets, 7ft. deep, 3d. yard, 9ft. deep, 4d. yard, 12ft. deep, 5d. yard. Lark netting, 1½in. mesh, 10ft. deep, 5d. yard. Extra stout netting for use on rough ground, ½ mesh, 9ft. deep, 5d. yard; ½in. mesh netting, 8ft. deep, 5d. yard; all netting post free. Real original Japanese bird lime, guaranteed absolutely strongest made, and only lime to hold birds in rain or fog, ½lb. 6d., ½lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample 3d., all postfree. Please note this is the original Japanese lime as advertised and sold by myself only for years past, and must not be confused with any other so-called Japanese lime offered by persons who have merely copied name of my lime, but cannot copy quality (see testimonials below). Genuine hand-spun pure hemp, pull lines, guaranteed strong as boat lines, and not to stretch or snarl, 68 yards long, ½lb. weight, 1/4 each, carriage paid. Lark nets, stave poles, flirt pegs, and everything required by catchers always in stock, but before you buy a stitch of anything send stamp for my full printed list, which gives hints on net making. Please note everything I sell is on approval, an dmoney refunded in full if every satisfaction not given. If you want genuine articles, send to the man who knows what is required for successful catching, but be sure to send for price list.

Beautifully Illustrated, with 34 Coloured Plates and Numerous Engravings in Black and White.

This is the most authoritative and superb book on the subject ever issued. Every detail is expertly explained and charmingly treated. It is practical and explicit on all points of breeding, rearing, and keeping in healthy condition the world's brilliant and beautiful songsters. Each aspect of the bird's life is dealt with, so that those who possess this work are never at a loss as to the best course to pursue at all times.

SUCCESS HAS FOLLOWED OUR ANNOUNCEMENT OF THIS WORK.

Send for it and Test it without Spending a Penny.

Whether you simply keep birds for the pleasure of their song and the constant charm of their companionship in the home, or for exhibition and competition purposes and the profit that can be obtained from their marketing, this work affords you all the information you can desire. The writers of the work are men of the most intimate knowledge of bird life and bird-keeping—men of large experience in the handling of birds—who possess the art of imparting the information in clear and understandable language, while the splendid illustrations are all drawn from actual life in the case of the birds, and in respect to cages, aviaries and everything required in bird-keeping, the pictures and diagrams fully explain every detail.

Before You Purchase

a Siberian Goldfinch, kindly read below. I claim to hold the largest stock of genuine Siberian cock Goldfinches (not hens) in England to-day. These birds come direct to me, and no man in England gets the pick of them but myself, and to prove this I offer £10 to any dealer in England who can prove he has had pick of my birds, either before or since they came into my possession. Regular readers will have noticed that while others were saying they expected Siberians at any moment, I actually had mine on the market, and some of them in customers' hands before they were expected to arrive. I have a really magnificent stock of the genuine Siberian cock Goldfinches, every bird in full song, price 5/- each, seven for 28/-; selected birds, very large, with good broad skulls, deep square blaze, good tannings and moonings, well buttoned and correct wing carriage, and polished like a new silk hat, 7/6 and 10/- each. Among the birds are a few cage-moulted cocks, price 7/6 each; one cock, with peculiar blue blaze instead of red, highest offer accepted; several very nice peathroated cocks, 7/6 each, and one very handsome square blazed, straight cut, Cheveral cock, 10/-; if others get the pick of the birds as they pretend, how it is they do not get the Cheverals, etc.? All will be sent on week's approval at my risk; cash or deposit system as usual, and money refunded if every satisfaction not given. For the information of other dealers, I may say the next lot of Siberians reach me on Dec. 15th or 16th; they will now know when to expect them.

W. GORE, Sib. Importer, Gooch-st, B'HAM.

CAN YOU ANSWER

the following questions in the affirmative? Are you getting full value for your money from your present dealer? Is price right, quality of the best, are the birds you receive exactly what the advertisement leads you to expect, and do you always get business-like treatment? If so, you have no need to read further, as no man can expect more, but if you are not altogether satisfied, this advert. will tell you how to obtain that satisfaction you cannot get elsewhere. My conditions of sale are these: Everything I sell is sent on approval on deposit rules of this paper, or if cash is sent direct to me I take all risk, and unless birds are in every way satisfactory they only have to be returned, and back comes the whole of your money promptly and cheerfully without question or comment. Plain and straight-forward enough, is it not? I have a splendid stock of genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches in pink of health and condition at 2/- each, 3 5/-, 6 9/-. Specially selected larger cocks guaranteed in song, 2/6 and 3/- each. Real exhibition specimens, with full complement of show points, 5/- and 7/6 each. Hen Goldfinches 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-. I also have a grand lot of twice cage-moulted white-legged cock Goldfinches, guaranteed mule breeders, finger tame and full song, 6/-, 7/6, 10/- each. Splendid lot cock Bullfinches, all netted birds, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-. Specially selected show specimens, 3/-, 4/-, 5/- each. Hen Bullfinches 1/- each. Specially selected large rich coloured hens, 1/6 and 2/- each. Few specially picked hen Bullfinches, aviary moulted, and been flying with Canaries since Sept. last, 2/6 each. Genuine hand-reared German hen Bullfinches, feed from fingers, and ideal Hybrid breeders, 5/- each. Cock Siskins, in full song, and very steady, 2/- each, 3 5/-. Hen Siskins 1/- each, 3 2/6. Large handsome cock Greenfinches 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6. Selected yellow cocks, very large, for exhibition or breeding, 1/- and 2/- each. Immense stock of cock brown Linnets, every one guaranteed rose red breasted and nut brown backs, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/6. Specially selected steady cocks for muling or contest singing, and warranted now in song, 1/- each, 3 2/-, 6 3/6, 12 6/-. Exquisitely pencilled cocks of correct type and colour for exhibition, 1/6, 2/-, 2/6 each. These are same sort of Linnets as the scores of dozens I send weekly into North Country for contest singing, and I have sold more contest winners than any man alive. I supply the majority of Lancashire, Yorkshire and Durham dealers, who say they cannot get Linnets anywhere to equal mine. Cock Chaffinches 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-. Cock or hen Redpolls, 6d. each, three 1/3, six 2/-. Genuine cock Snow Buntings 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-. Hens 8d. each, three 1/6. True pairs 1/6. Few extra special, very large and white, cocks, correctly marked and fit to win, 2/6 each. Magnificent lot cock Skylarks, in perfect condition, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-. Specially picked cocks in song, 1/- and 1/6 each. Please note, every Lark I sell is guaranteed a cock, and plump and healthy, not half hens or razor chested. Genuine hand-reared Larks, finger tame and in free song, 5/-, 7/6, and 10/- each. All birds are guaranteed exactly as described and are properly netted in County of Worcester by expert catchers employed solely by myself, and all are thoroughly on hard seed before sent out. Customers advised of dispatch in all cases. See other advts. of mine for testimonials, etc., and note name and address of England's Premier Bird Dealer, who has no connection whatever with any other advertiser.

Our travelling agent is due to arrive on the 7th of December direct from Hamburg, with a colossal consignment of the real St. Andreasburg Rollers, numbering about 400, every bird being perfectly trained by the Bohemian organs, and free from harsh and chopping notes. These are all bred from the Seifert strain, being the best Schoolmaster that ever was brought into England. The same as used for the special singing contests all over Great Britain. No. 1 class birds, with about fifteen different changes of song, with nice low tunes, 10/6; class No. 2, 8/6 each; class No. 3, 7/6 each; Hartz Rollers, cocks in full song, 5/6 each; Hartz hen Canaries, 1/6 each, or 12/- dozen; German cock Bullfinches, 5/- each; German hand-reared tame pet hen white-legged Bullies, 2/6 each, or 14/- stick of seven. Every bird carefully packed away in good condition, and guaranteed safe delivery. A trial solicited will sure to give purchaser every satisfaction: Enock Power, The Origiual, 91, Sclater-st., Shoreditch.

The Man in Possession of all his faculties must see that unless there was really something about the Leipzig Roller that is not possessed by the ordinary Roller, I could not go on publishing such remarkable testimonials as I do week after week. What I claim for them is this: The Leipzig Roller has a greater variety of song than the ordinary Roller, is better value at a lower price, and, unlike many of the Rollers, does not lose its song after first moult, but retains it for years. I want you to test the truth of my statements by having a Leipzig Roller from me, and an ordinary Roller from elsewhere at any higher price; test them side by side for a week, and keep the one which suits you best. I have just received the largest consignment of Rollers ever sent into England to one dealer, and all are in absolutely superb condition and song, and have long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, soft roulades, water-bubble runs, piccolo trills, jug-jug of Nightingale bell, harp, flute, and gong notes, etc., etc., and guaranteed entirely free from any harsh or objectionable notes whatever, price 7s. and 8s. each; special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/-, and 12/6 each; hens, guaranteed exactly same strain, 2/- each, 3/6 couple. I also have a limited quantity of real contest Rollers, which have a very rich, soft and melodious song, price 15/- each. These contest birds are of purest blood Germany can boast of, and are gems of very first water, honest value at 50/- each. To really know how good the Leipzig Roller as a song is, you must have one on week's trial, but following letters give a faint idea. "Newtown, Leeds, Nov. 22. Sir,—The 19 Rollers you sent us have been very satisfactory to all our members, and also others who have heard them. I write this on behalf of members and myself that they are the finest lot of Rollers that have ever been sent to the Prince Albert Inn Linnet and Canary Association.—Yours, E. Wood, Hon. Sec." "The Bank, St. Mary's, Scilly Isles, Nov. 27. Sir,—Leipzig Roller I had from you three years ago turned out A1. Please send another.—Yours, C. Solomon." "9, Claremont Terrace, Longsight, Oldham, Nov. 27. —Sir,—Received Roller Saturday, and he started singing as soon as put into cage. I shall want another shortly.—Yours, R. Butterworth." "11, Fernie St., Maryhill, Glasgow, Nov. 27. Sir,—Received Roller in first-class condition, and I must thank you for such a fine singer. He started singing 15 minutes after arrival.—Yours, E. Leggett, jun." "28, Sarow Row, Ebbw Vale, Nov. 25. Sir,—Received two Rollers safe, and am very pleased with them; they are doing well.—Yours, C. Price." "1, George St., Harwich, Nov. 27. Sir,—Received bird safe, with great satisfaction. I am indeed pleased with its singing.—Yours, A. Atkinson." "6, Side Row, Gt. Preston, Woodlesford, Leeds, Nov. 25. Sir,—Please send another Leipzig Roller. I received others safe and Roller is singing grand.—Yours, L. Longbottom." "65, Balfour Rd., Normanton, Derby, Nov. 25th. Sir,—I have had the Roller a week, and am highly pleased with it. Thanking you for sending such a lovely songster.—Yours, G. Taylor." "6, Side Row, Gt. Preston, Leeds, Nov. 21. Sir,—Please send Roller at 12/6, and a hen to match. A friend has heard mine, and got me to send for one like it. The Roller I have is singing grand day and gaslight.—Yours, L. Longbottom." "26, Butler St., Belfast, Nov. 21. Sir,—Roller is a great and wonderful songster for the price, 10/-. The only comparison is it is like a Prima Donna compared to a chorus girl to the rest of song birds.—Yours, J. McLaughlin." "Beacon, near Camborne, Cornwall, Nov. 14. Sir,—Received Leipzig Roller safely, and it is a pleasure to hear it sing. All my friends say he is a fine bird.—Yours, B. Pearce." Please note all genuine Leipzig Rollers are stamped on wing "Hans Weber Leipzig," and are sent out spick and span, and as clean as the proverbial new pin, in special travelling cages, with seed and water inside on full week's trial at my risk on receipt of cash or deposit system of CAGE BIRDS, and fullest satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded in full.

AMBLER'S CHAMPION YORKSHIRES

THE PUREST STRAIN IN THE FANCY

For these last 30 years we have bred, sold and exhibited some of the biggest champions on the show bench, winning thousands of prizes, cups, bowls, medals, etc., at all the leading shows, three times winning special for best in show Crystal Palace; championship for best Yorkshire, 4 firsts, 3 seconds, 3rd and 4th Palace 1910-11. As we are not exhibiting this season we have some real gems for sale that can win in any company; also a wonderful good lot of stock birds, cocks and hens, plenty or length, full of style and brimful of quality, just the sort that do breed winners; from 15/- to 60/- per pair; single birds proportionate; inspection invited; approval; cash or deposit: Messrs. Amblers' (late of Bradford), Langton Lodge, Scotton, Knaresborough, Yorkshire.

PURE YORKSHIRES.

Direct from strains which won at Crystal Palace this last 20 years, including Mr. Bates', Mr. Binns', Mr. Blackhurst's, all big winners. I have supplied scores of winners and can do so yet, not exhibiting this variety myself; some grand yellows and buff cocks, 6/-, 7/-, 8/-, 10/-, 12/-, 15/-, 20/- each; hens, yellows or buffs, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/-, 8/-, 10/-; matched pairs to breed winners, 12/-, 15/-, 16/-, 18/-, 20/-, 25/- pair; any on approval; full guarantee given; breeder 30 years this address: Sandiford, Canary Breeder, Preston, Lancs.

The Yorkshire Breeders

Society has been formed to supply any variety of Yorkshire Canaries direct from the breeders to fanciers, instead of allowing dealers to show and sell them as their own strains. Particulars as to how each bird has been bred will be given, and as we hold some of the best pedigree strains living, purchasers can rely on getting the best blood obtainable. We can supply breeding sets (cock and 2 hens) at 12/6, 15/-, 20/- per set, pairs 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 upwards; cocks from 6/-, hens from 4/-; exhibition birds at reasonable prices; travelling cages, 3d. extra. Unsolicited testimonials have already been received from delighted customers. Don't be misled, we are the actual breeders, and in buying from us you save the middlemen's profits. Terms: Cash or deposit system; state wants to "Secretary," 69, Springcliffe, Manningham, Bradford, Yorkshire.

YOU KNOW

It pays me well to serve you well, and it pays you well to let me serve you well. My motive is to give you such good sound value for money that you cannot resist sending me your further orders and telling your brother fanciers of the astounding value I give. I guarantee every customer full satisfaction. Do not be misled with ordinary birds with fancy names at fancy prices. Let me send you high-class birds at ordinary prices. My matched pairs of Yorkshires and Norwich at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, and 15/- pair are extraordinary value. My stock includes the following, all well moulted, cocks in song, my famous German songsters, the working man's friend; cocks that will sing by day and by gaslight, loud, free, continuous songsters; every bird tested before sending out. Cocks, 4/6, 5/-, 5/6, 6/- each; matched pairs for breeding songsters, 6/-, 6/6, 7/6, 8/-. Genuine trained St. Andreasburg Rollers, with full change of song by day and artificial light, bred and trained by leading contest winners in their home land, with full volume of song, free from harsh or choppy notes, cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens, 2/-, 2/6, 3/- each. High-class long slim typical Yorkshires, in all colours, clean moulted, cocks 5/-, 5/6, 6/-, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6; a few extra good specimens for exhibition, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-; accurately matched pairs for breeding, 7/6, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6; superior quality, lengthy hens, 2/-, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6, 4/6. Plainhead Norwich, thick-set, cobby, stylish Norwich, in all colours, quality that will astound you, especially at the prices; clean moulted cocks, in song, 5/-, 5/6, 6/-, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6 each; grand quality hens, 2/-, 2/6, 3/-, 3/6, 4/- each; matched breeding pairs, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; neat travelling cages, 3d. each. You really must see these birds to be convinced of their value, for it is utterly impossible for small breeders or dealers to sell such quality at the prices; all birds on seven days' approval at my risk, and I pay carriage back if you should not be satisfied: E. L. Storey, Practical Bird Specialist, Crowle, Doncaster.

WINNING YORKSHIRES and NORWICH.

My birds supply their own testimony as to their quality. All I need do is to refer you to the reports of all the leading championship shows week by week. I have won over 180 prizes during October and November, 1911, including 1sts and specials at most of the leading shows. Every prize has been won in open championship shows in hottest competition.

It is impossible to do more than Win and Breed Winners. This is what my customers do with birds supplied by me. In fact, there is no better blood in the Fancy to-day. The following is only one from a large number of letters recently received, and which are open for the inspection of all: New Square, Seghill, Dec. 5th, 1911. The Buff Norwich cock I got from you won first in his class, and special for Best Norwich in Show. The Buff Yorkshire cock I got from you last season has won first in his class, and his son was placed second to him at the show last week. Not bad form that for Thomas's birds.—Wm. Lascelles to Joe Thomas.

Remember, all my winners are for sale, or I can supply you with some clinking stock or exhibition birds bred from them, and at a workingman's price.

I am now sending out good typical cocks at 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- each. Grand hens, true to type and feathered like wax at 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each. Matched pairs, which I have personally paired with a view to breeding winners, at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-, 50/- per pair.

I have also some large thick-set Norwich, the right stamp, well over perch, with good heads and fronts, at same price as Yorkshires. See report of open Norwich Section, Bradford National Show, in this issue.

SEIFERT ROLLERS, in full rolling song, at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Hens, same strain, 2/6, 3/6, 5/- each. Also a few BRITISH ROLLERS, cold-room bred, at same prices.

SIBERIAN GOLDFINCH COCKS. Large consignment just arrived. I never had a better lot. Big fine, bold birds, many of them can win in hot competition. Prices, 5/6, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/-, 12/6 each. Let me send you one on approval. Borders, Crests, Belgians, Mules, etc., etc., also in stock. Every bird sent on 7 days' approval at my risk. Inspection invited any day but Sunday.

EASY PAYMENTS TO GENUINE FANCIERS.

Birds sent out on receipt of first payment. Send a P.C. for my illustrated catalogue, with full particulars, and remember I give a guarantee of absolute satisfaction to every customer or return every penny of cash paid. Travelling cages 3d. extra in all cases.

Wild-Bird Life.

Methodical Birds.

The Thrushes that came from the North and for a time frequented the writer's garden and the adjoining meadow land have passed on, leaving only the two or three resident birds that were here before they came. Our resident birds we know by their daily habits and confiding manner, for although to ordinary observers birds lead, in a sense, an aimless existence, they are in fact almost as methodical in some of their habits as human beings. One fine Thrush frequents a grass patch in the front of the house for a couple of hours during the morning as regularly as possible. Here he regales himself upon worms, and it is quite astonishing to see the number and size of his victims. A pair of Blackbirds live almost at the extreme end of the garden, and these follow each other about and are as fussy as if it were early spring instead of winter. At the end of the lawn a single Missel Thrush is a daily visitor. Possibly the rose hips which hang in clusters from one of the old-fashioned climbers first attracted him, and finding the spot to his liking, he has since made it a regular feeding ground.

The Bold Stormcock.

At this time of year Missel Thrushes are generally in small flocks of ten or a dozen birds. They frequent the fields and meadows as a rule not far from houses or farmsteads. They are wild, and not easily approached. How or why this bird came to wander quite by himself at this time is a puzzle that one can hardly account for, because as a rule any that leave a flock are generally in pairs, and it is very doubtful if any of our homestead birds pair quite as early as the bold Stormcock. Although the weather has been somewhat mild and open, there is very little bird music in the air. A young Song Thrush will occasionally warble a few trial notes, and the Greenbirds and Linnets twitter a little on sunny days. The Greenfinch's song at this time of the year is a musical mellow warbling, quite delightful when compared with his love song of the spring, which is so frequently spoilt by a terminating long-drawn-out zee.

The Constant Nightingale.

The Nightingale is one of our most constant visitors to return to its old home. A copse that has once contained a pair will have them year after year, but if during their absence in foreign lands the underwood is cleared off, the birds will forsake it for that season, and probably the following seasons until the bushes have grown high enough for concealment. If a wood is suitable for the birds, and the first visitors are trapped, others will succeed them.

No. 555.

A Holder for Nesting Material.

Sent by Mr. Lynn, 56, Thornhill Road, West Hartlepool.

This holder is, I think, perfection. It is cheap (a dozen can be made for 5d.) and effective. Either cage-wire or scrap-wire can be used for making it. I fasten it to the cage by means of a small screw in the edge of the top of the cage. Or the top of the holder can be made into a hook to hang over the top punched bar. The chief points about the holder are: it is safe for the birds; there is no waste whatever, every bit of material having to be pulled out by the birds; and, lastly, it can be put on to the cage or taken off in a second.—C. Lynn.

No. 556.

A Simple Perch Device.

Sent by Mr. G. Hardy, 27a, Sutterton Street, Caledonia Road, King's Cross, N.

Here is an idea of a simple perch that can be used in any cage. The illustration shows "a," the opening in back of cage for perch; "b," the perch end; and "c," the perch fixed.

Where the cage wants altering, remove the old perch, and the pin will remain in place required for the new perch. Compared with old perches which are a fixture, these are most simple. You just lift them from the back up to where the hole is; pull out and clean them. This will not disturb the bird very much.—G. Hardy.

Under the White Rose.

A STATED time always comes. When the Bradford National Cage Bird Show was first mooted the date fixed looked a long time ahead; now, it is passed and gone. As a first effort it can only be designated a gigantic success. A comprehensive schedule was issued, and the response was extremely gratifying, particularly in the Yorkshire Sections, where the entries averaged over twenty per class, and the best of the country there, too. Norwich did not rally so well, there being counter-attractions in the hotbeds of the variety. Entries in the British, Mule, Hybrid, and Foreign bird sections were also slightly disappointing, due to the same cause. But though numbers were small, quality did not lack in the least. Many of those present would have held their own in the strongest competition, and on the Saturday afternoon it was almost impossible to get even a passing glimpse of either British or foreign birds, and at last stewards had to be told off to move the visitors in single file (duck file, it is sometimes called), so as to give all a chance to see them.

FRIDAY'S opening was fairly well attended, and during the evening visitors were very numerous, but on the Saturday afternoon the rush of visitors was really stupendous, and the room, although very large, was taxed to its utmost capacity, the "gate" totalling over £24, which, added to the sale of tickets, will prove a nice little sum. It is computed that over 1,000 people visited the show on the Saturday afternoon. All winners present were paid their prize-money, and that needing to be sent through the post was despatched on the Monday following—quick work this for such a large show; it will doubtless assist not a little in ensuring entries in future years.

WHO was the prominent Yorkshireman (I was going to say judge, but this might give the show away) who took nine ladies into the refreshment room and supplied them with cups of tea? Why didn't he supply them with sandwiches also? Was all the beef done, and the tongue? When packing up on the Saturday evening, many hands made light work. All the birds were safely off by 9 p.m.

ROUND THE SHOWS.

ROCHESTER.

Annual show of the Rochester and Dis. F.S. held Dec. 13, Strood Hall. Our section was staged in a large hall upstairs. The light was splendid. We regret to say entries were small; this is regrettable considering there was no other show in Kent to clash with this fixture. At the last moment unfortunately the appointed judge (Mr. J. Freer) could not officiate owing to illness. Mr. S. E. Eastmead (Chatham), a well-known fancier of the past, was called upon to judge, which he did to the satisfaction of all. The Nor. section was good, some well-known winners being staged. Yorks. were small in number but nice in quality. The British section also had some choice specimens. Mr. F. J. Wickham won the C.B. cup with a charming unflighted yellow Nor. In Mr. Hurdman the society have a most energetic and obliging secretary. We trust the society will have better support at their next show.

NOR. CL. (7): 1, sp, cup, Wickham, really charming unflig. yell., splendid type, lovely head; 2, 3, Gibbs, 2nd another yell., larger than winner, splendid quality, shows just a little browing, otherwise equal, 3rd cl. buff, splendid bird, lovely feather; vhc, Bareham; hc, Broadbridge. TKD., ETC. (4): 1, 2, Gibbs, 1st eye and wing mkd., buff, splendid head and neck, fine quality feather, nice exhibit, 2nd t.k.d. yell., very similar, not quite so typical; 3, Broadbridge, wing and head mkd., buff, nice exhibit. YORKS. CL. (5): 1, 3, Gibbs, 1st real good yell. Yorks., nice length and style, good head and wings, 3rd very similar; 2, Olive, another nice yell., not quite the length or style of winner; vhc, Taylor; hc, Burnett. MULE OR HYB. (3): 1, Ackland, well-known Greenfinch Mule, well staged, in splendid condition; 2, Edmonds, Goldfinch Mule, good rich colour; 3, Ackland, Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid, nice bird. LINNET (6): 1, Wickham, beautifully pencilled, good size, not quite up in full colour yet; 2, Webb, good col. bird, must have pressed winners; 3, Smith, E., very rich col., well pencilled; vhc, Smith, W.; hc, Ackland; c, Edmonds, a very good class of Linnets. GOLDFINCH, ETC. (5): 1, 2, Wickham, 1st splendid specimen of Bullfinch, nice shape, beautiful cap and wing bars, easy win, 2nd good Goldfinch; 3, Ackland, very rich coloured, fresh caught Bullfinch, not quite so typical as winner; vhc, Moss; hc, Tidy. FINCH, A.O.S.: 1, vhc, Ackland, 1st really good Hawfinch, nice rich col., an easy win; 2, 3, Wickham, 2nd another nice rich col. Hawfinch, 3rd good Chaffinch. SOFTBILL (5): 1, Lewcock, splendid Starling, staged to perfection, beautifully spangled, very taking; 2, Smith, Nightingale, shown in faultless condition; 3, Webb, very nice Missel Thrush, lacks just a little in richness of colour, otherwise good; vhc, Ackland, nice Blackbird.

DARWEN.

Darwen and Dis. C.B.S. anual open and member's show held November 11th in the Central Temperance Club, an admirable room for the purpose. The entries totalled nearly 200, this being 50 per cent. better than last year, which speaks well for the future of the society. The open classes did not fill as they might have done, but some really good birds were staged. The members put down some rare quality birds, the buff Yorks. hen of Mr. Sharples being an exceptionally good lady. The society is run on model lines, the officials all working together for the betterment of the society. The secretary, Mr. Singleton, is a worker indeed; everything seems easy to him, and all was ready by 3.30 for the judge. Mr. Singleton is well backed up by the following fanciers: Messrs. Davison (chairmain), Fairhurst (treasurer), and Trevor, Sharples, Tomlinson, Walsh, Riley, Entwistle and Gorick. The society are blessed with a good President in F. G. Hindle, Esq., who rendered financial assistance. Mr. Sharples won the challenge cup with a sweet Yorkie hen, the gold medal going to Mr. O'Donnell's Lark. Mr. Joe Thomas took medal for best Can. open, while the winner in Brit. open went to Mr. J. M. Walsh. The show was well patronised, and we trust it will prove a financial success. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe judged, and his awards were received with general satisfaction.

The Critique.

NOR. CL., OPEN (6): 1, 2, Joe Thomas, 1st cl. yell., rare good head and neck, shows sound front, fine feather; 2nd, larger, but not quite the quality of above, plenty of substance, broad head; 3, r, Priestough, buff, grand size, rare good chest; vhc, Hollis; hc, Stewart. HALSTEAD.

Second annual open show of the Halstead F.S., held Dec. 8th in the Queen's Hall (by kind permission of Mr. Stanley Mogers which is a grand place for a show of this kind. The show was opened by Sir Fortescue Flannery, Bart., who said he was proud to open such a show, as he was a great lover of high-class fancy stock. The birds were staged in good time by the committee and the two hard-working secretaries, Messrs. Taylor and Sayward, who did their work in a splendid way, so that everything went off well. Mr. J. N. Harrison placed the cards.

The Critique.

WESTERN COUNTIES O.S.

Annual pair show held at Oddfellows' Hall, Plymouth, on Dec. 12th, 50 pairs of birds being staged. Norwich made a good show, as did hybrid pairs. The cinnamons were the best collection ever staged by the society, and Crests and Yorks. were well up to usual standard. Mr. Pope judged Yorks., Mr. Spillman Nor. and Cinn., Mr. Dare the Crests, and Mr. J. E. Row the Hybrid pairs.

BROOMHILL.

Show held Dec. 9th, in the Central Hall, an ideal place for a show of this kind, being well lighted and free from draughts. We were pleased to see the cage birds staged at a nice height, and every attention given them; so exhibitors can send their birds to this show next year with every confidence. Entries came up well, 102 in eight classes. In Mr. W. Smailes we found a most able and efficient secretary; he has a thorough knowledge of his duties, and the manner in which he gets through his work is a credit both to himself and the society. He was ably assisted by Mr. J. Crackett, assistant sec., and a hard working committee, composed of Messrs. Paxton, Lidgate, Richardson, Hume, Penrose, Lightly Bros., Anderson, and others. Principal sp. winners: Best old Nor. and best unflighted, Mr. Rowell; Mr. W. Smailes, Hyde's; best Border, Mr. Aston; best member's Border, Mr. Lidgate. We are pleased to record a splendid attendance, and we were assured by the secretary that the show cannot be otherwise than a grand success. Mr. H. Scely (Choppington) judged, and his awards were well received.

is now in preparation, and with the co-operation of our readers will be a greater success than any of its predecessors.

Free to Secretaries of all Societies—the insertion of full particulars (name of society, latest list of officials, place, time and nights of meetings) in the Alphabetical List of Cage-bird Clubs. Remember, no society should be missing, for "Cage Birds Annual" is the only Directory of its kind in existence. Secretaries who have moved, please let us know.

Free to all Judges of Cage Birds—the insertion of their names and addresses, and the varieties in which they specialise, in the List of Judges. The only condition is that judges must have officiated at one of the recognised shows. Remember, this list is the only complete one published, and is universally consulted by show officials.

Free to our trading friends—the insertion of names, addresses, and specialities in the Bird Trade Directory. No matter what you sell, so long as it has to do with the Fancy, particulars are inserted free. This directory is of exceptional value, and fanciers the world over find it indispensable. For one shilling, names can be thrown up in heavy type.

Breeders, Exhibitors, Judges, and Advertisers generally, do you want something that will bring you business throughout next year for a "mere song"? If so, just try an advertisement in the "Annual." Full particulars as to rates can be had of THE MANAGER, "CAGE BIRDS ANUUAL," 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

NANTYMOEL.

Second annual show held Dec. 13th, in the Workmen's Hall. The cage birds were nicely staged at one end of the hall. The entries were in advance of last year, and a great improvement was noticeable in the quality, most of the winners being fit to hold their own in the keenest competition. A few keen fanciers attended to the wants of the exhibits, and gave them every attention. The Hon. Sec., Messrs. Williams and Griffiths, had everything in smooth running order and were most obliging and courteous to all. The awards were made by Mr. J. H. Payne.

Club Reports.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.S.

Meeting held Co-operative Hall, St. George's Cross, Mr. H. Jamieson presiding over a large attendance, when prize money and specials won at annual show were paid out. Agreed, to again have a smoking concert this year and presentation of trophies, etc. A committee was appointed to look after the date, place, etc., which will be notified later.—W. Proudfoot, Sec. and Treasurer.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Meeting held Nag's Head Cocoa House, Dec. 5, Mr. Bracegirdle presiding. Secretary intimated receipt of donation from R. A. Yerburgh, Esq., M.P., and Mrs. Way, also special prizes from Messrs. McHattie and Co., Messrs. W. T. Davies and Co. An extra class for pairs was added to the schedule of annual show, and date of entries closing fixed for 19th December, or first post 20th December. Special meeting will be held at the club room 19th December, to make final arrangements.—J. Swindley Hon. Sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Smoking concert, held headquarters, Dec. 7th, as a wind-up to a very successful year's work. There was a good attendance, Mr. T. J. King occupied the chair in his usual genial manner, and things went with a swing. Messrs. D. Lewis and A. Smith were responsible for the evening, and right well they had done their work, providing an excellent and diversified programme; and those members who were not present missed a most enjoyable evening. A vote of thanks to the performers and Messrs. Lewis and Smith was proposed by Mr. A. S. Treasure, and seconded by Mr. W. Pounsett, and Mr. Dredge, in felicitous terms, proposed the chairman. The following gentlemen took part: Messrs, Carter, Dredge, Hawker, Mackey, A. Smith, Roberts, Short jun., Strickland, Stopforth, C. Yeind. Mr. Tibbles acted as accompanist.

WALKLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual meeting, held St.Phillip's Mission, Westmorland Street, Dec. 7th. Election of officers and revision of rules. One of the best meetings yet held in point of numbers. We started the year with 12 members, and have now a list of 32, with prospects of doubling same next year. Several of the old rules were deleted, and others added, one of which is "Novices have to win 3 first prizes before becoming a champion." Voting result: President, Mr. J. Ridal; vice-presidents, J. G. Cowley and G. Butler; treasurer, J. Kelsey; auditors, A. Hobson, and C. Thompson; sees., C. Tomlinson and A. Lawton; committee, Furniss, J. Woolhouse, Rhodes, Ritson, Hadfield, Smith. Next meeting, Jan. 13, table show of matched pairs for breeding, Yorks. mems.; Nor. mems.; novice Yorks.; ent., 3d. cage; prize-money 2s., 1s. 6d., 1s. Judge, Mr. F. Jones. Any member joining next meeting can compete.—C. Tomlinson, Sec.

READING C.B.S.

Meeting held Dec. 6th. Mr. O. C. Smith elected a member. Suggestions were made as to next year's show, but nothing could be done until the annual meeting in January. After a brief interval Mr. Acton said he had a very pleasant duty to perform. He wished to present Mr. Brooker with a small cheque as a slight acknowledgment by the members of his unfailing courtesy and of the many acts of kindness duriog the years he had been chairman. In presenting it he wished to add a bit to it to show he had been as well pleased as the members were. In responding, Mr. Brooker said he was much surprised and pleased. He had done his best for the members as his duty, not for the sake of getting anything from them. He thanked them for the gift, and for the kindly thought which prompted it. The Hon. Sec. gave an account of the recent show, but was sorry to say that, owing to so many attractions on the same day, and the foggy night, the "gate" money was very bad, and had resulted in a balance on the wrong side. Mr. Pike had promised to present the cups, but was taken ill the day before; but he persuaded the Mayor and Mayoress to come in his place. In presenting the cups the Mayor remarked at what an interesting time he had had, and said how sorry he was to see a poor attendance. Cup Winners: S. Pike Cup: G. H. Acton, 88 points; C. Cox, 41; Vince and Pike, 16 each; C. H. Acton Cup: F. Dearlove, 111 points; H. Priest, 70; G. W. Maisey, 50. Sec. announced that S. Pike, Esq., had promised to give us another cup for most wins with birds bred by exhibitors, which was received with great pleasure. As next meeting begins a new session, the Sec. would be glad to hear of any fanciers wishing to Join.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL O.S.

Annual general meeting, held at Leysian Hall, Dec. 7. Mr. J. W. Ramsden in chair. After reading balance-sheet, the treasurer said we end up the year 4s. 4d. better in cash than we begau, and £4 1s. 1d. in assets. The main features of the balance sheet are that we are £3 2s. 6d. to the good on entry fees and subs., and that we have 18 new members against 8 last year. We made about £18 less out of the Palace show, arising from our having to insure the show at a cost of £12 12s., and having to pay about £5 extra on account of printers' strike. On the other side we avoid expenditure this year that we incurred last year to the extent of £16 fully, the main item being loss on Nov. show. Also we spend £11 less on silver cups, while printing and stationery are £3 less. On the other hand, we paid £5 more for lectures and £4 for a new case for stuffed birds. Someone was writing to the papers and suggested that the L. and P.O.S. wanted rousing, and probably meant that we should have had an autumn show, but I think the balance sheet indicates that by careful navigation we have avoided losing money, and it will be remembered that about the time we had to decide as to an autumn show affairs at the Palace looked black, and at that time it looked as likely as anything that the place would be sold and broken up for building purposes, which would have meant that the society would have had to change the venue for the National Show. I have always considered this a risky proceeding, and one that would likely enough have meant a loss of say £50. The prospects at the Palace have improved now, but until we can see what can be arranged with the new powers there, we cannot say that we have surmounted the difficulties and anxieties we have had for some years back. At all events, there has been no need to insure the coming Palace Show, so that as far as we can see we should have more income next year than this, and I hope we shall still make more new members, especially in town, considering the many fanciers there now.—W. Law, Sec.

HEMSWORTH C.B.S.

Meeting held December 6th. Principal business, organising our second annual show for January 27th, in conjunction with the final show for the challenge cups and medals. The discussion lasted the whole meeting through, and finally was adjourned till December 20th, at 7.30 p.m.; all members are requested to attend if possible.—James W. Gillings, Sec.

GRIMSBY AND DISTRICT O.S.

Annual meeting, held Dec. 7th, Slatter's Rooms, 15 members present. Following officers elected for 1912: Chairman, Mr. A. Oliver; vice-chairman, Mr. F. Yearling; committee, Messrs. T. Cartwright sen., W. Way, A. Robinson, H. Harding, H. Beaumont, jun., A. Cartwright, jun., G. Jacklin, A. Towl. Specials allotted for half-day show, Dec. 30. A vote of thanks was accorded the retiring officers.—Town and Smith, Hon. Secs.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held Dec. 9, Mr. Farrer presiding. Schedule for open show, Jan. 12 and 13th finally decided upon. Mr. T. Taylor (Gateshead) has kindly promised a diploma for best bird in each section, also one for best bird in show. Mr. J. G. Hutchinson (Newcastle) gives a silver medal for best Crest or C.B., and various other specials were promised, so that the prospects for the show are now exceedingly bright; and every member of the club is anxious to make the show the best we have ever had. Will members please push the sale of tickets?—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

WEST BROMWICH & DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held Dec. 5th. Decided to hold a table show Jan. 13th next, following classes being scheduled. Nor. Yell.; Buff hen; unflig.; novice, same classes; Yorks., same; novice, and champions; one British Hardbill; one Softbill; one Mule or Hybrid; one Crest; one Crestbred; one A.O.V. This being one of the shows for which points count for members' cup, it is hoped every member will put down birds. It is also suggested that we hold a series of night shows, and we hope members will attend and support the officers in their endeavours to make the meeting nights more interesting; otherwise it is to be feared the officers will give up trying. The society is to be congratulated on the good show they made in the inter-club competition, and with a little more enthusiasm there is a possibility of doing much better.—W. G. Andrews, Hon. Sec.

SITTINGBOURNE AND DIS. C.B.S

Prizes won at the recent show were distributed in the Fanciers' Hall, George Hotel, on December 4th, The ceremony was to have been performed by Mr. W. R. Elgar (President), but Mr. B. Tidy apologised for his unavoidable absence, and his place was taken by Mr. C. R. Hulburd. Mr. Hulburd distributed the prizes, and at the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. Tidy proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. C. Town for the assistance he rendered the committee during the show; Mr. Jeffreys seconded, and the proposition was carried. On the proposition of Mr. Tidy, seconded by Mr. Town, a hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Hulburd. The Secretary referred to the show, and said that, on making out a rough balance sheet, he thought they would be on the right side, in spite of the fact that they had had some unexpected expenses. On the proposition of Mr. Town, seconded by Mr. Tidy, a vote of thanks was passed to the donors of special prizes, and to Mr. W. Land for granting the society the use of flags.—B. Tidy, Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, 2nd Dec., Mr. J. P. Moir in chair. I am pleased to record a good attendance. A general discussion arose re amount of entrance fee, and prize-money to be paid at forthcoming Boxing Day show; but the question was left over to see what could be done for the shows to take place in 1912. Three new members elected, namely Messrs. M. Kitchin, J. W. Storey, and W. Marshall—it is a good omen to see so many young fanciers taking up the pleasant hobby. Nomination of officers for 1912: Chairman, Mr. C. E. Hall; vice-chairman, Mr. H. J. Mennard; hon. treasurer, Mr. E. Norton; assistant hon. sec., Mr. J. P. Moir; hon. sec., Mr. W. A. Wilson; auditors for the 1911 accounts, Messrs. P. Marshall and E. Middleton. Re the Boxing Day show, it was decided to ask that old and respected fancier, Mr. F. King (Leeds) to judge British and so help our advertised judge, Mr. H. Wilkinson (Stockbridge), as we anticipate a good entry. Mr. T. Baldwinson kindly promised half-stone seed for most points in novice classes; and Messrs. Poulter and Bolton will give a double breeding cage all complete, and another good special to be won in champion and novice classes respectively. Several selling classes and class for Softbills has been added to classification, and it is hoped these will be well supported. It is with regret I have to state that Mr. Leo Smith (assistant hon. sec.) is resigning the Fancy for an indefinite period, owing to family sickness. The members, however, unanimously elected him an honorary member, till such time as he takes up the hobby again.—W. A. Wilson, Hon. Sec.

BANKFOOT AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Nov. 28th, Mr. J. Lawson (vice-president) in chair. A feature of this meeting was the "Judging Competition," held in connection with the "Matched Pairs for Breeding" competition. The society gave free admission to both events, and in addition gave various cash specials. The result proved highly satisfactory. Mr. J. Smith was appointed to judge the eleven pairs entered, and his awards gave satisfaction. Several good pairs were among those left out of the cards. The entry for the judging was very good, and competition exceedingly keen. These competitions prove so popular amongst our members that no doubt we shall have the opportunity of holding another ere the season closes. Prize winners in the pairs competition: 1, 2, G. Hudson; 3, Taylor Bros. In the Judging Competition: 1, J. Lawson; 2, H. Taylor; 3, W. North. Definitely decided, to have a pie supper in connection with our prize distribution on Jan. 16th at headquarters, Red Lion Hotel; it is to be hoped every member will do his utmost to induce as many friends and fanciers as possible to attend. Mr. H. B. Wood kindly gives the supper. A miscellaneous programme will be drawn up, and it only remains for the members to do their best to make the gathering a record, numerically and financially. Final members' show, Dec. 16th, at which prizes of various value will be given for best cock and best hen; also cash special of 2s. 6d. (by Mr. J. Smith) for competition in the "commended" section. Ordinary monthly meeting, Dec. 19th, when a lecture on "Moulting and Colour Feeding" will be given by Mr. J. Taylor. Turn up, friends, and give this gentleman a good reception. By the way, tickets for our whist drive and dance may now be had from members. The well-known rooms of Messrs. Bradshaw (Bankfoot) have been engaged, and the music in the dance programme is really high-class. Six prizes will be given in the whist drive. Tickets are selling splendidly.—F. Gelder, Sec.

IRVINE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At a meeting held in the Masonic Hall, December 9th, attended by a large number of fanciers, schedules were drawn up and judges appointed. Judges: Canaries, Mr. D. Smart (Grangemouth); British and Foreign, Mr. A. W. Watson (Edinburgh). Our membership is now up to 30. Any wishing to become members will have to be enrolled by December 16th.—H. B. Young, Sec.

BORDER FANCY C.C.

The annual general meeting will be held at Carlisle on 1st January, 1912, at 11.30 a.m. prompt. The place of meeting will be advertised in show room. Undernoted is the business to be transacted: Minutes of previous meeting; balance sheet 1911; election of president, secretary, treasurer, and delegates. The following motions have been sent in: "That club adopt standard cage"; also "members exhibiting at shows where they have club patronage shall only use husks or plain canary seed in cage bottoms." "That any society having open and novice medal, the novice medal always to be judged for first, so as to allow winner to compete for open medal." Members who will not be at meeting, please notify me if they are in favour or against above motions. A few new members will be proposed.—M. Jamieson, Hon. Sec., 3, Green Terrace, Hawick, N.B.

SHERIFFHILL F.F.S.

Annual meeting, held Dec. 2, headquarters, St. John's Mission Rooms, Kells Lane, with Mr. C. Rowlands in chair. Several of our rules were gone into, and altered. Election of officers for 1912: President, Rev. J. Mitchell; vice-presidents, Messrs. M. Miller, S. Burrell, and T. W. Appleby; committee, Messrs. W. Witherley, E. Hewitson, J. Smith, M. Miller, J. Hunter, and J. Dixon; hon. sec., Mr. W. Stockton; assistant sec., Mr. J. Hunter; treasurer, Mr. C. Rowlands. At our next meeting, January 6th, there will be a table show of Nor., Yorks., Crests, Borders, British, and foreign, and that well-known fancier, Mr. J. Gray (Low Fell) will judge. Mr. W. Witherley kindly promised a silver medal for most points in Yorks., taken at six table shows. We have altered the yearly subs., and it is now 2s. 6d. per year, new members to pay 1s. to enter. Now you fanciers, let's start the New Year in grand style by turning up on Jan. 6th.—W. Stockton, Hon. Sec.

NEW CROSS AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held December 7th, headquarters, when a good attendance was recorded. Two new members were made. In addition to the ordinary business a washing competition for a silver medal given by the society, was arranged for the benefit of novices, and that well-known fancier, Mr. Geo. Hill, was appointed judge. Mr. Hill opened up the competition by washing a Norwich and showing the members the correct way in which to hold a bird. Everyone present took a keen interest in what Mr. Hill said and did, and a very enjoyable evening it was. The result of the competition was astonishing. Mr. Rouson (winner of the medal) handled his bird like an expert. For a society only in its first year we are going along exceptionally well, and should be glad if fanciers will help to make the society a great success by forwarding names to the joint secretaries, Barton and Barton, 8, Amersham Grove, New Cross. The annual subs. is 4s., or payable quarterly in advance.—Barton and Barton, Secs.

ANFIELD, EVERTON & DIS. C.B.S

Night show, held Dec. 4th, Sandon Hotel, where upwards of 100 birds were staged. Mr. G. Bell placed the cards, to the entire satisfaction of all. Over 150 fanciers and friends visited the show, which was voted one of the finest gatherings at a night show held in the town for a long time. Eleven new members were enrolled, which now brings our total up to considerably over 100. Principal winners, Messrs. Whiteside, Dreaper, Crow, Bell, Williams, Holmes, Malone, Southward, Folland, Frentz, Wright, Rumsby, Cooper, Frankham, Jackson, Hawkes, Harrison, etc. We noticed amongst our visitors, Messrs. Algie, Nimmo, Hamilton, McNulty, Walker, Plunkett, Brindle, Davis, Rowlands, Thomas, Jones, Potter, Knight, Lobb, Metcalfe, Isaacs, Jew, etc. Messrs. Wright and Williams, Hon. Secs., had everything in apple-pie order; altogether it was a huge success. Owing to the abnormal increase of membership we have been compelled to remove headquarters to St. Cuthbert's Schoolroom, with the large mission hall for shows. A show will be held Boxing Day at the Mission Hall, situated in Burleigh Road North, Walton Breck Road. All members and those wishing to join bring as many birds as possible; schedule same as night show held Dec. 4th. There will be plenty of competition, prize money, and specials. Admission free; all welcome. Judge to be announced in next week's CAGE BIRDS, together with any further particulars. The hall will be open, and the secretaries in attendance, 11 a.m. to receive birds. Judging to commence 1.30 p.m. Anyone in doubt bring your birds, and we will classify. Schedules will be sent to anyone applying to Hon. Sec.—R. B. Wright, 9, Canon Road, Cabbage Hall.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM.

There was a good attendance at meeting held Crown Hotel, Hill Street, December 6th, Mr. Broadhurst (vice-president) in chair. Messrs. Allsop, Jeffrey, Johnson, and Stonall were elected members. Secretary reported he was not in a position to present a financial statement for late show, as he had yet to receive the account for printing, while a few members had still to settle for admission tickets, etc. A lively discussion took place regarding the advisability of fixing a radius for our next annual show, Mr. Sheppard strongly advocating same. Eventually it was decided again to hold our show, "open to the United Kingdom," but to add limit classes at the discretion of the committee. Show date provisionally fixed for cattle show week (as in former years), December 4th and 5th, 1912, Mr. J. Robson asked to judge. Nomination of officers for 1912 proceeded with, for election at annual general meeting January 3rd. A strong body of workers was proposed for the various positions, but a hitch occurred over the secretaryship, the present secretary (Mr. Mole) declining to stand again, but offering his services at the show. Several names were proposed, including two former secretaries (Mr. J. Jones, and Mr. de Maillet), but all declined; and upon pressure being brought to bear on the latter, he explained that he would not again take up the secretaryship so long as the meetings were held in licensed premises. He suggested an amalgamation between three local societies with headquarters at one of the halls in centre of the City, and thought many fanciers who at present did not belong to any cage bird society, would then join. The question of changing headquarters was fully debated, and it was felt that, in the absence of particulars as to the financial aspect of the proposal, nothing could be done that evening, and all members nominated were requested to allow their names to stand until annual general meeting. The table show had to be abandoned, only one member (Mr. J. Clay) bringing exhibits. It is a great pity these contests are not better supported, as they could be made of great help to the younger fanciers.—J. H. de Maillett (for present secretary).

ECCLES C.B.S.

At our first members' table show (reported elsewhere) it was decided to have as near as possible a monthly show. A vote of thanks was given our judge, Mr. Clowe; also to our host and hostess for their esteemed help, which they are always willing to give. We are pleased to report two new members in Messrs. Gaskell Bros., of Boothstown, and Doyle and Moss, of Walkden, and we hope to get more.—J. Hall, Hon. Sec,

CINNAMON-MARKED Y.C.C.

List of points gained by members in club's competitions up to and including Bradford National show: Open competition: H. H. Towers, 142 points; Ogden Bros., 105; C. Morrison, 74; A. Cooper, 76; J. Bailey, 60; J. Thomas 34; F. Allen 32; H. J. Chittenden, 24; J. E. Priestley 22; S. Metcalfe, 16; Mallinson and Son, 10; P. Mason, 10; A. Hirst 9. Open Novice Competition: Brown and Son 83 points; D. Thornton, 49; C. Morrison 40; H. Hadwen, 7.—Grayshon and Allen, Hon. Secs.

NORTHERN BORDER & S.F.C.

Meeting held Dec. 4th, Mr. Shepherd in chair. Mr. Montgomery moved, and Mr. Craig seconded, that our next meeting be held Jan. 15th, instead of Jan. 1st.—Carried.—Mr. Shepperd kindly granted a special, value 2s. 6d., for best current-year bird, exhibited by a member at Sunderland show. Secretary also announced that he had received a special from Mr. Harvey of a pair of "The Model," beautifully done in fretwork, for best bird exhibited by a novice at Gateshead in novice class. Mr. Montgomery moved, and Mr. T. Smith seconded, that the chairman and vice-chairman select medals from the samples which they had got; carried. An apology was then read from Mr. Johnson, who was to have given us a lecture on "The Green Border," he being unable to attend owing to working at night. Our worthy chairman then gave us a few remarks on showing. Mr. Montgomery proposed, and Mr. Snaith seconded, that we have a pair show January 15th (our next meeting) entry 3d. per cage, as usual; carried. Mr. Johnson was elected judge.—J. N. F. Scott, Sec.

Singing Contests.

BLACKBURN.

A meeting of the Blackburn quality Linnet S.A. will be held at club headquarters, Old Red Lion, Snigbrooke, Dec. 16th, at 8 o'clock. We hope all members will attend; also new members.—J. Dobson, president; Rd. Hayhurst, Sec. pro. tem.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Linnet contest held December 10th, Prince Albert Inn, where 16 birds entered. Judges, Messrs. E. Wood and J. Smith. 1, A. Binns; 2, Tom Chippendale; 3, divided between Jack Chippendale and James Chippendale.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

First Linnet contest, held Dec. 2, George and Dragon, Bridge Street. We had 21 birds. 1 and 2, J. Brindley; 3, A. Towler. Also Dec. 9th, 18 birds. 1, A. Towler; 2, T. Piper; 3, O. Potter. Open sing, Dec. 26th (Boxing Day), time singing; I hope all Linnet fanciers will try to bring a good bird or two.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

TYLDSLEY.

Delegates' meeting at Union Arms, Dec. 9th, after the contest. Delegates from Blackburn, Wigan, Leigh, Tydsley and Salford present. We went through the business of previous meeting, but could not finish all that was necessary, so we decided to hold another meeting December 23, at 6 o'clock. In connection with the above, the Globe Inn Linnet Club are giving an open-to-all-England contest Dec. 23rd, singing to commence 2. Will all intended competitors kindly make it their business to get to this contest as early as possible, so as to ensure an early finish. Will those who hold unsold tickets kindly return same by Dec. 16?—J. M'Allister, Sec.

LEEDS.

Linnet contest for quality, held old bird house, King's Head, Shannon Street, Dec. 10, when 38 birds sang. 1, T. Stead; 2, 3, 4, A. Butler. Judges, Messrs. Walt. Naylor and H. Hayes. An open-to-all-England contest, Dec. 16, when 3 special prizes will be given. First pair on nail at 2.15 prompt.—T. C. Summers, Hon. Sec.

Quality singing for Linnets, held Skinner's Arms, Buslingthorpe, Dec. 9th, when 19 birds sang. Ward and Lorriman shared 1, 2, Richardson 3. Also grand contest, Dec. 10th, when 29 birds sang. Sellars and Turner shared 1, 2, Ward 3; judges, Messrs. Granger and Biss. Also a Canary contest, when 12 birds sang; 1, Binns; 2, Stubbs; 3, Chippindale. A Canary contest will take place on Boxing night. There will also be a contest on Christmas Day for this year's pink birds only.—C. Clayton, Hon. Sec.

SALFORD.

Salford Linnet Club's first effort in holding contests after meetings was held on December 10, "Boat House." It was a decided success, and we shall certainly hold them every fortnight at 8.30. Chairman, Mr. H. Cootes. Delegates (Messrs. Green and Cain) gave their reports of meeting held at Tyldsley, but the business appertaining to it was left over. Owing to the large number of visitors, we held the contest in the concert room. Ten birds entered (for two minutes' singing), and everyone was satisfied. 1, 2, J. Green; 3, H. Cootes; 4, J. Cresswell. Timekeepers, Messrs. W. Cain and B. Wharton; bird keeper, Mr. J. Cresswell. The members desire to express their thanks to Mr. T. Warburton and members of the Tyldsley Club for the kindness and hearty welcome extended them on their first visit to the Union Arms last Saturday; they fully appreciated it. Mr. W. Cain (Salford) won first prize for quality. It certainly shows we are improving the prospects of the club. Next contest, open to all Manchester and Salford and district, Dec. 16, for time. First pair up 2 o'clock.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

LANCASTER.

Once more the members of the Lancaster and Dis. C.B.S. have brought off a most successful show. The number of entries this year constituted a record. The only question that worries the hard-working committee is space to stage the birds. Although the hall is a fine one with plenty of good light and freedom from draughts, at times the crush is pretty severe. But everything went off gaily, and everybody was delighted with the fine exhibition. In Mr. T. Swainson the society have a treasurer that any society would be proud of. He is painstaking and careful, and particularly keen about the exhibits entrusted to his care. In Mr. W. Cafferty the society have a hard-working and efficient secretary, to whom great praise is due for the success of the show. Another man the society is proud of is Mr. H. Hoyle, the assistant secretary, a really good assistant, and just the man for the coming vacancy in the secretaryship. On the show day he and Messrs. Durstow and Gardner surpassed themselves in the amount of work they managed to get through; their joint efforts were particularly noticeable in the smart way in which the awards were put on the cages. The committee are all well-known fanciers and did yeoman service. The chairman, Mr. R. Mason, was much in evidence and was all smiles. Coming to the birds, numbers were pretty equally divided between Yorks. and Nor. Challenge Bowl won by Mr. J. Johnson, for most points gained by four nominated birds. Mr. T. Swainson won Sandiford's medal and Mr. H. Hoyle Ramsden's. Mr. R. Taylor, of Preston, judged and seemed to give entire satisfaction.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Owing to the clashing with the North London society, entries at Leyton on Dec. 2nd were about 50 down on last year's total, and North London, we believe, suffered more severely still, which is not to be wondered at, seeing that a number of fanciers are members of each society. The Grange Park Hall is a very suitable building, and the birds were nicely staged on each side of the room, so that all could be easily seen. Yorkshires were hardly so strong as we have seen them at Leyton, but the quality was good in all three sections. Norwich were splendid, quite the best we have ever seen at this fixture, and the competition was keen, particularly so in the amateur section. Crests were found amongst the novices only, but of such quality that one of them was capable of securing the special for best bird in the show. British were hardly up to Leyton form, still a number of very creditable exhibits were on view. Messrs. Forse and Son had all the arrangements in good order, and they were ably assisted by the committee, amongst whom were Messrs. Bartlett, the chairman, and Rhodes, vice-chairman, were very prominent. The challenge cups and principal trophies were won as follows: Specials, best bird in the show and best in Crest section, Mr. Wallace's even-marked Crest. Champion cup and Mr. Wilson's cup best young bird in the show, and sp. best Norwich, Mr. Cooper's yellow Norwich. Best bird in champion section, also reserve for best in show, Mr. Jones's buff mkd. Yorkshire. Mule cup, Mr. Archer's lightly mkd. Greenfinch-Canary. Amateur cup, Mr. Burbage's buff Yorks. Novice cup, Mr. Wallace's clear body Crest. British champion cup, Mr. Marley's Blackbird. Novice cup, Mr. Oliver's Starling. Ramsden's special, Mr. Roberts' variegated yellow Norwich. Mr. C. A. House judged.

Xmas Greetings to Old Friends and New.

"The Year is dying—Let him die."—but with his parting breath he calls on us to welcome his successor and give thanks for the many benefits received during the twelve months of his reign. 1911 has for most of us been an eventful year. For the Proprietor of "Cage Birds" it has been an especially memorable period.

A slight recurrence of a painful illness has been successfully overcome—a number of bitter disappointments of a private nature have been compensated for by a fair measure of success in other things, and through all the little troubles and triumphs "Cage Birds" has gone happily on in its career of usefulness, making many new friends and cementing many old links of regard.

"Cage Birds League" has been most successfully inaugurated and has already proved an enormous force for good in the interests of birds and birdkeepers alike. The services of a splendidly loyal and hard working staff have been as ungrudgingly given as ever, and the same spirit of enthusiasm and energy as originally placed "Cage Birds" in its position of pre-eminence still, we are thankful to say, animates every worker associated with us.

To our readers and advertisers, and all concerned, we tender sincere and grateful thanks. That they and their feathered pets may spend this Xmastide in all happiness and comfort is the fervent wish of their obedient servant to command,

F. CARL.

My little boy has a Canary that will follow him all about the house, writes Mr. J. E. Jones (Harlech).

We have closed with 500 entries, all classes standing, write Messrs. King and Yeo, secs. of Frome Show.

Mr. J. Swinsot (125, Ayresome Street, Middlesbrough) writes that he would be glad if Mr. W. Miller, whose seed-crushing machine was recently illustrated in our columns, would kindly communicate with him.

Poplar and Dist. C.B.S.'s show on Saturday next (Dec. 16) will be held in the All Hallows Schoolrooms, Dunkell Street, Poplar, and not in the Pekin Street Schoolrooms, as advised, writes Mr. H. W. Cook, the hon. sec.

The Sheffield O.S. have again booked the Cutlers' Hall for their open show to be held on Nov. 1 and 2, 1912, writes Mr. T. Bishop, the sec. Messrs. W. Mundell and C. Houlton have been engaged as two of the judges.

I wish to thank you on behalf of our members for the splendid report you gave us in CAGE BIRDS of our show, writes Mr. W. H. Pyke, hon. sec. of the Reading and Dis. C.B.S. We are all very pleased with it.

The Mid-Rhondda C.B.S. Show on Boxing Day, Dec. 26, is a members' show, writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg, the sec. If it had been an open show we would have advertised it in CAGE BIRDS. I have had no end of applications for schedules.

Some ten or a dozen fanciers journeyed from Harrogate to Bradford to see the National Show and had a most enjoyable time, writes Mr. W. E. Fergusson. We hope the show was a success, and that another time the entries will double themselves.

The whole of the sixteen parts of "Our Canaries" are now on sale. Those fanciers who are desirous of obtaining copies of this, the greatest work on Canaries ever published, should lose no time in placing their orders. Sixpence per part from newsagents, 7d. post free, flat in card, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

At Sheffield Show on Saturday last, we hear that the hall was splendidly patronised, fanciers coming from all directions and being well pleased with the grand display of birds. Mr. J. C. Barnes, the local enthusiast, and one of the judges, was observed to be very busy amongst the novices and amateurs, giving advice what to do and what not to do in his usual free and easy style.

SPECIAL OFFER to senders of Undisplayed SMALL PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS.

Two insertions for Price and a Half.

Owing to the Xmas Holidays, advertisements for the issue dated DEC. 30th must close on Saturday, Dec. 23rd, and in order to save both our advertisers and ourselves a deal of time and trouble we will accept advertisements for our next two issues, dated Dec. 23rd and Dec. 30th, for the price of one and a half insertions, provided the wording remaine exactly the same. Write plainly on your order "Two Weeks' Special Offer," and enclose the fee for the two insertions at the price of one and a half. REMEMBER: Do this next week.

The extra special No. 4 in our schedule should read, "Classes 14 to 18," and not 14 to 17, as stated, writes Mr. J. W. Jones, hon. sec. of the North Wales C.B.S. Show.

Messrs. R. Angel and W. Roberts (both members of the committee), writes Mr. J. W. Jones, hon. sec. of the North Wales C.B.S., have presented the society with a handsome £2 2s. challenge cup, making three cups in all to be competed for at our open show on Dec. 26. Also Mr. H. Butler (Hawarden) has kindly promised us an illuminated certificate for most points in Class 5 (Yorks hen); we are sorry that same did not come to hand in time to appear in our schedule. Will intending exhibitors please note?

The competitions of the Midland Counties Y.C.C., write Messrs. Beck and Andrews, the secs., were brought to a conclusion at Derby Show on Dec. 2 and 4. The winner of the challenge cup in the champion section is P. Victor Williams, Esq. (Market Drayton) with 102 points; medal for runner-up, Mr. W. G. Andrews (West Bromwich), with 79 points. The winner of the cup in the novice section is Mr. Percival Lane (Worcester), 57 points; Mr. Earnshaw (Smethwick) winning the medal for runner-up with 34 points.

At the Bradford National Show 18 classes were provided for champion Yorkshires. Competition was keen, there being an average of 20 entries per class. Birds fed on Ramden's Pure Peppers were awarded 16 firsts, 14 seconds, 15 thirds, and 11 fourths, besides a number of valuable specials. Out of 350 birds competing in these 18 champion classes, 225 were entered as having been colour-fed solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. For proof, refer to catalogue. Quality will tell. Make a point of seeing Ramsden's samples for 1912, which will be on view at the Crystal Palace Show.—Advt.

The very flourishing financial state of the London and Provincial O.S. is plainly evidenced by the balance sheet for the year ending Nov., 1911, just issued by the esteemed treasurer, Mr. Geo. Crabb. No less a sum than £108 13s. 6d. (cash) remains in hand, while the total assets (cups, trophies, etc.) reach the sum of £165 7s. 3d., after due allowance for depreciation. The officials are to be heartily congratulated upon this very happy state of affairs. The hard-working hon. sec., Mr. C. W. Law (Brimley House, Woodhouse Road, North Finchley) will be glad to hear from anyone desiroue of being enrolled as a member.

Will all members of the City of Birmingham C.B.S., writes Mr. S. Mole, the sec., please return all unsold tickets of our late open show?

Palace Show, Feb. 2 to 6.—Record classification. New Classes: 2 for Unflighted Norwich hens, one each for Unflighted Yorkshire hens, Foul Cinnamons, White Canaries and Cinnamon Crests; two for Novice Borders; one each Limit Mule, Wagtail, Lesser Redpoll, Decorated Cages and Appliances; 2, extra cage classes; and 3 classes for Rollers. Seventeen specialist judges. Schedules will be sent out in January to same names as last year. Enquiries of J. W. Ramsden, Show Manager, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London.—Advt.

A Cutting Machine.

Could any reader inform me where I would be able to have a cutter made to stamp out cardboard, the thickness of a prize card, for a particular design of a ticket? writes Mr. G. Atkinson (5, Market Place, Guisborough, Yorks).

Look Out for This!

Every reader should this week give special attention to the LEAGUE columns. An announcement is made as to a most important step about to be taken by the LEAGUE, and there is other matter of interest to everyone, whether at present a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE or not.

Standing the Test.

The Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid shown by Messrs. Martin and Archer at the Bradford National Show was subjected to a great amount of scrutiny, writes one of our representatives. We did not hear a single doubt expressed as to its genuineness. Truly a very great rarity, showing its parentage clearly, and a credit to its producer, Miss Reeves.

Baulked by the Railway Company.

The North British Railway Company, shortly before 7 p.m., notified us that exhibits for despatch at 7.55 would not be accepted after 7 p.m., writes Mr. A. D. Duncan, sec. of the recent Kilsyth Show. As we had notified exhibitors in Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dumbarton, Helensburgh, Hamilton, etc., of our intention to despatch birds by the 7.55 p.m. train, so that they would receive birds home Saturday night, there would be much disappointment and many weary waits. We packed all we could manage in the limited time left us. The matter has now been taken up with the traffic superintendent of the line.

A Prize for Artistic Fanciers.

OUR PAINTING COMPETITION.

(See Frontispiece.)

Following our usual custom at Christmastide, our Frontispiece this week is designed to be coloured. We offer a cash prize of one guinea for the best attempt at colouring the same which reaches us from one of our readers on or before Thursday, January 4th.

The medium to be employed (oil, water-colour, or crayon) is left to the discretion of the competitor. The finished attempt should be packed flat, or rolled in a tube, and have the sender's name and address written on the back.

The whole of the front page must be coloured, not merely the frontispiece alone.

In this competition entries are received only on the understanding that the Editor's decision shall be accepted as final.

At Oakham Show.

Owing to the cage birds being judged so late in the evening at Oakham (nearly five o'clock), it was impossible, writes our representative, to give a satisfactory comment on them. Only four classes stood, the others being cancelled.

The Norwich Plainhead Club.

Will the committee kindly note that there will be a meeting to-morrow (Saturday, Dec. 16) afternoon, at Blackburn Show, and I should be pleased if they would attend, as there is some very important business.—Jno. Hopkins, hon. sec.

Changes of Address.

Secretaries, exhibitors, and others are asked to note the following changes of address:—Mr. A. Ambler, from Sefton Road, Morecambe, to Langton Lodge, Scotton, Knaresborough, Yorks; Mr. G. Barton (hon. joint sec. of the New Cross and Dis. C.B.S.), from Warwick St., to 8, Amersham Grove, New Cross, London, S.E.

Canary as Nursemaid!

A Canary belonging to a resident at Balham has been attracting a good deal of attention in the daily papers recently. It is said to be wonderfully tame, and to guard the baby whilst the latter sleeps. If anyone attempts to touch the infant, this feathered nursemaid shows its disapproval by vigorously pecking at them!

Peterborough's Good Intentions.

Kindly allow us, writes Mr. S. L. Cocks, sec. Peterborough Show to ask for anyone who may have a claim against our society to give our members a little time to get the amount necessary together. Our show, as usual, turned out a financial loss, but I may say that we shall clear all debts again and still smile.

Keeping a Stout Heart!

With painful iteration, we are told that only perseverance brings success. How will this do, writes "G.G.," as an illustration? At a show I attended quite recently, on a pouring wet day, one of the committee remarked, quite light-heartedly: "Oh! we don't take any notice of a wet day; we have had it wet every year since we started (five years ago), and we have not gone under yet!" Can anyone beat that?

L. and P.O.S. Annual Dinner.

The London and Provincial O.S. are holding their annual dinner at the Holborn Restaurant (Duke's Room) on Jan. 3 next; tickets 4s. each. The L. and P.O.S. will welcome friends. It is hoped that some of our brother fanciers from other London societies will join us on this occasion, as the members of the L. and P.O.S. are always willing to, and do, join in whatever is happening round London, not only at the shows, but at annual dinners, etc. It is hoped, also, that our own members will come in large numbers, as I am sure there can be no fault to find with the Holborn. The musical portion will be supplied by professional talent. —C. W. Law, Brimley House, Woodhouse Rd., near Finchley.

And So Say All of Us.

The following interesting remarks appeared recently in the "Edinburgh Evening Dispatch" —"There are some people who know no other game but golf. There are others who sit round a football field and get their exercise by yelling to their favourite players; and there are many people who know no sport outside a racecourse. But there are others, quite sensible, intelligent men, who find their pleasure in other spheres. Hundreds, thousands of working men, are taken up with the breeding of birds, and the important shows being held in Edinburgh indicate the widespread interest in the pursuit. It is an admirable hobby, and one which deserves every encouragement."

IMPORTANT HOLIDAY NOTICE.

Owing to the Christmas Holidays this year extending over the Monday and Tuesday (December 25th and 26th), advertisers, correspondents, and our readers generally, should note that any communications for insertion in our issue dated December 30th should reach us not later than FRIDAY, DECEMBER 22nd NEXT (or first post Saturday at latest). "Cage Birds" will be published as usual on the Friday (December 29th). All advertisers should take advantage of the special offer made them

The Young at Four Weeks Old.

When the young birds are about four weeks old they should be trained to the show cage, so that they will be able to show themselves off to the best advantage when the time comes for them to appear before the judge, who is to decide their future battles. The training of the young birds is a matter that is too often neglected, with the result that when they are being judged they become wild, bang themselves about the cage, and thereby make it quite impossible for them to be judged.

The simplest means of training is to hang a show cage on the front of the flight cage. If the show cage has a door at both ends it can then be hung on a flight cage either side of the room and still face the light, which, of course, is essential, as birds will not go into a dark cage—that is, where there is no light in the cage. You may put a little egg food in the show-cage as an inducement for the birds to enter, but I never experience much trouble in that respect. I use a short cane to drive them in occasionally, and they soon learn what it is intended for. It is well to leave them in the show-cage now and then, and go over them, as it were. It gives them confidence, and they soon know what is wanted of them.

The Colour-feeding Process.

At about eight weeks old the young birds should be started on the colour food. Though the early-hatched birds do not, as a general rule, start moulting until some weeks later, it is advisable to get them on the pepper well before they do, as when the blood is thoroughly charged with the colouring matter there is less likelihood of their coming out patchy, even if missed a day now and then, which is sometimes unavoidable. I use both hot and cold pepper, and I like it in the proportion of one pound of cold to a quarter pound of hot. The hot, I think, fixes the colour, and the colour lasts longer by its use; and there is not much looseness of the bowels. I always give plenty of maw seed when colour-feeding my birds.

I always cover the birds up when moulting them. I hang a thin white sheet in front of the cages, but about three inches away; this keeps any draught or dust from the birds; it also keeps them quiet, and if it is properly fixed, top and bottom, you need not fear any draught when the bird-room door is opened.

Towards the end of the moult the colour food must gradually be weakened to avoid the birds coming out too hot on the head, which spoils that evenness of colour that is so much desired. A little sulphate of iron should be given in the drinking water at this period; it is a good tonic, and assists in tightening up the feather. A little linseed is also very good for them. The bath should be given the bird freely at this period. There is not a finer conditioner or a better means of putting on that beautiful sheen (which is the hall-mark of good health) on a bird's plumage than cold water.

Those birds that are intended for show and are nearing the end of the moult, should be removed from the flight cage and put in separate cages until they fine down. Just a little hemp seed may be given to them, but do not over-do it or you will get them too fat on the chest, which entirely spoils their appearance.

Washing and Staging the Birds.

I now come to the last, but by no means least important part of my subject—washing and staging a bird for exhibition. No matter how good a bird may be, if it is not put down properly, it will get beaten, and often by an inferior bird that is shown in faultless condition. In view of the importance that judges put on staging, it should be one of the young fancier's first aims.

The chief qualifications necessary to bring the operation to a successful issue are nerve, confidence, and the ability to handle a bird properly. The latter is very essential, for when the bird is properly handled it will struggle but very little. The articles required are three good-sized basins, a soft hair shaving brush, some old thin cloths, with which to wipe the bird, some strips of old flannelette and a sponge. Any good soap will do. You will also require a clean towel; in fact, everything that is used must be quite clean. Undoubtedly the best means by which to dry the birds is a hot water tank. It need not be large; my own is 18in. by 9in. by 3in.; a cage of some sort will be needed. The one I use is made specially for the purpose: it has a glass front, two perches screwed on at the back and a ventilator on top, a sliding door at each end which does away with the necessity of handling a bird when once it is placed in the drying cage, as all that is then necessary is to open the left-hand door and place a show cage against it, and the bird will run through from one cage to the other. The hot water tank slides in at the back. Just above the tank, and resting on four small screws, is a light wood frame, over which is tightly stretched a piece of thin flannelette to keep the birds off the hot tank. With such a drying cage it is quite impossible for the bird to dry hard in feather as is sometimes the case when drying in front of the fire. Before you start to wash a bird get everything ready at hand; get a nice clear fire, and hang the various cloths round it to get warm. If you put the soap in a small jar (a jam jar for instance) it will not then wobble off the table.

Have plenty of hot (not boiling) water at hand, and pour some in the first basin, and with the brush and soap work up a good lather. That done, fill the other basins. Do not have the water too hot; if you can comfortably bear your hand in it, it will be about right. If you put a little borax in the water it will soften it. Wipe your hands thoroughly before catching a bird, or you are liable to pull some feathers out. Having everything now ready, catch the bird that is to be washed, and hold it firmly but gently in the left hand and submerge it in the first basin; of course, excepting the head; and at the same time work the lather into the feathers under the wings with the right hand. Then take the bird out, and hold the tail over the side of the basin, and wash it, using the brush the way the feathers lie.

The tail done, spread the right wing out, and wash that in a similar manner; then spread the left wing over the thick part of the thumb, and do that likewise. Now do the neck and down the back, always using the brush in the same direction. When the back is done turn the bird over on its back, and hold the head between the thumb and forefinger, and wash from the throat downwards; then return the bird to its former position, and wash the head and face.

In washing the face a little care is needed to keep the soap from getting in the bird's eyes. In washing the head the brush may be used in both directions, but finish up the way the feathers lie. Be sure to remove all the dirt from the bird's nostrils; the dirt seems to cling there more firmly than in any other part of the bird.

Having removed all traces of dirt, get as much of the soap out of the feathers as you can in the first water; then hold the bird over the second basin, and with the sponge give the bird a thorough rinsing. Then go to the third basin and repeat the process. Do not be afraid of using plenty of water.

Now, with the sponge, get as much of the water from the feathers as you can; lay the bird in one of the warm cloths while you dry your hands with the towel; then take the bird up, and place it in the corner of another warm cloth holding it under the wings, with the little finger over the root of the tail. The bird will not then be able to struggle. With the other end of the cloth gently dab the nostrils to absorb any water which might irritate the bird; then spread out both wings, and wipe them, and the back, also the tail by drawing it between the thumb and forefinger of the right hand. Now roll the bird in one of the pieces of flannelette, and lay it on its back on the tank, which, of course, has been previously filled with boiling water, or in front of the fire if that is how you are drying the birds.

In rolling the bird be careful to get the feathers all lying the right way; do not roll the bird too loosely, or it may escape; and, of course, leave the head free. It is not absolutely necessary to roll the bird at all; it may be put direct into the drying cage. My chief reason for doing so is that sometimes a bird becomes very much exhausted after its tubbing, and the rest and warmth will soon revive it. When the bird has been rolled about ten minutes it may be removed from the flannels and placed in the cage in which it is to finish off drying. It should not be placed too close to the fire, as heat is quite unnecessary; it only requires to be kept warm as a preventative against its taking a chill.

On no account attempt to wash a sick bird, or it will end with fatal results to the bird. The birds should be washed about three days before being sent to a show, but birds that carry a lot of feather may require a day or two longer in which to tighten up. With a little practice the washing process should not occupy more than three or four minutes; the quicker it is done the quicker and better will the bird come through.

In conclusion, if there is anything that I have not made perfectly clear, or if you would like to raise any question which I may not have touched on, I shall be very pleased to answer you to the best of my ability.

At the close of the lecture Mr. Jackson was kept very busy answering the many questions put to him, and at the finish a very hearty vote of thanks was accorded him.—H. W. Cook, Hon. Sec.

OUR XMAS NUMBER.

40 Pages for a Penny.

The huge issue of "Cage Birds," presented this week to mark the advent of another Xmas shows conclusively—if evidence on the point were needed—that the hobby it is our pride and pleasure to represent shows no signs of decreasing vigour or interest.

Such an issue is well worth passing on to a neighbour in the hope of enlisting him amongst the ranks of bird keepers. May we solicit your help in this respect? We are always pleased to send specimens of "Cage Birds" to any reader willing to distribute the same amongst his friends.

Where Bird Sellers are Dumb.

By D. G. Ricard.

As is no doubt well known, birds in the tropics, whilst they can boast far grander plumage than the denizens of colder climes, do not as a rule possess the gift of song. This is particularly true of South Africa, where more singing birds would be welcome. For this reason cage birds are imported. This trade is, as far as Cape Town is concerned, entirely in the hands of the Malays. If you wish to purchase a Canary in Cape Town you will have no difficulty in finding out in which direction to bend your steps. Your troubles commence when you reach your destination. There are any number of fast and feast days in the Malay calendar, and on these days none of the "faithful" are in evidence. If it should be one of these festivals when you call on the dealer, you will find the doors closed and a notice, in more or less intelligible lettering, on the door, "Come to-morrow." But if it should not be a calendar feast day, you will find the door open and the proprietor seated cross-legged on his counter ready to attend to you. The shop is down two or three steps—all the Malays live in what we should call the areas, for economy's sake. But this does not prevent the glorious sunlight from streaming in, and the floor of melody that greets you on entering is surprising. The Malay bird seller deals entirely in English birds, as all his customers are English. The cages are hung by ropes from the ceiling, somewhat after the manner in which country people hang their laundry in wet weather. Here are Canaries, Thrushes, Blackbirds, the price marked on a card and attached to the wires of the cage. No bartering is countenanced, and no efforts are made to induce a sale. Until you first address the shopkeeper he appears oblivious to your presence. If you desire a closer inspection of a bird he gets down from the counter and unhooks the cage by the aid of a long stick, and hands it to you. You wish to examine another; he takes this down. If you make a purchase, well and good. If you do not, it is also well—he returns to his seat on the counter, and it is not until afterwards that you realise that you have been engaged in business with a man who has not opened his lips in speech. But this is the way of the Malay.

Do Starlings Pair for Life?

A Peculiar Habit.

"I am asked," says our tame naturalist, "whether Starlings pair for life, and, if so, how comes it that they congregate in such enormous flocks during the winter months?" Starlings are amongst the birds who always breed in the same nests, and, broadly speaking, all such birds pair for life. House Sparrows are said to be an exception to this rule, but this is doubtful, although continence is not amongst this bird's characteristics. Starlings are naturally gregarious, and newly fledged youngsters, in their nesting feathers, usually foregather with other broods and form small flocks. One of the peculiar habits of these birds during the winter months is for all the flocks to pack together in some favoured spot at night for sleeping purposes.—"Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic."

Glasgow and Western Counties.

Over 300 birds staged: An advance on last year.

The Glasgow and Western Counties Norwich Can., Mule, Brit. and For. B.C. annual show held in the Good Templars Hall, 122, Ingram Street, Glasgow, on December 2nd. President, Mr. W. Counelly; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Johnstone and D. King; Treasurer, Mr. A. McFarlane; Committee, Messrs. [illegible], Johnston, Renfrew, Shearer, Munro, Liddell, Cathcart, Young, and Thomson; Secretary, Mr. T. Drysdale. Judges: Canary classes, Mr. G. Amott (Kirkcaldy); Mules, British and Foreign, Mr. J. Strachan (Bathgate). There were over 300 birds staged, an advance on last year's number, and the quality of the exhibits was good. Mr. Drysdale, who makes an able and efficient secretary, assisted by many of the committee, had all his arrangements made to perfection. The hall is an admirable one for show purposes, with splendid overhead windows, which give grand light; and it is entirely free from any semblance of draught. Some valuable specials, the gifts of members and friends, were competed for, along with five handsome cups. The Reid cup, for best bird in show, won by Mr. McFarlane, with a noted Norwich buff cock; he also had the runner up. The Malcolmson cup for best young Plainhead, went to a buff Plainhead hen. The Roulstone's cup for best young Border Fancy was won by Mr. W. Hamilton. The Pettigrew cup for best young Mule or Hybrid, Mr. T. Drysdale; and the Henderson cup for best young British, Mr. P. Pettigrew (Bramble Finch). The judges' awards seemed to give pretty general satisfaction. There was a very fair number of visitors.

TOWNHILL.

First annual members' show held Dec. 2nd, the Co-operative Hall. The entries numbered nearly a hundred in the cage bird section, which was very creditable seeing it was their first show. The secretary, Mr. A. Burt, along with his committee, are to be congratulated upon the management of affairs. There were three handsome trophies for competition. Two were won by the secretary for 117 points and 61 points respectively, and the other by James Gold, 45 points. Mr. W. Gulland (Dunfermline) judged the cage birds.

Ireland's Best on View at Larne.

Norwich and Yorkshires the Feature of the Show.

Third annual show of the Larne and Dist. C.B.A. was held in the McGarel Town Hall on Dec. 7 and 8. The valuable Challenge, Novice, and Closed Ring cups were competed for by the members of the Y.C.B.S., and there was a host of other valuable specials, which caused entries to come up well. Nor. and Yorks. were a feature in themselves, and some of Ireland's best birds were to be found staged in this far north hall. Mr. T. Mayne (Hon. Sec.), assisted by an able and willing body of experienced workers on the Committee, Messrs. J. Harte (Chairman), W. Owens (Treasurer), Magee, Smith, Gettinby, Mann, Rogan, Ramsey, M'Conkey, Crawford, Gilchrist, Kane, etc., had everything in apple-pie order, and looked well after the exhibits. The birds were well staged, and the hall is an ideal one for a cage bird show, being well lighted and free from draughts. During the afternoon the attendance of visitors was very good, and in every way the show must have proved a financial success. All credit is due to the management, who are one and all courteous and only too willing to assist in every way. Mr. H. W. Battye placed the cards. Specials were awarded to Messrs. Dunlop, Creighton, Thompson, Stewart, Devins, O'Reilly, Gillen, Fleming, Ryan, Alexander, Lavery, Hart, Barclay, Ramsey, Geddes, Crawford, and Owens and Magee.

SUCCESSES AT SANQUHAR.

Strong Class of British Goldfinches.

The 27th annual show of the Sanquhar Society was held in the Public Hall on Dec. 9th. Entries in all sections were well maintained, British Goldfinches being the strongest open class numerically. The quality of the exhibits staged was excellent, Borders being outstanding. In these classes Mr. W. Mossie (Annbank) literally swept the deck with his well-known English winners. This year the cage birds were shown in the Lesser Hall, at the rear of the Public Hall, and were well suited for light and space. The success of the show is in a great measure due to the energetic and untiring efforts of the honorary secretary, Mr. Sam Laidlaw, who left nothing to be done in the way of arrangements, these being carried out in an admirable manner. The committee of stewards, consisting of Messrs. D. Hamilton (convener), J. Campbell, R. Sharp, ft. Hume, J. Harkness, J. Stobbs, and J. Galloway, with the president, Mr. J. Moffat, J.P., were also very painstaking. Mr. A. Chalmers (Kirkintilloch) judged.

CREWE.

Annual show for members held Dec. 2, in the Ante-Room of the Co-operative Hall, when some 80 birds were staged. Owing to the illness of two or three prominent members, who possess teams of real good birds, we missed the usual large entry and keen competition. We hope they will soon be well again, and be able to take their places in competition. The hon. sec., Mr. E. Jaycott, says he means to do his level best to make things "hum" in Crewe. He feels sure this society is now starting on its way to a very successful future. There is no doubt he deserves the heartiest co-operation and support from all fanciers in Crewe and District. The membership is now open to all the surrounding district. A grand yellow Norwich cock, with mkd. head (Mr. F. W. Cooper) secured special for best canary. Mr. E. Jaycott's Wheatear, a young bird, so he informs us, secured special for best British. Mr. J. W. Lawton won the championship gold medal for most points during the year with six nominated birds. He also won Mr. Victor Williams's challenge cup for most points in Canaries with six nominated birds at this show. Mr. C. Houlton judged, and his awards were well received.

LINNET (6): 1, Greenwood, in best condition, nice shape, col., and markings, medium size; 2, 3, hc, Morgan, 2nd F.M., splendid size, shape, col., and markings, grand one to moult, 3rd H.M., pale col., good shape, markings, and condition; vhc, Jaycott. SISKIN, ETC. (4): All Greenwood, leader very nicely mkd. Twite, 2nd grand Ben Siskin, 3rd nice Lesser Jonque Redpoll. A.O.S. (5): 1, spl, best Brit., 2, Jaycott, excellent young Wheatear, standard size, only wants adult moult to be a real picture, 2nd medium size Bramble, good colours, marks, spangle, and condition; 3, Hancock, nice Pipit, medium size, in fine condition.

WIDNES.

Widnes and Dist. O.S. night show of pairs of Canaries and British held at headquarters, the Grosvenor Hotel, Nov. 20, when about 66 birds were present. Competition was very keen in the Nor. pairs, and also the Nor. Green pairs and the Bord. pairs were very nice. British were good too. There was a capital attendance of fanciers, which speaks excellently for the resuscitation of this Society; so much so, that there and then at the meeting which took place whilst Mr. Chas. Houlton was judging a members' show was arranged; and as Mr. Houlton gave satisfaction, he was unanimously appointed to judge same, to be held on Boxing Day next. Will all fanciers who can join the Society do so at once in order to strengthen the hands of the worthy and esteemed Hon. Sec., Mr. Andrews, who will be glad to receive the names of intending members. Such well-known fanciers, as Messrs. R. Barker, H. Abbott, J. Hampson, Jenkins, Andrews, Bloor, etc., were present and took a lively interest in the show.

YORKS., PAIRS: 1, Higham, the yell. cock of this pair won in a big novice class at Bolton, we were told. NOR., PAIRS (10): 1, sp., best pair, c, Johnston, very well balanced pair of clears, fine type and quality, particularly in the hen; 2, Abbott, varieg. and cl., great size, grand shape, good quality, well balanced; 3, Jenkins, Cinn. variegd., very cobby and a cl. yell., also good type; vhc, he, Jones. NOR., GREEN (10) a very fine lot of pairs indeed: 1, Bloor, really good for col., type, quality of feather and tight condition; 2, Jenkins, foul, sides and tail, and a sell, both well matched, good in size, shape, col., and condition; 3, Lightfoot, even balanced, nice size, rare col., good Nor. type; vhc, Abbott; hc, Jones; c, Murray. BORD (4): 1, Hampson, pair of really typical Green Borders, matched to perfection; 2, Andrews; cl. buff and an eye and wing mark yell., nicely matched medium size., grand type and condition; 3, Ashcroft, eye and wing mark buff and a cl. yell., nicely mated; vhc, Bloor. LINNET (6): 1, Leicester, best col. and markings, fine feather and condition; 2, Yates, fine markings and condition; 3, Hampson, grand shape and col., etc., slightly damaged in feather top of head; vhc, Barker; hc, c, Keates. TWITE, ETC. (4): 1, Davies, lovely conditioned Lesser jonque Redpoll; 2, Barker, neat small Mealy Redpoll; 3, vhc, Lightfoot, nice Siskin. A.O.S. (6): 1, Hampson, nice Goldie, good colours, bars and buttons, rich face, nice tan and condition; 2, Leicester, Goldie, beaten only in blaze, nice bird when up in col.; 3, Murray, nice conditioned Bullie; vhc, Andrews; hc, Keates; c, Ashcroft.

BRISTOL (Charity).

The "Crocker" United fanciers held their second annual show Nov. 25th, in the "Old Library," West Street, a fine place for a show. The cage birds were staged in the upper hall, where there is plenty of light and room. The officers are: Chairman, Mr. T. Bateman; secretary, Mr. E. Lane, and treasurer, Mr. N. D. Warr. Cage birds totalled about 70. Special for best in show, Mr. Viney (with a Buff Nor.); second best, Mr. Jones (an unflighted Buff Yorks); 3rd best, Mr. J. Locke (a Yellow Bunting). Mr. J. Williams, the cage bird superintendent had everything in good working order, looking well after the wants of the birds. The attendance was very good, and we hope the president will be able to hand over a nice little sum in aid of the poor of Holy Trinity, and to the Crimean Veterans' Association, for which purpose the show was run. Considering the Bristol C.B.S. were holding their annual show the same day, this event must be considered a great success. Judge, Mr. W. G. Bull.

The Critique.

INVERURIE.

Inverurie C.B., etc., Association's annual competition held in the Drill Hall, on Dec. 9th. The hall is one of the best for a cage bird show, being well lighted and high roofed, and it was kept at a very even temperature. The President (Mr. T. L. Morrison (Town Chamberlain) knows how to run a show, having had long experience. He was well backed up by the Vice President, Mr. J. Philip, and a large committee of hard workers, who had everything in first class order. The Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. A. Mackie, had a hard morning's work, but he got through it with flying colours, and makes an ideal secretary. Norwich were the outstanding feature of the show, some rare good specimens being staged. Judging was carried out by Mr. F. Garden (Aberdeen) and his awards gave satisfaction to all.

The Critique.

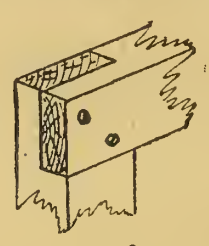
YELL. CK. NOR. CHEAP, SERVICEABLE CAGES: HOW TO CONSTRUCT THEM.



Helpful Article and Sketches

By
DOUGLAS E. SAYCE
(Sunderland).

After the bird, the most expensive item is undoubtedly the cage, and when a fancier needs thirty or forty, the bill for cages alone can become a heavy one. I want to describe here how neat, strong and serviceable cages may be made at a very low cost.

These cages are of the box type, and if made to suitable dimensions are admirable for breeding purposes. They are constructed largely of three-ply boards, and consequently are very light. In some bought cages the back is made of three-ply, but there is no reason why the same wood should not be used for top, bottom and ends as well as back, if lap as shown in Fig. 2. Cut a piece of three-ply 14 by 9 inches, and nail it to the framework, using small nails and putting them in about every two inches all the way round. This forms one end of the cage. Make the other end in the same way; but before nailing on the three-ply, a little over half-way up cut out (with a fretsaw) a circle of 4 inches diameter, which afterwards will form a convenient door for running the birds from one cage to another.

Take Fig. 3 as representing one end; with a chisel and mallet cut through the three-ply so as to leave two shallow recesses ¾ inch by ½ inch, as shown at A and B. Then cut corresponding recesses on the other end, and from your supply of strips cut two pieces 15 inches in length and fix these into the recesses you have just cut, and nail through from the outside with fairly long nails. Then cut two more pieces of three-ply 16 by 9½ inches, and nail one of these pieces on to the top and one on to the bottom, leaving the slight overlap in front of the cage. The use of the cross pieces will now become apparent; they afford something firm to nail the three-ply to. Another piece of three-ply 16 by 14 inches will then be required and that is nailed to the edges of the framework and also to the two cross pieces, to form the back.

Cut a circular door to cover the hole you have made in the one end of the cage. Make it about 4½ inches diameter; shape as shown in Fig 4. It is to be fastened over the hole with a small bolt and nut, but should not be fixed permanently until distempering and painting have been completed.

All is now complete save for the front. For this you will require some of the thin whitewood: two strips 16 inches by 1 inch, and a strip 16 by 2 inches. One of the narrower strips may at once be nailed across the top just under the overlap of three-ply, which should be nailed or screwed to it. The broader strip should be temporarily screwed into position, as mainstay, leaving one inch underneath for the third strip, which is to form the front of the sand-tray.

Personally, I make my sand-trays of sheet tin, with the edges bent up three-quarters of an inch, and the corners soldered. Three ply wood may, of course, be used for the purpose, nailing on narrow strips all the way round the edge; but I always prefer the tin. After having made the sand tray to your fancy, the cage is ready for wiring.

Seeing that removable punched-bar cage-fronts are so good and now advertised so cheaply, it may strike the cage-maker that he need not trouble to make his own fronts. I always make mine, however. I use the best bird-cage wire and solder together with a blow-pipe. Whether you get one made or whether you make it yourself, be sure and have a sliding door, and two projecting wires at top and bottom to fasten into the wood work. Mark upon the wood where these wires will go, and drill the holes with a suitable thin bradawl (the mainstay being first unscrewed from its position). The wire-work is then gently forced into place, and the main-stay pushed on and screwed as before, thus rendering the wire work quite firm. The advantage of having the main-stay screwed is that it can easily be removed thus rendering the whole front detachable for disinfecting, distempering, etc.

I always do the inside of my cages with a good sanitary, washable distemper, of light blue colour. This distemper is certainly a good disinfectant, possessing the advantages of being cheap and washable. Any colour may be chosen to suit the breeder's fancy, but I think the light blues are preferable. As regards the outside, it may be painted or stained and varnished, or enamelled, just as your own taste dictates. Perches can then be fitted, and the little circular door finally bolted into position on the inner side of the cage; seed-hopper and drinker can be purchased, and the cage will be complete.

Thus with a little careful work and a very trifling outlay, you have a cage which, with fair usage will last for years. Once every six months take off the front and give the inside another coat of distemper, thus keeping your little pets in comfort and a sanitary condition.

This bird, I may say in passing, is more inclined to melanism than any other Finch, and if fed on practically all hemp, will turn nearly black. In winter, when green food is scarce, a little sweet apple should be given; this is greatly relished, as also are a few ants' eggs. Given the treatment above described I do not think Mr. Bullie will take much harm, but if you happen to be gardener do not ruthlessly shoot them because they eat some of your fruit buds. I have examined a good number of buds the Bullie has meddled with, and nearly all the buds showed that they contained maggots or grubs. The bird may have some good ones occasionally, but consider the havoc a few maggots or grubs would do to an orchard. I think you will agree he is really a blessing in disguise. I hope these remarks will appeal to the pessimist, so that he may spare one of his best friends in the garden, namely the "Bullfinch."

The Chaffinch.

I think the Chaffinch with his merry "Pink, pink" is more popular among the poorer classes, especially the artisan class, than any other Finch. The only thing to be said against these people is that they do not always study the bird's comfort enough as regards room. In his wild life he has, of course, plenty of room and plenty of air, and when he is kept in confinement he should have as much room as possible.

He is one of the birds which greet the eyes of the traveller as he passes through the leafy lanes, the bright colour standing out conspicuously. The cock Finch has a plum red breast this colour extending all over the cheeks, and also above the eyes; the slatey-blue of his head reaches down to the neck. The back is chestnut in colour, and the wings are of a darker hue. Two white bars across the wings show plainly, also a white edging to each side of the tail; rump is of a greenish hue, and the tail is practically black. In his wild state he is truly a handsome bird. The hen is much duller in colouring, and is easily distinguished from the cock. During the winter when our Finches flock together very few hens will be found among the cocks. In the autumn several migrate from other countries, and thus help swell our numbers.

About the middle of April Chaffinches begin to build their nests, generally choosing a tree overgrown with ivy, or a whitethorn bush. The nest is the most beautiful structure of all our feathered race. Not one piece of material is found poking out of its place to make the nest look untidy. The nest is composed of moss and lichens, and is lined with grass, feathers and hair. The eggs are usually five in number, and of a reddish colour, with darker spots.

Food for Fresh-caught Birds.

Any time before Xmas is the best time to buy a Chaffinch, as after this date the birds seem to pine away and die, if caged. The best food for a fresh-caught bird is soaked seed and insect life. This bird is inclined to be insectivorous, and will not thrive unless a certain amount is given to it. As for the soaked seed, procure a basin, and into it put some rape, canary, teazel and a little hemp seed; cover with water, and allow it to stand for twenty-four hours. Feed him on this with a few flies or ants' eggs, until he steadies down a bit; then change his diet to the following: Canary seed, 2 parts, teazel, rape, linseed and charlock seeds 1 part each. Give him a teaspoonful of sunflower seeds daily, and a few flies or mealworm cut up; aphides and green flies, too, are greatly relished by this bird, and help much to keep him in health and plumage. Green food, such as watercress, groundsel or a handful of fresh grass should be given daily, and he will soon be found to pick amongst it for insects. In winter a little sweet apple should be given. With plenty of sand on the cage floor, in addition to the above, he will not take much harm. Give a bath on bright days, as a clean body is as necessary as clean food.

The cage should be about 14 inches long by 12 inches high, and 10 inches from back to front. This will allow your bird a fair amount of exercise; it is, in fact, a fair size for any Finch. If he is kept in an aviary with birds of his kind, look out for squalls. In the spring he is the most quarrelsome bird in the aviary. Should he show fight, remove him instantly, as if left in he will surely murder any other occupant with whom he may fall out.

A PEEP INTO A SOUTH COUNTRY BIRD-ROOM.

No. 17.—My Poë Birds.

Every conquest, every step forward in knowledge, is the outcome of courage, of hardness towards one's-self—or others. In the case of birds it is sometimes the latter, especially if you are poor. I find that bird lovers have very little conscience when it is a question of getting something rare but at the same time very expensive. It is not everybody that has my powers of restraint; and even I sometimes fail! I did in the story which I am about to unfold.

Many years ago, more than I care to recollect, I paid a visit to my old friend the late Joseph Abrahams at St. George's-in-the-East. In those days it was a rare treat to visit his shop; there was not only the pleasure of a chat with an old friend, through whose hands nearly every rare bird had passed at some time or the other; but there was always the chance that at the time of your visit you would find something you wanted, even though it was something you could not afford. On the day I made my call, the "Fortunate Fates" must have smiled on me; for in one of the nice roomy cages that lined the wall of the shop I saw five birds with which I fell in love incontinently.

Mr. Abrahams' cages were something like; I should say they measured somewhere about 3ft. by 2ft.; and a big bird could really take exercise and keep clean. Every morning the cages were cleaned out and freshly sanded, and it was really a pleasure to have a look round. There was none of that horrid, musky rank odour that one too often finds on entering a bird emporium. But then there was only one Joseph Abrahams, and there never will be another.

Not Ashamed.

I do not know everything, and I am not ashamed of confessing my ignorance. In the present case I had no conception what the birds were; and I asked Mr. Abrahams to tell me. He said they were Australian Poë birds. The word is pronounced in two syllables—"Poey." The birds are also known as Parson Birds from a peculiarity of their plumage. On the chest they have a miniature bunch of fairy-like Ostrich plumes, which to a very strong and vivid imagination might be taken to resemble the white linen bands which a full-dress Doctor of Divinity wears with his official robes. Mind you, it requires a very vivid imagination to do it; but that is the origin of the name.

To say that I was "fair struckeu," as we say up here, is far below the fact. I fell head-over-ears in love with those birds. They had such quaint and fascinating ways; and they were so beautifully tame and friendly that we might have known each other all our lives.

Prepared to Sell His Coat.

I made up my mind that they should be mine, even if I had to sell my coat to get them. With fear and trembling I asked Mr. Abrahams if they were very expensive; and he replied in quite a matter of fact tone, "not very. I want £6 for the pair." Discretion is no part of my equipment; boldness is. I therefore calmly offered him £5 10s.; and to my amazement, he accepted. Of course, we were old friends, and I was a regular customer, so perhaps that made a difference, and Mr. Abrahams was peculiar in this, that he would any day prefer to sell a bird to a person who knew how to treat it than to one who did not. At the time Mr. Abrahams had no less than five Poës in his shop, so that I was able to make a selection; and with his help I picked out what we both considered a true pair. He kindly warned me that I was taking a certain risk; as if they proved to be two cocks, I should undoubtedly lose one if I kept them together, as they were terribly pugnacious. In the present case "the Fortunate Gods" favoured me, and I found later on that I had a true pair. I was very thankful for this, as I have skirted too close to the rocks of death in former experiences to enjoy the sensation.

A Brief Description.

I may here pause to give a brief description of my friends, as I do not suppose that my readers will ever again have my luck. It is 30 years since I saw a live Poë Bird; and though I read the dealer's list carefully, I have not seen that any have been imported. If they have been, they have been sold privately to some rich aviculturist. I fancy, however, that none have come over, or we should have heard about them in some way. Very few people can refrain from telling of their good fortune.

Sad to tell, I am writing my description partly from memory and partly from two poor Poë birds "set up." This is the euphemistical way in which bird stuffers speak of their "creations." Still, in this case I must allow that for stuffed specimens the Poës are not really unlifelike.

In size Poës are something between a big Blackbird and a small Jackdaw. They are beautifully slim and elegant, and perhaps the word "natty" describes them better than anything else. They have very fine heads, with a slightly curving dark beak, and dark legs and feet. In plumage they are something like our English Starling without the spots; a beautiful iridescent green with curious grey hair-like stripes disposed over it, once seen never forgotten, but almost impossible to describe in writing. The distinguishing feature of the birds, however, is a wonderful fairy-like bunch of beautifully curled little Ostrich plumes on the chest, and a similar patch on each shoulder.

Distinguishing the Sex.

In the cock the plumes are larger and whiter than in the hen, and this, along with the finer head of the latter, is the way of distinguishing the sexes. Add to this, that if you are in doubt, put them together, but stop in the room; you will see the beginning of such a battle as will fairly make your heart shiver, and unless you are very quick and active you will soon only have the conqueror on your hands and a beautiful corpse. I utter this solemn warning, as I went a good deal into this kind of thing at one time—I mean putting two birds together and then forgetting all about it, as Mr. Brooke used to say in "Middlemarch"; but I found, as he did, that it carried me too far—over the hedge, in fact.

As I knew nothing about Poës I had the sense to ask Mr. Abrahams how they should be fed. "You cannot feed them too plainly," he said; "but if you will follow out my rule, I can guarantee that they will keep in perfect condition." "I feed them," he said, "on a mixture of mashed potato and Swiss milk, with an occasional mealworm."

My readers may smile; but I can assure them that if they ever get Poë birds and want to keep them in health, they must adhere to my ruling. It is just the same with Australian Bower birds. Who would think that such great strong birds would thrive on a diet of mashed potatoes? And yet it is a fact, and I have so kept them for years. In the case of both the Poë and the Bower birds, I always put the ordinary soft mixture in the aviary, with a jar of the best honey, to which they could always betake themselves, but the humble potato was the main food supply; strange to say they never seem to tire of it. Poë birds, therefore, are not expensive to keep.

Swiss Milk Advocated.

There was some years ago a great discussion as to the feeding of Poë birds, and many advocated Swiss milk. They say the proof of the pudding is in the eating. In this case the food evidently did not suit the Poës, as they incontinently died off, whereas when the milk was given mixed with mashed potatoes, they lived and throve. I daresay I shall be taken to task for my old-fashioned ideas. When I try, as I have once or twice tried, to criticise some current conceptions of bird life, the Professor, with a letter that resembles that of Miss Squeers to Nicholas Nickleby, says that "a writer who presumes to discuss such questions might be better acquainted with the modern developments of Avian science." I am content to leave my experience as proof. Feed Poës as I tell you, and they will enjoy life and live long in the land. Experiment with them and you will be very sorry—when it is too late. I realise, as I grow older, how little I know of bird life; so that, like the hero of Newman's hymn,

"I do not ask to see
The distant scene, one step enough for me."

But when I have painfully discovered that step, I like to tell those who will come after where to plant their feet.

The time of my visit to Mr. A. was July, red-hot, sultry weather, so I thought there could be no harm in giving my friends their liberty. I never saw two birds so enjoy liberty. They were here, there and everywhere, hunting, exploring, discovering; but, alas! what havoc they made among the other inmates. Wherever they went there was panic, a sort of feeling "the Campbells are coming," and a general stampede into every likely sort of shelter, until the tyranny was overpast. I felt that Poës were not made for society; so I caught them up and transferred them to a compartment of their own, when I hoped they might present me with their counterparts. I fancy Poës must come from a temperate part of Australia, as very great heat does not suit them, and during the dry, sultry weather, they looked a little uncomfortable. Gouldian Finches, which come from Australia, are just the same; they can't stand excessive heat.

The Poës generally agreed admirably, but there were occasional differences of opinion; and the gentleman had usually to give in. Abroad he would swagger and bluster and bully—Nemo me impune lacessit. At home his watchword was different—blessed are the meek.

Roller Canary Breeding in Cold Caledonia.

AN INTERVIEW WITH MR. J. THOMPSON, OF STEVENSTON, N.B.

By A. FORREST (Glasgow).

Readers will no doubt remember your artist, Mr. Aitken, visiting some of the principal breeders n Scotland and giving an account of their doings, etc., in Cage Birds. He dealt with a famous breeder of Roller Canaries, and aroused my interest, as I was not then aware that we had such North of the Tweed. I afterwards made an attempt to ascertain if there were many breeders of the Roller Canary in Scotland, but unfortunately received no replies to my letter. Well, I resolved to pay a visit "on my own" to Stevenston, where the breeder referred to resides. I had unfortunately forgotten his name, but on arriving at the station I hit upon the plan of asking the first railway official I met if he knew where the famous breeder of Roller Canaries resided. It succeeded, for he rplied, "That's Jock Thamson. He stops at Noble's Villas, just aboot a mile oot o' the toon; ony body'll tell ye."

On reaching the villas I kept to the garden side of them, as I anticipated I might hear the song of the birds. I guessed correctly, for as I approached I heard the beautiful trills of a number of birds in a house built in a garden. After listening spell-bound for a short time, I proceeded to the house for the purpose of explaining my visit.

The good wife kindly invited me in, and Mr. Thomson, who was just at dinner when I arrived, gave me a hearty Scotch welcome. I explained that I had come from Glasgow on holiday, and would like to glean particulars of his methods of feeding, breeding, etc. He replied that he would be only too pleased to let readers of Cage Birds have this information.

Mr. Thompson explained first of all that he had three separate wooden houses built in the garden. The largest was 9 feet by 9 feet and was used exclusively as a flight. The other two were also about 9 feet square, and were used for breeding purposes only. A room in the dwelling house, fitted with six rows of ten cages, making sixty cages in all, is where he trains the young birds, under two schoolmasters. Although Mr. Thompson has a bird organ, he puts little faith in it, as he is of the opinion that a good schoolmaster is much the best.

We proceeded to the garden, and there I witnessed a sight which I will not forget in a hurry. In the large flight, with a tree in the centre, Mr. Thompson said there were 80 birds. It was a treat to see them all swoop down when a handful of mixed seed was thrown into the bottom of the flight. Mr. Thompson explained that the hens were kept in this flight all winter, and that no matter how cold the wind blew off the Ayrshire coast, the birds stood it splendidly. From their appearance they looked in the pink of condition. Of course, he had doors on the flight, which were closed during the night time.

As to his methods of breeding, Mr. Thompson explained them very fully. He runs one cock with one hen, as he considers this to give the best results, and to ensure a larger percentage of cocks amongst the young. The cages are all made by himself in his spare time, and are of the usual pattern, with the sliding partition in the centre, for separating the cock from the hen. As soon as the young birds are five or six weeks old they are put into the large flight and kept there until he selects the cocks to be caged by themselves and placed under the schoolmasters.

During the breeding season Mr. Thompson explained that he fed his birds mainly on hard-boiled egg and Osborne biscuits, though he is a great believer in milk and bread sop, and rears quite a number of his birds on this. He mentioned that there were two ways of making it, and that a number of his customers had written him saying that the birds would not eat the bread and milk. The reason was that they boiled both together, whereas the milk should be boiled by itself, and plenty of it poured over the stale bread so as to soak thoroughly into it. I must confess that I had had the same experience myself, and was grateful for the information.

Mr. Thompson is also a great believer in chickweed. The garden was nearly covered with that plant! Dandelion he considers too coarse for the young ones. The birds are fed on equal parts of the best summer rape and canary seeds, with an occasional teaspoonful of mixed seed, consisting of linseed, inga, maw, and gold of pleasure.

The breeding stock consisted of 10 cocks and 14 hens, and from these he reared a total of 137 young birds, which is, I consider, excellent for a season's breeding which finished early in July. As regards the disposing of his birds, Mr. Thompson stated that he did so through Cage Birds, and always found the demand for Rollers was greater than the supply. Some of his birds have found their way to Canada!

Mr. Thompson's avsaries, by the way, were all built by himself, and I question if there are many amateur breeders with everything more up-to-date. As to his success, Mr. Thompson attributes it to three things, viz., fresh air, cleanliness, and careful personal attention.

The question of forming a Roller club in Scotland was discussed, and Mr. Thompson expressed himself warmly on the subject, saying he would be delighted if one could be founded.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

A First Venture.

This newly-formed society held their first annual fixture on Dec. 2nd. As this was the first exhibition of its kind held in this thickly-populated district, it was thought it would prove a great attraction, but unfortunately the afternoon turned out wet, rain falling almost continually; but, despite this, the show was attended by a fairly good number of visitors and fanciers. The hall in which the show was held is about the best one could get for a cage bird show, being well lighted and free from draughts. The entries numbered about 450, which was considered good. The quality of the exhibits was of a high order, and some well-known winners at recent shows again came to the front. Nor. were a choice lot, and were ably handled by Mr. A. Sloan (Glasgow). Borders, although not so numerous as we would have liked to see, were well up to the average quality, and it took Mr. P. McKenzie (Kelso) the best part of three hours to judge them, and he seemed happy in his selections. Scotch fancies were ably handled by that veteran Mr. J. King (Deantown). British and Mules were a great attraction, and gave Mr. R. Bald (Bathgate) two or three hours' hard work. The management was in the hands of a few well-known fanciers, and nothing but the highest praise can be given them for the way in which they carried out their duties. The president, although not able to be in attendance in the early part of the day, soon put himself into working harness when he did arrive. Mr. James Mackie makes an ideal secretary, being courteous and obliging to all, and the society are to be congratulated upon having such a capable fancier at the head of affairs. The other members of committee, who all gave a helping hand were: Vice-president Mr. A. W. Watson, and Messrs. W. Thomson, R. Bankin, R. Craig, H. Brash, G. Brown, and W. Dickson.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Some Beautiful Greens.

Annual show, held Nov. 25th, Oldham St. Schools. An innovation this year was the giving of eight open classes. These were not the success anticipated; very few exhibitors outside the society's own members patronised them. Norwich classes were cancelled. The Yorks. and Yorks. Green classes brought out some real toppers, although most of the exhibitors had to send their best Greens to the L.C.B.A. in following up the G.C.A. patronage. In the members' section a regular battle took place for the society's cups and a host of other specials. Money specials were dropped this year, and a lot of things purchased instead. Nearly every exhibitor had his wife, and in some cases his family as well to help carry home the specials. Mrs. Eccleston, the secretary, and Mr. Isaac, the chairman, were indefatigable workers, and the committee, headed by the assistant secretary, Mr. Lloyd, gave every assistance. Nearly 400 exhibits gave Messrs. Cowgill and Bancroft, the judges, plenty to do, and generally speaking, they did the work very well, all birds being judged and the cards up by two o'c.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Annual members' show held December 2. The Foresters' Hall, where the exhibition was held, is light, spacious, and absolutely free from draughts, a capital rendezvous for such an event. Entries came up well, upwards of 270 specimens being on view. Quality, too, was excellent. Yorks. were the chief feature, closely followed by the Nor. The chairman is Mr. T. Dawn, a popular and liberal supporter; vice-chairman, Mr. J. A. T. Woodall, and treasurer Mr. J. W. Drabble, who have the society's interests at heart. The secretaries, Messrs. T. Bishop and R. Colton, are a brace of genuine and courteous officials. A special attraction was a table at one end of the room, graced with many valuable cups, five in all, beautifully engraved; cruets, etc.; also bottles of the best whiskey (these, we presume, are for the birds that are down in condition). Winners of cups: Messrs. Wilkinson and Elliott (Yorks.), J. G. Cowley (Nor.), G. Moore (Crests), P. Walsh (Brit.), T. Bishop (For.); sp. for best in show, Mr. A. Somerfield (yell. Greenie-Can., winner of 35 lots in open competition). Other special winners: Messrs. Wilkinson and Elliott, T. Ridal, Furniss, Tow, Woodall, Fletcher, Colton and Dawn, J. W. Drabble, Oates, Porter, Senior, Marshall, Godfrey, and Memmott. There was a goodly number of visitors present, amongst whom we noticed Mr. A. Hobson (sec. of the Sheffield C.B.S.), J. Beswick and Brother (Stockport), H. Wilkinson (Stocksbridge), and J. C. Barnes, the well-known local enthusiast. Prize money was paid out same day to all prize winners present. This progressive society has held a trio of successful exhibitions during the year, and we trust their further efforts will meet with success. Mr. J. H. Roe judged.

WALLASEY.

Wallasey and Dis. C.B.S. annual show held in the Fairhaven Institute, Seaview Road, Liscard, on Nov. 11, when some 130 exhibits turned up. Amongst these were some very high-class birds. Yorks. and Yorks. Greens were very fine indeed, and some of the very best were staged; Border Greens, too, were very nice for type and quality. Norwich were conspicuous by their absence, and we would advise fanciers in this and, indeed, all the Liverpool Dis. and Cheshire side of the Mersey, to give some attention to keeping Norwich. There is more room to win more prizes if you only take Norwich up more. The British and foreign birds were nice, but hardly so numerous as in former years. A good lot of special prizes were provided, in addition to the ordinary prizes, which made the show well worth exhibiting at. Mr. W. Young's winning buff Yorks. Green was voted a real champion, and quite the best bird in the show. Mr. Mallinson did duty as secretary, and had everything in applie-pie order. All who know Mr. Mallinson will extend their heartfelt sympathy towards him, when they hear that he is in the midst of a great domestic trouble, his wife suffering from a very severe and serious illness. We hope she will speedily recover, and so brighten once again the days of our very wholehearted fancier, Mr. Mallinson. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and his awards appeared to meet with general approval.

The Critique.

YORKS., CL., ETC., YELL. (7): 1, Young, grand style, clean through, a big one, too, well posted, rare carriage, neat head, wings, and tail, fine position; 2, Marlor, smaller, nice upstanding bird, good position, fine feather; 3, Edwards, larger, hardly so tight, as others when we were taking notes, good bird when tight in feather; vhc, hc, Alston; c, Cooper. BUFF (7): 1, 2, Alston, pair of grand quality, former best drawn out, both well up, good style and condition; 3, Benson, small and slim, A1 style, type, and position; vhc, Young; hc, Cooper; c, Edwards. Members' show held at the Geisha Assembly Rooms on Nov. 25th. Mr. J. A. Tyler (Leicester) judged, and said he thought the quality of birds better than last year. The members are to be congratulated on this show, for although the entries were not the largest in number they have had, the public patronised the event more, and a profit was made. Several young members were in the "money," and Mr. T. Martin picked up the Novice special with his Norwich yellow, and Mr. B. Pain got the British special with his Yellowhammer. Mr. J. W. Veasey, Sec. pro tem, made the necessary arrangements. At present Mr. Veasey stands first for members' special and Mr. H. Leng is runner up.

ST. AUSTELL.

Annual exhibition of the St. Austell and Dis. F.A. held spacious Market House, Nov. 2nd. The entries were confined to members and Cornwall. There was a considerable falling off in numbers compared with the two previous years, probably accounted for by no specials. The total number of entries was just over 100. The staging was very well arranged and the exhibits could all be seen easily. The Norwich and Yorkshires were the strongest classes, and the feature of the show; the classes contained some good specimens of the breeds. The British bird classes, although not large, were exceptionally good, especially the large British, and the Hawfinch shown by Messrs. Stephens and Gaved was in faultless condition. Although the Hawfinch was an exceptionally good one, it was considered by many that in this class the Cornish Chough, which is without doubt one of the best ever shown in the West of England, should have had premier honours. The President (Dr. Stephens) and the general secretary (Mr. F. Rowe), who was most courteous and obliging, were backed up by an excellent committee of well-known fanciers in Messrs. T. Trevena, J. Davies, F. R. O. Mewton, W. G. Nile, J. Thomas, and A. R. Davies. Mr. R. B. Tope (Plymouth) judged.

WALTHAMSTOW F.A.

After having a very hard struggle in the sea of adversity for several years past this good old society seems to be getting on its legs again, and the show held at Trinity Schoolroom on Nov. 30th gave evidence of a new state of things. The entry was an improvement on last year, and some very nice birds were shown. Mr. Williams won the Canary Challenge Cup with a very nice Unflighted Yellow Yorkshire. Mr. Cooper, the new secretary should feel pleased that the members have responded to his call, as it is fitting they should, for he has put a lot of hard work into the society since he took over the reins of office. He was well supported by good stewards on this occasion, and everything passed off well. Mr. C. A. House judged.

WREXHAM (Central) C.B.S

A very successful show was held Dec. 2nd in the Central Hall, this being an excellent place for the purpose, with plenty of room and light. The show was under the management of that good old fancier, Mr. F. Hampson (hon sec.), assisted by a strong committee of fanciers, all anxious to make it a success. Norwich and Yorks. were well represented, but by far the best section was the latter. The hen class obtained 17 entries, and so good were they that several good typical birds had to be left cardless. Mules and British turned up well. Mr. Hampson took special for best bird with a grand typical Variegated Yellow Yorks. cock. In the Roller singing contest Mr. Pemberton's birds took all the spoils. The show proved a financial success. All specials and prize money were paid out before the close of show, and everything went off well. More new members were enrolled. Judge, Mr. T. Jones (Chester).

WOMBWELL AND DIST. B.F.A.

Members' second annual show held Dec. 2nd in the Wesleyan Reform Schoolroom, Hoyland St., nine members staging 110 birds, chiefly Canaries. This is an increase of 24 exhibits over our last show. Mr. Brotherton (Rotherham) judged, and his awards were well received. Mr. M. E. Hinchcliffe won both cups for most points, and Mr. C. Humphreys won special for 2nd most points. In conjunction with the show a scholars' drawing competition was held, confined to local schools, and 150 drawings were displayed—a credit to both the scholars and their teachers. Messrs. Dean and Hinchcliffe judged the drawings, and they did remarkably well. The drawings of Albert Senior, age 10, Richard Bishop, age 12, and Helena Spooner, age 12, are worthy of note, owing to the clearness of colour. There were also many drawings worthy of a prize, but the limited number of prizes did not allow us to give more than eight. Mr. Robinson, J.P., C.C., opened the show, and made a very encouraging speech.

Light Mules:
IS CANARY OR FINCH RESPONSIBLE?

Useful "Tips" from a Breeder of 25 years' experience.

By J. B. MOORE (Whitehaven).

I have always fancied Mules, or Hybrids. The first bird I ever exhibited was a Dark Yellow Goldie-Canary mule of my own breeding. I showed him in the cage he lived in at home, one 20in long and almost as high, and well whitewashed out inside. Though that is now over 25 years ago, I still remember the satisfied feeling I had when the late Mr. G. Barnesby, of Derby, who judged the Canary section of the show, awarded him hc. After that, both this bird and myself improved in our exhibition career, and during the four seasons I showed him afterwards he succeeded in winning many prizes.

A "Right Sort of Finch."

After reading much of what has been said concerning Mule and Hybrid breeding, one side of the subject appears to me to be very much neglected, or else it is not considered of sufficient importance, and that is the influence of the sire, especially in light Mule breeding. I know I tread on delicate ground, in departing from the better known method, viz., breeding with sib-bred Canary hens, but from what I know personally, I think there is something in the plan I recommend, especially if you get the right sort of Finch, that is, one with a certain amount of light blood or "albinism" in him. Any fancier who has had much to do with British birds, knows that every now and again you come across one, say a Linnet that has several white feathers on it —maybe lightly ticked on top of head, or with light feathers in wings or tail.

I know of one at present, a fine house-moulted bird, that has two outside flight feathers in one wing pure white. I remember some lightly marked Linnet Mules being bred one season, by an old breeder, sired by one particular Linnet. Unfortunately for the owner, while cleaning out the cage one day the Linnet escaped, and though other Linnets were put up with the hen Canary, and young ones bred and reared, not another light one could he get, thus proving in that case that the Linnet was the source from which the light feathering came. Other breeders of my acquaintance swear by the Finch. One, a very successful present-day breeder of light Mules, says: "Give me the right Finch, and you can keep your sib-bred Canaries."

Correct Condition Essential.

Very little that is original can be said regarding the method of pairing and of feeding to enable you to get your birds into breeding condition. Linnets can be got into tip-top order much sooner than Goldies, as a rule, though I have no doubt there are exceptions. I have known Linnet Mules in January. The secret appears to be to feed so as to have your Finches well forward, or, as described by Linnet contest-singers, with some "pride" on them. I recommend anyone going in for Mule breeding to get the birds at the back end of the year. It enables you to feed as you think correct, and so gradually get them accustomed to one another, and also into proper order by the latter end of April, which, if the season is in any way an open one, is early enough for pairing up in earnest. In addition to the regular Finch seed mixtures, I have found that one of the finest conditioners, as a seed, is dandelion seed, or as we call them, liver white-tops, given either freshly gathered or dry. In the latter case, you require to gather them the season before, and dry them, then store by in a tin for future use. To ensure a nice supply, you require to gather a large number of tops, I can assure you. To those who are not favourably situated for gathering them, the advt. columns of our paper, CAGE BIRDS, always offer an opportunity of getting what is required.

"Tips" on Feeding and Pairing.

I also find that the Finches are very fond of lettuce seed. A very little of this, say twice a week, helps them wonderfully. Some writers advise, or prefer, German rape seed for Linnets, but all Linnet men of my acquaintance swear by the black or English rape, in addition to the canary and linseed. Goldies care nothing for rape seed, either English or German. Give them canary, hemp and teazle, and a few cracked sunflower seeds every two or three days, and, as an extra, a little thistle seed occasionally—not too much or often, or they will refuse their regular feed, and thereby go off altogether. Linnets also like a few cracked sunflower seeds. In addition to conditioning them, it helps wonderfully to steady them. Greenfinches would live entirely on sunflower, and providing you keep them in a good roomy cage, it will do them no harm.

In choosing your Canary hens for breeding, either for light or dark Mules, don't be persuaded into the idea that anything will do, so long as it is big enough, but try to get the shapeliest finest-feathered yellow hens of the Norwich type you can find for either love or money, and young birds (of the previous year) for choice. Get them into the best possible health and condition. Give them a good roomy cage, a double-breeder for choice. It will simplify your work, as thereby you can run the Finch into the empty end while the hen is hatching. Some Finches are very troublesome, and not to be trusted when eggs are about Others, again, I have had that are all right, and as useful in a breeding cage as a good feeding cock Canary.

Give your pairs as good a position in your room as you possibly can, one where they can get the early sun, and don't disturb them too much. I have taken eggs out as laid and also left them in, and had good results either way. If possible at all get to know your birds' disposition or temper, and you can work accordingly. When the young ones arrive let the mother have, in addition to the seeds, freshly gathered leaves of the dandelion, chick weed, shepherds purse, etc., also egg food freshly made, three times a day. Mine have their first feed about 5.30 a.m., and generally do well, but as I have to be up early, this arrangement suits us both.

Very few fresh Mules turn up on the show bench. Why it should be so I don't know, as this is a most interesting pursuit. There is no royal road to success, and you never know what is going to turn up.

One Guinea (Cash) for the Reader who Successfully Solves It.

The six drawings seen above are pictorial representations of the names of six well-known birds, Canaries, British, and Foreign. We offer a cash prize of One Guinea to the reader who correctly fills in the names of these birds in the spaces provided underneath the pictures. All competitors must observe the following conditions or their efforts will be disqualified.

THE RULES TO BE OBSERVED.

(1) The names of the birds must be clearly written in the spaces provided.

(2) Only one name must appear in each space.

(3) Competitors can send in two or more attempts, but each attempt must be made on a separate form cut from a copy of CAGE BIRDS.

(4) The name and address of the sender must in all cases be given in full.

(5) In case of two or more competitors guessing the six birds correctly, their names will be written on slips of paper, the latter placed in a hat, and one slip drawn out by some independent person, and the name appearing on the slip so selected shall be the name of the winner of the guinea prize.

(6) All solutions must reach us on or before Friday, December 29th next, or they will be too late to compete.

(7) Entries are accepted only on the understanding that the Editor's decision shall be final.

NOTE.—In the unlooked for event of no competitor correctly guessing the six birds, the prize will go to the competitor whose form gives the greatest number correct (subject to rule 5 in case of tie or ties).

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state when stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution, one star the runners-up.

The Artful Rook.

There was once a Rook which lived near a railway station. He flew down, having seen a biscuit on the line, and two porters were near. He hid the biscuit under a stone until they had got out of sight; then he flew down, moved the stone away, and got his food; and he flew off home with it to his little ones and fed them with the biscuit.—Sent by Nora Sleep, aged 13, 10, Oakfield Terrace, Plymouth.

*Not Easily Frightened.

A short time ago I was sent to a friend of my father's, and I saw a shabby old dead Rook. On asking why he had it, he told me it was hung in a field to scare birds away. When it decayed a pair of Wrens had built their nests in the old Rook's crop, and laid their eggs and brought up their young ones till they were able to fly. Then he took the old carcase and the nest home to keep as a curio.—Gladys Parsonson (aged 12), 21, North Hill, Colchester.

The Stolen Starling.

An old huntsman named Maurice had a trained Starling which, if its master said: "Starling, where are you?" would answer: "Here I am." This bird was a delight to a boy living near. One day when he came to see it the old huntsman was not in the room. The boy caught it, put it in his pocket, and was moving towards the door when in came Maurice, who, thinking it would please the child, called as usual: "Starling, where are you?" and the Starling, from its hiding place in the boy's pocket, cried with all its might: "Here I am!" (Taken from "Chatterbox.")—Sent by Edith Gregory (aged 12), 7, Argyle Terrace, Westoe, South Shields.

*A Canary and a Dog.

A lady had a pet Canary which one day escaped from the house and was lost. Several days passed, and she never expected to see it again. To her surprise, her dog walked into the house with the Canary in his mouth. He put the bird into his mistress's hands without harming a single feather. (Taken from "My True Story-book of Animals.")—Sent by A. Clements (aged 12), 259, Church Road, Leyton.

Catching Bramblefinches, Hawfinches, etc.

Sir,—Could any of your numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS kindly inform me how to catch Bramblefinches, Hawfinches, etc. I should be much obliged for any information given.

SUNBEAM.

A Twenty Years' Trial of Cock Bullfinch and Cock Chaffinch.

Sir,—As an "old hand" at the most interesting and fascinating hobby of Hybrid breeding, I was extremely glad to see that a cross has again been got from the hen Chaffinch, and by the same able hand that produced the Bramble-Chaffinch. I expect this Green-Chaffinch has been bred in an aviary out of doors, where, I think, we shall yet see both the cock Chaffinch and cock Bullfinch become the male parents of Hybrids. I have never as yet had the chance of having a large outdoor aviary to try these two male birds, but I have had over twenty years' hard trying in large cages indoors, but have never been able to get fertile eggs.

HYBRID.

Do Large Eggs Produce the Largest Birds?

Sir,—Looking through some old notes of breeding experiences, I found one concerning variations of the size of eggs. I then had up two pairs of Norwich. One pair were small in size, and the other pair were large birds, the hen being very large. I quite expected I should get from this hen some large eggs, but quite the opposite was the result. From the other pair, the hen which was small laid a very large egg indeed—especially so from so small a bird; in fact, she was like a Border of the present day. I watched the results of the young from these eggs to see if a large egg made any difference in the size of the young one. I found out from experience that the larger egg made no difference, the smaller egg producing young quite as large. This took place some twenty years ago. Nearer to the present day, I also recorded a case of Lizards; two pairs I had up. One of these pairs had small eggs, and the other pair large ones. The young from them came about normal, nothing to choose between them in size. So I think there is nothing in it as regards the young being larger from the larger egg. Perhaps some your readers and noted breeders may have noticed a difference in this large and small egg question.

OLD BREEDER.

The Chortle of an Anti-colourfoodite.

Sir,—Please allow me through your valuable paper to ask Mr. Johnson if he will kindly give his method of colour-feeding, as I can assure him there are many working men who would only be too pleased to know how to reduce the cost of colour-feeding to such a low price.

W. RATCLIFF.

Sir,—The "chortle" of Mr. S. Stephens, containing, as it does, the slur at Canary fanciers, is evidence that he is a British bird man. No doubt he believes in feeding his birds on their natural food, and therefore uses Spanish canary, German rape, Dutch hemp, etc.; one might go on until practically the whole of the seed list was exhausted. Privet and black berries are good in the autumn for improving the colour—of the cage? Natural foods, forsooth! In the winter, too, he uses meal worms, apples, watercress, French lettuce, etc., all of which are foreign to his British birds. Yet he objects to the fruit capsicum being used. Prejudice! Mind you, no one says he must use it, and there is no secret how to use it, should he want to do so. He says it is necessary to "produce a colour that is entirely unnatural." Not at all. It is a question of fancy, and some day he will be able to appreciate a "well fed bird." Let me advise him to see his "mad" friend and try some of the "chemical" on his Greenfinches. If not too proud to accept a tip from a Canary fancier, I can put him on a good thing to improve the blaze of his Goldfinches. Let him go to a prominent exhibitor, one who produces those "balls of fire," and ask him as a favour to let him have —(come up closer, Mr. Stephens, I want to whisper it!)—some red-mite.

ANOTHER MADMAN.

Sir,—I do not see the use of tearing each other to pieces in our letters. Surely if the non-fed bird is so dear to our hearts, we have the remedy in our own hands? Why not form a Natural-colour Society (Norwich and Yorkshires combined)? Then we might do something to get show secretaries or committees to give us more classes. Of course, we cannot say that colour feeding is the cause of non-sitting and non-feeding birds. Where do the Crests come in? Let anybody try to breed with good-class Crested stock without feeders and he will find himself very little "forrarder" at the end of the season. We all know there are good and bad feeders in all varieties. We must look to ourselves for the cause of some of their shortcomings. Some fanciers can get the most stubborn hens to feed, while others say: by a little skilful attention they could have had a most successful breeding season. It would be very interesting if some fanciers would let us know how many young they could rear by colour-feeding in the nest. Some will say there is no need to, yet the tail and flights would look better. But would fanciers rear enough? Would the colour-food not be too strong for their little "hearts," let alone their livers. The novice goes to a show. "Oh! ain't they nice My birds ain't like that; I shall have to go to So-and-So's." Well, he goes. "I say, Mr. ——, how much for that one and this one?" "Oh, that one is ten shillings; this one is colour-fed, so is fifteen shillings." Sold again, and got the money! Of course, you must colour-feed. Don't you see there is money in it?

J. SPARKES.

Should Birds be "Novices" as Well as Exhibitors?

Sir,—A word on that vexed question, the novice. I would like there to be a proper understanding between all exhibitors and show committees. In my opinion a novice should not mean exhibitors alone, but the exhibits also, and the latter should only be allowed to compete as unflighted birds, and all classes be limited to say £3. Then the novice would be able to buy himself a very good stock bird that would be young and healthy. I think it would be an advantage to all, and would certainly stop a lot of fraud that goes on with a lot of exhibitors. The £3 limit is a very good price for any novice exhibit, and the exhibitor who buys his birds for, say, £5 to £10 to win in novice classes would certainly give over showing, and make room for the more enterprising exhibitor. And if the exhibitor breeds the bird himself, and the bird was claimed, the money would come in very handy to pay his seed bills and expenses, especially if he were a working man fancier. The competition would be more equal. I would make the rule read :"A novice is one who has not won more than one first in champion or three firsts in novice classes. All birds to be unflighted, and the bird not to have won in open competion, and to be debarred from winning more than two firsts in novice classes. All classes to be limited to £3 or less, as the committee think fit."

NOVICE.

Can Exhibitors be Novices for Ever?

Sir,—I agree with your correspondent, "Sub Rosa." It seems to me that an exhibitor can be a novice for ever. What is the meaning of an open novice class? I happened to visit Sheffield Show on Saturday, and was surprised to see a certain exhibitor winning in the novice Yorkshire classes. The Sheffield rule reads: "A novice is one who has not won one first in open or three firsts in open novice classes." But I was more than surprised to hear on good authority that I could not successfully object to this particular exhibitor, as earlier in the afternoon a complaint was made to the secretary, who said his society's definition of the rule did not include £5 5s. limit classes. Why did they not state that in their schedule? Now I contend that a class open to the United Kingdom comes under the head of an open novice class, even though it is a £5 5s. limit. I should like to see a more able pen than mine take this up and have it cleared up. If your readers will notice the Sheffield report, they will see the four novice classes contained one hundred birds, an average of twenty-five per class, while in the open, seven classes only, ninety-nine birds were shown, an average of fourteen per class. I think your readers will agree that the competition is keen enough in the novice classes without having to compete with those who, in my opinion, are not eligible.

INTERESTED.

Canary Farming in the Open Air.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. A. Blaxall, re "Canary Farming in the Open Air," I wish to say that during the breeding season I find my birds do not go to nest before April—not so soon as they would in cages in the house, as I use no lamp, fire, or artificial heat whatever. In the summer I never close the door of the house where they sleep, only in winter at night. When I see my birds begin to nest I have some thick broom bushes put in the ground and a piece of tin or a sack put on the wire outside, just where the bush comes, to keep the rain off. When the little ones are in the nest I nail a few nest-boxes in cosy corners. I supply them with plenty of building material. The latter is the great secret of breeding in the open, for if you do not they rob the others that are sitting, and so destroy their eggs. About 9.30 a.m. I grate two eggs and four large biscuits, mix together, and put into a pudding plate. Then I give them a good supply of seed in another pudding plate, and put them both just inside the house, for fear it may rain. I give plenty of green food, which I throw upon the ground in the run or flight. I also give them four large saucers of water (round saucers, such as are used to put flower pots in), in which they bathe freely; they used to drink as I put the water in fresh each morning. I do not feed them any more that day. From the outside I can watch them build. Should Mr. A. Blaxall require any more information I shall be glad to give it.

A Hybrid Problem.

British Young from Foreign Parents.

Sir,—It certainly does seem absurd that a pair of birds for Hybrid breeding should be wrong-classed when, even at the same show, a Hybrid from the same pair may win a first in a class for Hybrids between two British birds. I well remember a few years back a friend of mine getting into conversation with Mr. J. Williams, the enthusiastic Hybrid breeder, who at that time owned so wonderful a Goldie-Bullie that was a credit to both owner and breeder. This was at Manchester Show about four years back, and the conversation drifted from general Hybrid topics to this particular bird's eligibility to compete in that class under the heading of "Hybrid from two British Birds." Of course, it was well known that the Hybrid was bred from Siberian parents on both sides, neither the owner nor the breeder making a secret of the fact; indeed, I think the breeder had made it known through the Fancy Press how it was bred. This friend of mine was at that time an enthusiastic Hybrid breeder himself, and I happen to know that had the bird been again exhibited at Manchester he would have laid down a protest against it, not with any prejudice, but merely as a test case, and partly for sport. Given a committee of sensible men, there could only have been one result; the protest must have been upheld, for to admit a bird into a class for Hybrid bred from British birds that was admittedly bred from Siberian parents is, as Teddy Payne would say, "absoballylute ignorasiousness." Anyhow, that was its last appearance at Manchester, or, I think, at any show, and I have not seen this grand bird since, worse luck! The whole matter provides food for thought for the N.B.B. and M.C., and they would be doing a duty to the Fancy generally were they to legislate on the question.

SUB ROSA.

The Mishap at Stoke-on-Trent Show.

Sir,—I have read carefully the letters of Messrs. J. P. Leeming and A. Wellings, and in reply desire to say that it was not my intention to cast any reflection on the truthfulness of either Mr. Wellings or Miss Bibby (to whom I apologise for addressing her as "Mr."). I also wish to say that it was a mistake on my part, and I regret if my letter has caused either Miss Bibby or Mr. Wellings any annoyance. In respect to that portion of Mr. Leeming's letter which says "unlike myself, he prefers to mind his own business," I can hardly agree with it, as it looks to me as if he is now minding Mr. Wellings's business, and I think our worthy friend is quite capable of attending to his own affairs without outside help. In conclusion, I cannot resist replying to Mr. A. Wellings's remark that he "hopes I have not fallen out of the trap." No, no, Mr. Wellings; I hasten to assure you that I have not fallen out of the trap, for the simple reason that I was most careful not to get into one when I had promised to go to Preston Show without fail. Otherwise I might have experienced a similar mishap, and thereby disappointed my friends by not turning up. That you are completely recovered from your injuries is the sincere wish of

JOHN ENGLAND.

Sir,—Five weeks have now passed, and we are still without an explanation from Mr. Wellings re his failure to keep his appointment to judge at the above show. True, we have learned that E. Bibby is a young lady, of which fact we were not aware, and I hasten to apologise for referring to her as a person. Knowing now that Miss Bibby is of the gentler sex, I will accept her statement without further proof that Mr. Wellings was thrown out of the trap, so that I hope Miss Bibby will we want an answer to the questions I put to Mr. Wellings in your issue of Dec. 2, and just to show that I am not quite "empty" yet, I would like to ask him what would have been our position if we had not been able to get the two local gentlemen to judge the birds for us? I do not think any show committee has ever been placed in such a position. Also, did Mr. Wellings really intend coming on the Friday, as per Miss Bibby's letter, had I not wired him not to come? Mr. Wellings's abilities as a judge are undoubted (except, perhaps, by Mr. Bayley), but if he intends to place his services at the disposal of show committees in the future, he cannot afford to lose the confidence of fanciers, and in my opinion it is undoubtedly to his own interests that he should clear himself of any suspicion of negligence.

J. PITCHFORD.

Hon. sec., Stoke-on-Trent Show.

Sir,—I think Mr. Wellings is very unfair to the exhibitors who entered their birds under him at Stoke Show. He promised to give an account of the mishap in your last issue, but it seems to me because Mr. Pitchford has not given him his full mind, he intends to wait till he gets all the evidence he can, so that he can frame his reply accordingly. Now Mr. Wellings should reply at once, and prove that it could not be helped, because there is an explanation due to all the exhibitors from him. We all know one judge differs from another, and there is no doubt the prizes would have been altered had Mr. Wellings judged the birds. When a man is choosing his birds to show, the first thing he generally does is to see who the judge is, and enter those birds which he thinks will suit that particular judge's fancy. It is very annoying to find that your birds have been judged by another judge, for had you known you would probably have sent other birds. Besides, there is the trouble of washing and preparing; therefore you are practically robbed of your entry fee. Mr. Wellings does not even let the committee know anything till it is too late to do justice to the exhibits, and, as we know, it was so very late in the day before the secretary could arrange with another judge that even the latter could not do justice to himself. I very much question if the exhibitors were so minded whether they could not claim their entry fees back, because they entered their birds under Mr. Wellings and not Mr. Bate or Mr. Tams. I also think that the Stoke committee could claim damages from Mr. Wellings to the extent of their loss. Mr. Wellings seems trying to look on this matter as if it is nothing to disappoint about a hundred exhibitors, and I, as an exhibitor, feel there is an explanation due to me, and others.

Nuthatches that Visit the House.

Sir,—I read about Nuthatches retiring to the woods now for food because they are such shy birds in CAGE BIRDS of Nov. 24, so I wonder if any of your readers would be interested to know that two birds of that kind come and feed from boxes put outside my window filled with monkey nuts and cake crumbs and hemp seed. They do not mind if you go quite close when they are feeding, and sometimes they come inside after the food, even if I am in the room. I think these are rather the exception, as they feed only a few yards from the High Street of this little town (Lymington), though the back of the house, where they come, is quite country-fied. I am now trying to get them to come to the front, but so far they have not done so, although Tits of all kinds come. All the other birds are terrified of them, even Sparrows, and they soon clear quite a crowd of Sparrows off with two or three pecks. They go away about the end of April, and come again towards the middle of October. They nested in a garden further up the street last year.

A New Cage Bird Society for Cambois and District.

Sir,—Fanciers in Cambois and district will be pleased to learn that a new cage bird society has been formed. It was decided to hold another meeting on Wednesday, Dec. 20, at 7.30, in the Cambois Institute. All fanciers are invited to this meeting.

Yorkshires at Doncaster Show.

Sir,—I see that one of your correspondents enquires as to the ownership of certain birds exhibited at Doncaster Show. The birds were mine. I may say that the only reason why the cages had parts of luggage labels tied on was that at the time of sending I had not received the cage labels from the show secretary. I wrote a note explaining the matter and put it in box with birds, and fully expected the officials would have taken off the luggage labels and put fresh ones on. I got the proper labels first post after sending birds.

A Cure for Colds and Asthma Wanted.

Sir,—I have been for a considerable time trying to find out the best cure for cases of severe colds and asthma. Almost weekly different prescriptions are given, and I do not doubt that in many instances complete restoration to health has resulted. Unfortunately, in one or two cases I have not been successful. I have a bird now which I have been trying to cure for a friend, which is panting and wheezing nearly all day long. Would it be asking some of our noted breeders too much to give their modus operandi, which I am sure would be appreciated by many who delight in seeing their birds in a perfect state of health?

C. K. EATON.

Foreign Birds at Plymouth Show.

Sir,—Seeing in CAGE BIRDS about the foreign birds at the recent L.C.B.A. Show, I have been wondering why, at the recent bird show at Plymouth, we had not the pleasure of seeing any such variety of foreign birds—only six: three African Greys, one Cockatoo, one Amazon, and one Parrakeet. A good show of Canaries and Mules, etc., may be very interesting, but one wants variety, and so many beautiful foreign birds are kept in various towns that surely some might be sent to Plymouth if good prizes were offered. Fond as I am of Canaries and keeping and rearing them (for my own pleasure, not for sale), I like variety, and so do others, I find, too. I am glad to see some people are against colour-feeding. I hope the ugly red birds will one day be a fancy of the past. Nothing is more lovely than the beautiful yellow and buff Canaries, not cayenne colour, a horrible colour that Nature never intended for Canaries. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, as it is such a good bird paper.

F. B.

[Our correspondent is seemingly unaware of the fact that the Plymouth Society offers 22s. per class in prize-money for an entry fee of 1s. 6d.—a ratio which for liberality is exceeded by none and equalled by few of our present-day shows.—Editor.]

What Causes Short Entries?

Sir,—Mr. A. J. Dazeley states that he made application to the secretaries of Royal Windsor and Derby shows for schedules. I never received an application from anyone of the name "Dazeley," but I notice your correspondent rather wonders if he omitted to stamp his application card. Perhaps he is a little forgetful, and I now conclude that the card I received on Nov. 11, 1911, must have come from him. Postmark, Godalming, 12.30 p.m., Nov. 10.—E. A. Stickland, 36, Alma Road, Windsor.—"Dear Sir,—Please forward me schedule of your show and oblige." Now, readers, answer this riddle for me: "Who is the writer and where does he live?" Neither name nor address is given, so what secretary can be blamed if he does not send the applicant a schedule? If the card did not come from Mr. Dazeley it may be some comfort to him to know that he is not the only one who makes mistakes when applying for show schedules.

E. A. STICKLAND.

Sir,—In reading the letters which appear from time to time with reference to show management, and especially those lately about short entries, I often wonder if the writers have ever had any practical experience of show management and what it costs to run a show. Anyone would think that secretaries and committees run them for their own good and pecuniary advantage, instead of it being the other way about, and in the end, after months of hard work, anxious thought, and much worry, having to put their hands in their pockets to make good a deficiency on the balance sheet. There are very few shows where the entry fees cover the cost of the prize-money paid out, even on the half principle, and if the suggestion of Mr. Morgan was carried out, viz., 1s. each entry, or four for 3s. (9d. each), the societies adopting that would never be heard of after the first year, unless it was in the bankruptcy court. I know it is very disappointing and annoying to exhibitors to only receive half prize-money, but they only have themselves to blame. At a certain well-known show last year an exhibitor made three entries, but the next day sent a postcard cancelling them, as he had noticed the rule of only half prize-money under a certain number of entries. I suppose the society, having once received the entries, need not have returned them, but this was courteously done. This year, in order to encourage this exhibitor and others like him, full prize-money was guaranteed in the section, with the result—a loss. One class contained two entries; fees 3s., prize-money paid 15s., net loss 12s.! Had the classes been decently filled it would have been an encouragement to the society to again guarantee full prize-money in that section, and probably in others. Personally I think the real causes of short entries are the excessive number of shows for one thing and also the poor classification given by many. I should say there are three to four times the number of shows held now to what there were ten years ago, and although the Fancy has grown enormously, there are not enough exhibitors in it to support all. Another thing is the clashing of dates, which, with so many fixtures, is practically unavoidable. I think if Messrs. Morgan and Dazeley could look over the balance sheets of some of our cage bird societies they would be surprised.

A. S. TREASURE.

A Scottish Grievance.

Sir,—A cause, in my opinion, is the unjust charge for model cards in Scotland. Many years ago a large substantial model (by Ritchie) was hung on the cage of the first four birds (while often model cards were given free to winners of specials), and only 1s. charge made for the first three models in each class, the fourth getting a model free. The present model cards were introduced to be "easier" on the exhibitor, at 6d. each; but now most of our shows charge 1s. each for them! Let me illustrate a sample of my wins this season: Three entries, 4s. 6d.; rail fare for birds to and from show, 2s.; total, 6s. 6d. Awards, second in a class of six entries, get 3rd prize money, 2s. 6d.; third in a well-filled class, prize money, 2s. 6d.; fourth in a well-filled class, a v.h.c. ticket. Total cash won, 5s.; deducted for two model cards, 2s.; balance to the exhibitor, 3s. That is, the committee claim 2s. from 5s. for two model cards that very few have any fancy for! This year it has cost me about 6s. per week for rail fare for my birds, which I certainly grudge, but it has cost me more for model cards, which serve little or no purpose, but are a very unnecessary and expensive item.

YELLOW GREEN.

Goldfinches and Plain Canary Seed.

Sir,—I remember seeing in your valued paper CAGE BIRDS, some time ago a letter recommending the feeding of Goldfinches on a diet of plain canary seed only. I think it would be interesting to have the opinions of your readers on the above subject, seeing that the majority of fanciers advise a mixed seed diet, which your correspondent condemns.

C. A. E. GATEHILL.

Can Novices and Champions Reside Together?

Sir,—In the novice classes at Wandsworth Show I find a person showing who is clearly not entitled to do so. It is generally accepted in the cage bird world that where two persons are showing from the same address, if one of them is a champion, the other must show in the champion classes also; more so in this case, as they were both of the same family. It is immaterial if this is included in the rules of the show or not, as it is practically an unwritten law throughout the cage bird fancy, and as such would be accepted in a court of law owing to the weight of evidence which could be called to support it. My object is to draw show secretaries' attention to it and make doubly sure, by including it in their rules during next show season, and so prevent such an unfortunate thing arising again. I may say I was not a disappointed exhibitor at above show. I had no exhibits there. I congratulate the members upon having such a decent turn-out, especially as it was their first attempt.

An Appeal from Barnstaple Show.

Sir,—We are faced with a deficit of £50 on our late show. We have circularised our exhibitors and subscribers, and have received £28 in answer to our appeal. Would you kindly favour us with space in your next issue asking for further subscriptions from those who have not yet helped us, the result of which, I trust, will be that the balance will be wiped off to enable us to hold another show.

PERCIVAL HARRIS, sec.

(EXTRACT FROM CIRCULAR.)
Exhibition Office,
High-street, Barnstaple.

Dear Sir or Madam,—It is with regret the Committee have to inform you that a loss of £50 has been sustained as the result of our show, held on October 31st and November 1st last. The explanation is as follows:—1st. The gate receipts were £14 under last year's, which were also much below the average. 2nd. The cost of penning, benching and feeding the exhibits was nearly £40 in excess of last year. 3rd. Two unavoidable alterations were made in the list of judges. This entailed engaging substitutes at the last moment, and the entries in these two sections were therefore very poor, and considerable loss was occasioned on them. In order that this well-known fixture (which has been in existence for 24 years) may not fall through for lack of funds, the Committee are obliged to appeal to the generosity of the prize winners and fanciers generally, and they trust the appeal will meet with a hearty response.

An Appeal for the Widow of the late T. H. Cullen.

Sir,—May I be permitted to bring to the notice of your readers the death of Thomas Henry Cullen, of Clevedon, Somerset? This whole-hearted lover of birds and other living creatures died from cancer, after a particularly sad illness, on Nov. 28 last. "Cliven the Nature Lover," as he was also known, was born in Bristol nearly sixty years ago, but for twenty-nine years resided in Clevedon, where he obtained a well-deserved reputation as an ardent naturalist. This kind, genial soul did not for many years enjoy good health, and suffered, moreover, from the loss of an eye (destroyed by a missile aimed at him during boyhood), as well as a paralysed arm. In consequence this poor man—for whom I always had affectionate regard—frequently experienced the pinch of poverty, and had great difficulty in making both ends meet more often than he cared to recount. And now that he has gone to his rest, I feel that there may be a few lovers of nature who will be disposed to contribute a small amount towards a fund I feel it my duty to raise on behalf of the poor widow who has been bereft of her only means of support. To readers of the Fancy papers, such as CAGE BIRDS, as well as several papers which circulate in Bristol and the West, Thomas Cullen's contributions on his pet subject—birds—will be well known. The case is a very necessitous and a very deserving one, and I plead on behalf of the widow for a few pounds to tide her over the winter, both for her own sake and in memory of a poor fellow whose honesty, integrity, sense of kindness to dumb creatures, and a great love for Nature made a lasting impression upon all with whom he was brought into contact. Contributions will be gratefully accepted and acknowledged by me on behalf of Mrs. Cullen.

The Alleged Stained Mule at Grantham Show.

Sir,—I was at a loss to know reason of disqualification until I saw the report in your paper, and am still at a loss to know who I have to thank for such a charge. I leave it to the judgment of your readers who know me to say if I should be guilty of such a dishonourable practice. The bird was prepared for exhibition in the presence of several friends, and I can vouch for the fact that the bird was free from any faking when despatched to Grantham the evening before the show. Those of your readers who know the bird will agree that he does not require any artificial embellishments to enable him to win at a show like Grantham.

H. MACKENDER.

Sir,—I should like to say a word in defence of the Goldfinch Mule put down by Mr. Vardy at Grantham Show for alleged staining, and at the same time tell Mr. Vardy that another time, before he disqualifies a bird for staining, to make sure of it, and not think it is stained. I should not have taken up my pen in defence of this bird but for the fact that it stood first in its class at Newark Show the week previous to Grantham, and was also awarded the position of second best bird in the hall (over ninety entries) by Mr. Brotherton, of Rotherham, who remarked to me when he was looking round after his judging was over that it was a very fine mule, rich in colour, and almost clear, with even marked wings, and a slight mark on either side of its face. Now a word about the exhibitor, Mr. Mackender, of Newark. I have known him personally for over ten years, and had the pleasure of serving under him when he was chairman of committee of the Newark and District F.A., a position he held for five years running, and a more straightforward gentleman and honest fancier it would be hard to find. I went to see him when his bird returned from Grantham Show disqualified, and we both looked at the bird and could not see why he had been disqualified; it was not until CAGE BIRDS was out on Friday that we saw the reason. I went into his shop on Saturday evening and he was downright disgusted to think that he should be put down for so low and mean a practice, because the bird has not even tasted colour-food, let alone the "paint pot," as Mr. Vardy suggests. As I have before mentioned, I had viewed this bird and looked at him closely, as one does a winner in a show, especially an almost clear Goldfinch Mule, and I don't mind telling Mr. Vardy that he is entirely wrong in thinking that it was "faked." The bird is a good specimen and rich in colour, but for anyone with half an eye to see could see it was natural colour. Had Mr. Mackender been notified on the show day that his bird had been disqualified he would have gone to Grantham and made the judge test it before his own eyes, but as it was a week after before he even knew why it was put down, it was, of course, then too late, as it would undoubtedly have been said that the supposed stain had been removed. Another time, Mr. Vardy, before you put a good bird down, make sure it is "faked," and do not think so.

A Suggested Plebiscite.

Sir,—I should like to say a little on Mr. J. S. Wilson's grievance. Well, I cannot understand all our judges tolerating colour-feed, and why they do not write on the matter. It is all right seeing the showroom "a-blaze." I will admit the birds look pretty and so on, but as I gaze on them, either in show or bird room, my sympathy is with them. A mass of fanciers might say, "Well, it is ridiculous people talking against colour-feeding, and all these letters about it from time to time," but I say it is ridiculous pounding the stuff into them, let alone the extra trouble, expense, and loss of perhaps a few birds. I will conclude and say briefly that my thoughts always are that the dear little things have to go through the mill, and proper.

JOHN H. JOWETT.

Sir,—Mr. J. S. Wilson was very strong in his condemnation of the whole business in your last issue. Can nothing be done to help the "wee gem" out of this chaos? Can we not alter the present state of affairs? I think myself that something should be done to try and bring about a better state of things. I notice that Mr. Wilson is of the opinion that if Borders were judged irrespective of colour it would put an end to all this disagreeableness and contention. I might say that I am quite of the same opinion, as I am led to believe that all other varieties are judged irrespective of colour. It would be interesting to know how many fanciers there are who hold the same opinion as Mr. Wilson on this question. The only way to find that out would be to take a ballot; further, I am fully convinced that there is no other way of settling this question but by ballot. Let everybody who is concerned have a vote in the matter, and not leave it in the hands of a few to do just as they like. I do not think there would be much difficulty in regard to the way to vote. It would simply mean sending a postcard to the respective secretaries of the Border Fancy Clubs stating that you are for or against Mr. Wilson's idea.

W. JEREMIAH.

The Natural Food of the Bullfinch.

Sir,—Being a lover of British birds in general and the Bullfinch in particular, and a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS (which, by the way, I consider by far the best paper), I have noticed from time to time various articles on the Bullfinch, and in most of them the writers seem to try to make us believe that it is almost entirely a fruit-eating bird. Whilst fully agreeing that there is no bird which has a more varied bill of fare than the Bullfinch, I would like to point out that to my mind he is more of a seed-eater than some would have us believe. Being a gardener, and living in the country, I have a good opportunity of watching the bird, and I find that in the autumn he is more partial to the ripening seeds than to fruit. Sow thistle, groundsel, sweet-meadow, and chickweed are his favourite seeds at that time of year. As the winter wears on he turns his attention to the seeds of the dock, nettle, rag-weed, also those of the ash and sycamore trees. The seeds mentioned are only his favourites; there are many others. As for buds, the Bullfinch only turns his attention to these in the early spring, when the buds are swelling. As for fruit, I find that the berries most commonly used by the Bullfinch are privet berries and haws; the blackberry is, to my mind, only in demand when the juice and the fleshy substance has dried off at the approach of winter. He will then eat the seeds that remain attached to the bushes. I have never seen a Bullfinch eat a ripe blackberry except in captivity. He is very fond of small insects such as green-fly, etc., but he shares this taste in common with all other Finches. By these remarks I am trying to prove that my especial friend the Bullfinch is not so far removed in his tastes from all our British Finches as some would have us believe. In conclusion, I may say that I have known dozens of nests, and I never yet saw one composed of anything but small twigs and roots of trees lined with fibrous roots.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of poper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the queriet desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Breeding with Two Crests.

Green 'Un.—I am not quite clear what you mean by asking if the mating of two crested birds is likely to produce regularly crested youngsters. If you mean are all the progeny likely to be crested, the answer is, no; but such a mating is useful to increase the proportion of crested young when an undue proportion of Crest-breds are being produced. This is really one of the chief objects of double-cresting, as this method of mating is termed. If, on the other hand, you wish to know if this mating would produce better shaped and more regularly radiated Crests, the answer is a qualified no, inasmuch as you may sometimes produce some excellently shaped Crests in this way. But in the main the Crest qualities are apt to show material deterioration in the first generation, but they will have among themselves innate qualities of the utmost value for building up and improving typical points in the second and third generation from the double-crest mating. The birds you describe appear to be quite suitable material for a double-crested mating, but as you say you are a novice with Crests, I would strongly advise you before deciding on this mating to get Part XIII. of "Our Canaries," and read and digest the chapter on Crests, wherein this method of matiug is fully discussed in all points by several of our foremost breeders of Crests.

Sits Blown Out (Trimity).—See reply to "G.H.L." as to the necessity of keeping birds in a suitable position to prevent ailments. It is just likely one or other of the causes mentioned therein are affecting your bird, and, if so, this must be remedied, or treatment will be useless. Also examine cage carefully for red mites, and if any are found thoroughly overhaul the cage and exterminate them. Feed for a fortnight as advised to "G.H.L."; give the same aperient mixture for a week, and afterwards add 20 drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil to the water, and shake well together two days in every three for a week.

Best Kind of Cage (J. R. C.).—For practically all purposes the best known as a box-cage—that is, one with wood top, bottom, back, and sides, and wired only in front—is preferable to any other type. The all-wire cage is the least suitable of all on account of exposing the occupant to every draught and fluctuation that may occur. Birds kept in a living-room should not be hung near a fire, and care should be taken that they are in a bright, airy position, but quite free from cold draughts, and the fumes of burning lights. Given these conditions, it is not necessary to cover the cages over at night. If there is any danger of draughts at night, however, covering them with a light cover would do no harm, but even in that case it would be better to alter the position. You can get full information on all kinds of cages from "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages," which our manager would send you post freo for 2s. 3d.

Constantly Moulting (G. H. L.).—Is not the bird kept in an open-wire cage, or hung in or near a window, or where it is exposed to frequent draughts or extreme fluctuations of heat and cold? You are practically certain to find the cause of this most protracted moulting in one or other of these things. First of all, you must remove the cause, and see that the bird is kept in a fairly comfortable, though not necessarily very warm, and equable place. Give plain canary only as staple diet. Every second day for a month give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cage, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of summer rape, and a morsel of banana or carrot. Twice a week, in addition to this, give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, and black rape. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon-juice every second day for a week, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day for another week.

Ailing Lancashire (J. P., Dubliu).—First make yourself quite sure that this hen is not exposed to any draught or damp. Stop giving groundsel, which is scarcely a suitable green food just now, and feed and treat the bird for a month the same as advised to "G.H.L." in all respects, save that after giving the aperient for a week, give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week. If not quite well by the end of the month write again, referring to this reply.

Feeders for Crests (P.J.J.).—As a breed, Crests are not really good feeders, though they vary in this respect a good deal, just as every other breed varies more or less. I have had Crest-bred and also Crests of both sexes that were really excellent feeders, and reared their own young without the slightest trouble or assistance. Still, such birds are rather exceptional in this breed, and I do not advise you to rely upon them to rear their own young. Put up a pair of good feeding strain of common birds—Rollers, Borders, or Norwich—for each pair of Crests you put up, in order to he provided with feeders in case of necessity. Cages with food and water vessels inside, if of large size, to prevent soiling of the contents, are certainly useful for this breed, and help to keep the headgear in good condition, but they are by no means essential. The holes in the wires, giving access to the vessels outside, are generally made larger, and square or arched, on cages for Crests, which answer just tbe same purpose.

Choice of Aviary (Conservatory).—In the circumstances you name you should most certainly choose the conservatory with a north aspect for your aviary. The absence of sun will be no serious detriment, but, if there is much glass in the construction of conservatory, as I expect is the case, it will rather be an advantage, as there will be plenty of light at all times, and the temperature will he far more comfortable in summer. The cold will not be nearly so harmful as the great fluctuations you say occur in the conservatory facing east. You say nothing about the birds you propose turning in. If they have not hitherto been accustomed to a quite normal temperature, you would be well advised not to place them in the conservatory until the weather becomes mild and settled in spring.

Forward Hens (L. A. K.).—If your living room is at a fairly comfortable temperature during the night, it is quite possible these hens would nest and rear broods quite successfully, but I cannot really advise you to take the risk. Such freakish efforts are rarely of any utility. If the yellow hen has quite recovered from the effects of her accident I would advise you to keep her in a cold room—that is, one with no fire—free from draught, for a day or two, and then return her to the aviary outside, taking advantage of a mild spell of weather for the latter move. If this is not feasible keep her, and also the other hen, in the coolest part of the room they are now in consistent, of course, with freedom from draughts, great fluctuations, or fumes from burning lights, and out of sight of the cocks. Simply being kept out of sight of the cocks will materially help in keeping these hens back. I suspect the room is kept very warm, or the birds are in a rather warm position, which, after their outdoor life, has an unusually quickening effect on them.

Colour and mating (T.D.X.).—(1) It is only possible to colour-feed birds whilst they are moulting, and you must begin before they start to cast off their feathers, and continue regularly until the birds are quite fine in plumage again. You must, therefore, see that you cannot colour-feed now until next moulting season. The substance known as tasteless pepper and sugar are the chief constituents required for colour-feeding. Some add a small proportion of Natal pepper and salad oil. You can buy the colour ready for adding sugar, and then using as required in egg-food from any of the large dealers, who advertise it regularly in our columns during the proper season. It is necessary to repeat the feeding process at each moult. Before next season arrives get our manager to send you the pamphlet on "Colour-feeding," at 3½d., post free, and get Part IX. of "Our Canaries," which will give you the fullest detailed information on this subject. (2) If you mean on account of age, it would be perfectly safe to mate the Norwich cock and Border hen next season. The progeny would, of course, be cross-breds, and of little value except for singers.

Improving Length (Percy).—There is really plenty of ready-made material in the Yorkshire for improving length, or, rather, for breeding all the length that is required, without going direct to the Lancashire. But if you must do so, get a nice long slim yellow Lancashire hen, with as little eye-brow as possible, and a closely folded tail. If rather stiff-tailed so much the better. Mate her with the longest buff Yorkshire cock you have, but see that he has a good bold upright carriage, and plenty of thigh. From the progeny select the longest and slimmest birds that show least trace of the Lancashire, particularly in absence of eye-brow and flatness on crown, and mate back to pure-bred Yorkshires. One, at least, of the hens may with every advantage be mated to the Yorkshire cock used in making the first cross. Keep as closely as possible each season to the pure Yorkshire type, whilst holding on to length, and eventually you will "get there." My advice is to take the short cut and use ready-made material. The quarter-bred Belgian would be a decidedly better cross if it has plenty of length. Have you seen Part XV. of "Our Canaries," wherein all these points are fully dealt with?

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

To Go with British Species.

T.G.S.—To answer your query fully is by no means easy, as size of aviary and form of attached shelter qualify the conditions largely. You must not overcrowd. Allow one foot space to each bird the size of a Norwich Canary. You may keep the birds in pairs providing you do not have two cocks to fight for one hen, or vice versa. (1) Zebra and Ribbon Finches, Green Singing Finches, Long-tailed Grass Finches, Gold-breasted, St. Helena and Grey Waxbills, Common and Green Avaduvats, Ruficauda Finches, Java Sparrow, and any other Siskin that happens to be on the market. (2) Get the foreigners in pairs, but only have cocks or Weavers, such as Red-billed, Madagascar and Half-masked, all very brilliant. Some of the foreigners would breed as soon as they had settled down. "Foreign Birds for Beginners" would help you; see advert. in this column.

Moustache Parrakeet.

M.P.R.—The Song Thrush will neither do nor take any harm with the Budgerigars, providing they are not crowded and have space for flights. Several species or local races are sold under the popular name of Moustache Parrakeet, so that a reply is not so easy as would at first appear. The male above is green, below it is yellowish-green, head and face bluish-grey, throat and breast reddish, a black streak extends from the mandibles on each side, almost meeting at the back of the neck, also an upper streak through the eye. The female is mostly green, with the sides of the face and throat yellowish, and a black oval streak descends from each corner of the beak towards the throat. These birds often come over in fair numbers. If you see a number of them together (unless they are all young birds) you will be able to pick them out by the different arrangement of the moustachial streaks. A small barrel hung up horizontally is the best nest receptacle—one 9in. in diameter by 12 to 15ins. deep would be ample.

Amazon with Hemorrhage.

T. H.—With a valuable bird you certainly ought to consult a vet., who by examination could tell the cause of the hemorrhage, as this is not apparent from your letter. Follow any attack of hemorrhage by bathing it with iced-water, and after this has passed away, if the nostrils are at all obstructed, cleanse them with tepid water and afterwards bathe with glyco-thymoline. I should also keep the bowels moving quite freely with Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful to four of water—give this daily till the voidings become watery, then cease till the voidings are again normal, when I should give the magnesia, same proportion, every fourth day. Your dietary appears quite satisfactory. The above reply, though somewhat incomplete, is the best I can give from data to hand. Change its seed mixture to the following: Canary and white millet, one quart of each, oats one pint, maize wheat, dari, hemp, paddy rice, sunflower seeds, grit (not sand), and shelled pea (monkey) nuts, half pint of each, the whole to be well mixed together. Keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in the cage.

Silverbill and Waxbill.

Bec d'Argent.—The plumage distinctions of the sexes of Silverbills are infinitesimal, but the beak of the female is narrower and a little more pointed than that of the male. I am afraid such a case is quite hopeless, but in entirely different surroundings, and another mate, an improvement might be possible. At the recent L.C.B.A. show two nice hybrids, Zebra Finch-Silverbill were shown; and a hen Zebra Finch (no difficulty about sexing here) would make a good partner for your Silverbill, as would also a hen Bengalese—in either case success is very probable. Re the Waxbill, watch its mate, and if it is continually preening the head of the bald bird, separate them, and take the bald bird to warmer quarters and keep it there for the winter. Anoint the bare area, to keep it soft, with a little clean vaseline, but not sufficient to make the surrounding plumage greasy. Diet as usual, but keep bowels moving freely (not watery) by an occasional laxative (Dinneford's magnesia, for preference) and supply a little green food (lettuce) or any kind of ripe fruit it will peck at—most species will favour apple when green food is scarce.

Cardinals, etc. (M.C.G.).—The only answer I can give in this column is to refer you to our advert. columns, but if you will send me a stamped addressed envelope I can perhaps give a more practical answer. An advert. in our pages for acclimatised pairs should bring a good result. I will, of course, through the post submit an opinion on any matter referred to me.

Ailing Budgerigar (W. H. Bratt).—I am of the opinion that the kindest act would be to destroy this bird, as though you may treat it so as to get some little improvement I fear it will not be permanent, and certainly the bird should never be used for breeding; her progeny would be worthless. You give me no data to go upon, and all I can tell you to do at present is to give it two drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak every other day till full relief has been given. If you will send me full details as to how long you've had the bird, size of cage, food and general treatment, I will try and assist you further.

A Long Beak (B. Magrath).—I do not recollect what species your Cockatoo is, but there is a species called the Slender-billed Cockatoo, whose beak is naturally as you describe. It is quite possible your bird is of that species; in such case its beak is not abnormal. If you were to describe its plumage to me I could settle the point at once. Of course, if you are sure your bird is not the Slender-bill, then you will have to have the beak cut (pared) back to normal size, and a vet. or some local fancier would be the best to do this for you. Do not press the boiled maize; if bird takes freely of the seed mixture that will suffice. Keep cuttle-bone and wood in its cage. The cutting up of these will tend to keep beak trimmed down in future after it has once been put right. How long has the beak been like this, and how long did it take to grow; that is, assuming you had the bird when its beak originally was of normal length?

Budgerigars and the Moult (St. Edmund).—I think I should let these birds go on as they are till next spring, when, unless the affection is constitutional, the shedding of feathers will become normal, which I think will be the case from your description. Breeding results, of course, could not be expected under the conditions you name, but next season should give a different result. Budgerigars are small drinkers; you should only supply drinking water in a small vessel, and for some time you should add to it a little Byno-phosphates daily. Also see that the bowels are moving freely without being loose, checking any tendency to constipation by giving, for one day only, Dinneford's magesia one part, water two parts, in lieu of the drinking water. Examine bird and cage for red mite or other parasites, and if these exist the cage must either be baked or scalded out with boiling water, and the bird sprayed (a "mist" sprayer) with quassia solution.

Birds for Outdoors (C. H. S.).—I do not know your county, so cannot advise any method of winter protection necessary; again, you are aiming at including too many for breeding results; confine yourself to a dozen pairs for possible breeding results. Omit the following from your list: Pekin Robin (possible egg eater), Yellowhammer and Greenfinch (pugnacious); substitute a Madagascar Weaver (cock) for the Orange Bishop. In a confined space Java Sparrows are often combative. Note: Tiger Finch is merely another name for the Common or Red Avadavat, and for a beginning, unless you are extreme South, do not try Fire Finches and Cordon Bleus. Birds must not be sent into the aviary till May, unless you get birds which have been out all the summer.

Bulbuls (G. J. Green).—The White-checked Bulbul (Otocompsa leucogenys) has the ear-coverts white, forehead and crest brown, and the under tail coverts bright sulphur yellow; it ranges in the Himalayas from Murree to Bhutan, and from the plains up to 7,000 feet. The White-eared Bulbul (Pycnonotus leucotis is the famed Persian Nightingale, and a good bird fully merits this title. Its range is principally confined to Persia, and the desert region of North-West India. Head deep black; ear-coverts and back of cheeks white; vent and under tail coverts saffron-yellow. The bill of leucogenys is a little longer and narrower in the female than in the male; this is most apparent when viewed in profile, and the same distinction prevails, I believe, with leucotis. The song of the former is quite poor in comparison with that of the latter.

Procuring Foreign birds in Bulk (Constant Reader).—The modus operandi is to meet the various boats at the ports of call, Southampton, Liverpool, etc., or get into communication with the various ships' butchers, etc., who bring birds over. This will not be easy, and will mean both time and trouble—it cannot be dealt with here, but if you choose to send me a stamped addressed envelope I will try and help you as to initial steps. When writing repeat query fully.

A Feather Puller (Mrs. Knight).—I cannot advise you fully till you repeat query with fullest details as to how you have been feeding and treating this bird generally. In the meantime put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia into the bird's drinking water (not more than one ounce), and repeat this after an interval of three days. Give it a spraying (use a "Mist" sprayer) of quassia solution once weekly for a month at least, and lightly anoint the bare parts with Spratt's "Pennakura." Our Nutshell booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager, would help you.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Feeding a Starling.

T. A. Harris.—"Talking" Starlings should be taken from the nest at the age of 10 to 12 days and reared by hand; or, at any rate, be caged when quite young. A hen can be taught to talk just the same as a cock bird. Starlings can be fed very cheaply (and very well, too) in the following manner: Get a bag of some good brand of puppy meal, or dog meal, such as Spratt's, or Clarke's "Melox," from a corn dealer's, soften this with hot water (and a fork), then mix into it some good maker's packet Thrush food (dry). The latter, used dry, will absorb any superfluous moisture; it should leave the finished food just crumbly moist. You will soon find the right quantity of each to use for the daily supply (it must be made fresh daily). Variety is good, of course, and you should give some vegetable or green food with it frequently, such as grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or cold boiled potato. Vary them frequently, and add half a hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, occasionally. Give some meal-worms daily, and any other suitable live insects you can lay hands on (such as "black beetles"), also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. Starlings like these. They are dirty birds, and the cage must be very frequently cleaned.

Name of Seed (H.C.P.).—The black seed is an inferior kind of rape; it is difficult to identify without sowing it and noting the resulting plant, as so many Brassica seeds are identical in appearance. Anyway, it is not summer (or German) rape seed.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygienc of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding' (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylork," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Coge Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Feeding Mules (Perplexed).—It is not advisable to feed either Siskin or Goldfinch Mules too generously after they have moulted, but at the same time they want a rather richer diet than canary seed. Add some teazle and a little summer rape: in the middle of the week give a tablespoonful of cracked sunflower seed, and at the end of the week a teaspoonful of hemp.

Linnets that Go Wrong (Anxious).—You are making two serious mistakes, in my opinion. In the first place, it is not a good plan to turn fresh-caught Linnets at once into an aviary. They should be kept in a cage (or flight cage) for about a fortnight to accustom them to the changed conditions of captivity, and to break them of their shyness. In the second place, you are not feeding them correctly. To give fresh-caught birds nothing but Linnet mixture bought ready mixed, is to invite disaster—some birds will survive all right, but many will not. You should get from CAGE BIRDS the "Nutshell" booklet (only 2½d., post free) on the Linnet, and treat them on the lines laid down therein; it gives information both in the management of the birds when first caught, and when they have become used to the change of food incidental to captive existence.

River Sand (A.W.).—River sand (or small gravel) is excellent as a covering for the floors of either cages or aviaries. Personally, I should prefer to mix a little gritty sea-sand and shell-grit with it; but this is not absolutely essential. Of course, the sand must come from a clean river-bed; there can be no question as to this in your case.

Bullfinch Ailing (L.A.K.).—This bird will be dead before you get this copy of CAGE BIRDS; judging from your description, its death could be but a matter of hours. I agree with you that it is a shame a bird should be sent by rail when in such a deplorable condition. It is a pity you cannot take steps to bring to book the party from whom you got it—or, rather, who swindled you over the exchange.

A Matter of Size (R. A. K., jun.).—The N.B.B. and M. Club has never laid down any rule concerning the birds which can, or cannot, compete in a class headed "smaller than a Lark" (or any other bird). It is left to the discretion of the judge; and, of course, the exhibitor. I am of opinion that the judge in your case was quite right in marking your Corn Bunting "wrong class" as being larger than a Lark. The standard works on ornithology, I may say, give the Corn Bunting as averaging 7½ inches in length, and the Skylark as 7 inches. I agree, however, that this method of wording the class headings is not altogether satisfactory.

In an Aviary (W.E.S.).—If you want breeding results, you must be very careful not to crowd the inmates, also to provide many more nests than there are hens in the place (to afford choice and obviate "scrapping" on the part of the hens for the same nesting site), and, above all, to see that there is always plenty of nesting material in the place. Lack of the latter simply means that a hen who is short of it will pull about the nests put up by the other hens. A good selection for you would be: hens, two Buffies, two Greenies, two Chaffinches, and three or four Canaries; cocks, two each Goldies and Linnets, and one each Siskin, Lesser Redpoll, Mealy Redpoll, Bramblefinch, Twite, and Yellow Bunting. Remove any persistently quarrelsome birds.

A Trio (C.S.T.).—1. Choose hens of Norwich type (stoutly built and good in colour, yellows if you can get them) for all the birds. Try clear or lightly-ticked hens with the Greenfinch, Goldfinch, and Linnet, and heavily green-marked hens for the Bullfinch and Yellow-hammer. The two latter crosses are somewhat doubtful ones, so far as results are concerned, but certainly well worth trying. Get a big, heavily-marked (or green) cock Canary as mate for the hen Buffie. 2. The following pairs would be excellent: Linnet-Bullfinch, Goldfinch-Redpoll, Greenfinch-Bullfinch, and, as an experiment, Bullfinch-Siskin. 3. An ordinary seed mixture (such as is supplied to other Finches) is all that the Tree Sparrow needs, with a few cracked sunflower seeds frequently. He likes, of course, the usual "tit-bits," and to pick over wild seeds.

A German Bullfinch (E. S. Dobbs).—I give to German Bullfinches, as a stock mixture: Canary two parts, summer rape and teazle one part each, by measure. A little maw seed now and again is very much liked; also two or three cracked sunflower seeds. It is the mites, however, which are causing the trouble, not the bird's diet. You must cleanse the cage thoroughly. Baking for from 15 to 20 minutes in a fairly hot oven is very efficacious indeed. Or wash in scalding hot water containing a strong dash of a disinfectant such as Izal or Jeyes. Or paint all over, thoroughly (every corner, crack and crevice, wires and perches), with turpentine, giving the cage a good airing before returning the bird. Give the bird several thorough sprayings (on different days) with warm water and sulphurrated potash. Get a small quantity of the latter from a chemist and mix a small teaspoonful into half a pint of water.

Owing to severe pressure on our space, several answers have had to be held over until next week.—Editor.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Davie.—Acute pneumonia affecting both lungs, particularly the borders, which were quite black, probably induced by the damp wet weather. As I have formerly remarked, it is the moisture in the air during damp feather that acts depressingly upon the air passages of birds and induces inflammatory changes, and at these periods extra warmth becomes necessary to keep the temperature of the air at a level. Should the trouble occur again, at once remove the bird to warmer quarters, placing in a hot air cupboard if available, or as near a fire or gas stove as is consistent with safety, when recovery often occurs. When sufficiently revived to take a little food or water, about 10 drops of aromatic spirits of ammonia, sweetened with a little syrup and added to about 2 ounces of water may be offered to drink, mixed fresh night and morning for two or three days, will generally effect a cure.

L. Barlow-Massicks (Hen Bird).—The remarks of above apply to "Davie" apply exactly to you. The symptoms were identical, and, if possible, even more acute. Perhaps remarks re treatment may assist you in preventing a recurrence, but unfortunately many cases terminate so rapidly, or are overlooked before treatment can be commenced.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Drying Cage (Blanchisseur).—We think if you obtain the illustrated catalogues of the large firms of bird providers you will find several types of drying cage offered therein.

An Illustrated Article (C. R. Richardson).—We did not continue further the series you mention. We had, of course, our reason for this; still, we will think the matter over again, and may perhaps touch upon the branch of the Fancy you mention.

"Wrong Class" (A Novice).—If a bird is marked "wrong class" by the judge on his award slip, it is usual for a wrong-class card to be put up on the cage of the bird.

Cuttings (J. L. Jones, C. Smith, G. Reynolds, G. Brown, and others).—We are much obliged to you for the newspaper cuttings sent us.

The Law of Libel (C. Pearson).—Your notion that one has only to publish "facts" to steer clear of actions for libel rather tickles us. Would that it were true!

A Cutting Machine (G. Atkinson).—Note the announcement made amongst the "twitterings" this week.

A Corn Bunting (R. A. K., jun.).—Look in Mr. Weston's British bird query columns for a reply to your question.

Alleged Borrowed Birds at Wombwell (Bird Fancier).—We are really surprised that you should think we can publish a letter of such a nature as the one you send us; it would land both yourself and us into a law action; and deservedly so, for you do not appear to have any real proof of the alleged borrowing. Any way, the proper course to pursue is to bring the matter forward at a meeting of the society, and have it threshed out there.

"Cage Birds" Literary Competition.

£10 10s. IN PRIZES.

We have received quite a number of enquiries as to when our next Literary Competition was likely to be started. Well—here it is. We know that there must be thousands amongst our readers with much knowledge stowed away in their heads concerning the subject of birdkeeping. We want to publish this in our columns. So, readers, utilise your leisure moments to put that knowledge on paper for the benefit of your fellow bird-keepers, and in exchange for your experiences there may be a cash prize waiting that will help you to buy some bird, or other acceptable item, you are a-wanting. Turn your spare moments to profitable account. Remember that all articles published by us will be paid for (note rules), also that photographs and drawings may accompany articles.

CASH IN EXCHANGE FOR YOUR EXPERIENCES.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on Mating Canaries to Breed Exhibition Specimens. Any variety of Canary may be dealt with (i.e., Norwich, Yorkshire, Crest, Roller, etc., etc.) and the selection of the stock birds and the way to mate them, with a description of the good points to be looked for, and the faults to be avoided, should be fully gone into, and the reasons for the writer's advice should also be stated.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on the management of Canaries. Competitors may deal with any one variety (such as the Norwich), or more than one variety (such as the Norwich and the Crest together), and questions relating to the general management from either the domestic or exhibition side, or the article may deal with any particular phase of Canary management, such as (1) How to prepare birds for breeding, (2), The procedure during the breeding season, (3) The rearing of young birds, (4) How to moult birds successfully, (5) How to colour-feed, (6) How to train young birds for the show-bench; or any side of Canary management the competitor may choose.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on any topic relating to British Birds. The habits, appearance, breeding, and management, etc., of any one particular species (such as the Goldfinch, Thrush, Skylark, etc.) may be discussed, or they may be dealt with collectively, or in groups, as may suit the desire or knowledge of the essayist.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on the art of Mule or Hybrid Breeding, whether in cage or aviary, and between any species of bird (either British or Foreign).

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on any topic relating to Foreign Birds. The habits, appearance, breeding and management, etc., of any one particular species may be discussed, or they may be dealt with collectively, or in groups, as may suit the essayist.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay written from the aviarist's point of view, embracing the fitting-up and management of a bird-room, or the fitting-up, stocking, and general management of an aviary, whether of Canaries, British Birds, or Foreign Birds, or a suitable combination.

An original Painting of birds, Value Four Guineas, will be awarded to the best essay, in the opinion of the judges, out of all the sections.

The Closing Date, remember is January 15th, next.

(Read these very carefully.)

Each essay must be clearly written (or typed) on one side only of each sheet of paper used. Violation of these rules may entail disqualification.

The length is left to competitors, but essays should not contain less than 1,000 words, wherever possible.

Faults of spelling and grammar will not be counted against any essay, practical utility, interest, and simplicity being the chief essentials.

No name or address must be put on any essay, but each must be signed with a nom-de-plume, the sender's name and address being attached on a separate sheet of paper.

The Editor's decision will be final. Competent assistance will be called in to aid him in arriving at his decision.

All essays sent in (and any accompanying sketches or photographs) become the property of CAGE BIRDS, but all which are published (over and above the winning essay) will be duly paid for according to their worth to us.

In the Courts.

The Use of a Brace Bird.

G. H. Gould was summoned at Gloucester on Dec. 1, under the Wild Birds Protection Act, for cruelty to a Goldfinch on Nov. 14.—P.C. Hastings stated that he found the defendant in a field occupied by Mr. Wood in Cemetery Road, where he had placed two nets for catching birds. Standing about thirty yards away from the nets, defendant was jerking a piece of string, at the other end of which, and near the nets, was a Goldfinch braced and tied to a peg in the ground. The effect of the jerking was to cause the captive bird to rise about 2ft. 6in. and to flutter, thus to act as a decoy to other birds. As soon as witness disclosed himself, defendant ran towards the nets, seized and released the bird. Witness added that the bird, after being kept at the police station two days, died.

Defendant denied inflicting any pain on the bird. He admitted he was "rising" it for bird-catching purposes, but said it was a house-bred bird, and was two years of age, that it was not tied to a stick, but was pegged to the ground to feed, and said it could not have risen more than six inches. He denied jerking the string, and said it was the first time he had used a bird in this way.—Supt. Hopkins: Did you know it was illegal?—No.—The fine was 10s. and costs.—"Gloucester Citizen."

Specialities that Make Bird-Keeping Easy.

Few of us, when "going in" for cage birds, are not moved by visions of lots and specials, by thoughts of profitable sales, or at least of the cheering influence exerted by the songs of our feathered pets. Whatever our hope, luck has little part in its realisation. The measure of success which will attend the pursuit of the hobby of bird-keeping depends upon the choice of appliances and foods, and the preparation made for emergencies. Improbable though it may sound, it is a fact that much money is wasted and much disappointment is caused to bird-lovers for want of a little care in the selection of "material."

With the object of combating this carelessness, and pointing out the shortest cut to success, we have arranged with some firms of repute to place announcements on this page.

CAGES AND UTENSILS.

The housing of birds is an important item, for badly-made cages of unsuitable wood soon become insanitary, with disastrous results.

The name of Wm. Rudd, Norwich, has become almost a household word among those who know where a good cage is to be found. Many years of practical experience enable Wm. Rudd to offer cages of the best make and material at the lowest possible price. The Rudd "Perfection" Double Breeder, price 10/6 (single, 5/6), is a striking example of good value, and every bird-lover, whether novice or expert, will profit by a study of Rudd's Catalogue, where everything in the way of cages for breeding, show, or stock is fully dealt with.

Sandiford, of Preston, who can supply any shape cage to order, makes a speciality of show cages and carrying cases of moderate price. His experience as a judge of cage birds enables him to make the correct pattern cage, no matter what the variety of bird, and exhibitors can therefore feel confident that their exhibits will present a good appearance. Sandiford's Syringe and Ball is one of the cheapest and best bird sprayers on the market. It can be had post free for 1s. 9d., and is very useful as a means to getting birds in spick and span condition. It will fit any bottle.

Sundry appliances are of considerable value to fanciers. In this department the name of Edwin Parr looms large. From North Road Works, Burslem, the output has been wonderful during the past three seasons, as witness the sales of Parr's Sanitary Nestpans, 95,545, and of "Sanitum" Nestpan Linings, 150,216. Nothing but leadless glaze is used in lining Parr's pottery appliances; and cages and aviaries fitted up with his sundries have always a clean appearance. Dealers will find the quality of Parr's supplies, and the favourable terms he offers the trade great incentives to do business with him.

Why use the rolling pin when you can get Enoch Tams' Patent all-metal seed crushing mill for 1s. 9d., post free? The removable plates in this mill enable the fancier to grind seed to any desired grade, and it is therefore invaluable to the breeder. The most timid of birds can be sprayed with Tams' nickel silver bird sprayer, and fanciers will find his trumpet sprayer and wire baths of much use also.

"If we were handy with tools we would prefer to make our own cages," some might say. This is where Orford, of Manchester, comes in. Fifteen years' practical experience among all kinds of timber has enabled him to put on the market complete cage sets, of proper wood, so that all that remains to be done is to put the cages together. That he has met a long-felt want is proved by the fact that in three years his business has increased six-fold. Fanciers will do well to write for his list.

FOODS.

No matter how good the cages and utensils, these are useless if birds are not fed properly.

Messrs. W. A. Rudd and Co. are experts on the matter of Foods, and their special Finch mixtures and wild seeds are blended in the correct proportions. Nothing is contained in them that is not absolutely essential to the perfect health of birds, and all are double-screened and picked. Rudd and Co. have an exceptionally fine lot of sun-dried giant Spanish Canary to hand, which is double-cleaned. Quality and cleanliness are inseparable at Messrs. Rudd's, and their new premises at Bishopsgate, London, are ample testimony to this. Their list is worth getting.

Healthy Softbills are fed on Cottingham's Foods. Cottingham, of Nottingham, specialises in mealworms and insectivorous food of the finest quality, at low prices.

What a cheery bird to have is a good Parrot! Now, the Parrot suffers much from this country's climate, and therefore those who keep this interesting and amusing bird should be very careful in the selection of the food they give it. Among the firms who have made a special study of the foods ensuring the best health for Parrots are Messrs. Fred. Bax and Son, whose reputation has been built by supplying high-class bird foods of every description at moderate prices, and their special Parrot Mixture is one of the best foods that can be given to Parrots. Softbill fanciers should try Bax Insectivorous Food.

RELIABLE MEDICINE.

"18, Elgin Road, Bristol,

"Mr. Parker, Morecambe.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly forward me another bottle of your Moultine; I find it the very best remedy for soft moult. My German Canary commenced to sing again in six weeks after giving it, although it had not sung for twelve months before, and my Yorkshire is all right again also. I have found Moultine equally good for helping wild birds through the moult. I had a Goldfinch that was stuck in his moult, but a few doses put him all right again.—Yours, etc.,

E. SMALL."

What more need be said of Parker's "Moultine," beyond that it has been used for 35 years with consistently good results.

A NOVEL IDEA.

Christmas is at hand, and one's thoughts turn to presents. It would be difficult to imagine a more charming present than a finger-tame pet bird. The idea has the merits of novelty, and becomes worthy of serious consideration when one learns that it is Messrs. De Von and Co., who are offering these birds. Messrs. De Von are the largest importers in the trade of finger-tame birds, fish, reptiles, etc., and do not sell trash. Their list is free for the asking.

A GOOD PLAN.

Readers who make a study of the announcements on this page, and write for lists to the firms represented, will be surprised how easily and cheaply success in bird-keeping may be attained.

A CHRISTMAS OFFER. WHAT ONE ENTHUSIAST HAS DONE.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London. Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. CUSHNY, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham.

Our Week's Membership List.

Our List this week is again a representative one, and comprises the names as follows:

Messrs. Hayward, Tunbridge Wells; Gill, Plymouth; Springett, Battersea; Carrier, Brierley Hill; Lapridge, Doncaster; Jack, Peterhead; Parker, Peterborough; Moar, Newton Grange; Barnes, Walkley; Chitty, Hambrook; Hollins, Hull; Wilson, Leeds; Matthews, Sheffield; Junor, Tomatin; Salter, Edmonton; Osborne, Woking; Blackman, Southend; Wertheim, Southend; Nelson, Castleford; Rennison, Frizington; Sumner, Lower Darwen; Ryall, Scunthorpe; Harrison, Scarborough; Coakham, Newport; Hind, Annan; etc.

More Local Hon. Secs.

This week I have the pleasure of announcing further additions, as under, to our list of Hon. Secs. to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. Readers in the towns mentioned may obtain full information as to the Aims and Objects of the League upon application to the gentlemen named LEEDS.—Mr. W. A. Wilson, 75, Bayswater Mount, Roundhay, Leeds.

ANNAN.—Mr. Geo. Hind, Lochfield, Annan.

Reduced Admission to the Shows.

In addition to the shows mentioned in previous lists the charges of admission will be reduced to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members at Queensbury and Peterhead. The reductions will be as announced in previous issues, namely, fourpence in the shilling. Including the two shows mentioned, the list of forthcoming exhibitions at which preferential treatment will be accorded to LEAGUE members is as follows:—

Dec. 16. FELINFOEL.
QUEENSBURY.
Dec. 22—23 PETERHEAD.
Dec. 23. HEBDEN BRIDGE.
Dec. 25 ELGIN, Academy Hall.
Dec. 26. NORTH WALES C.B.S., Assembly Rooms, Market St., Carnarvon.
SCUNTHORPE.
TONYPANDY (free to LEAGUE members).
Jan. 2—3. GLASGOW & DISTRICT C.B.A., Crown Hall, Sauchiehall St.
Jan. 6. GUISBOROUGH.
Jan. 12—13. SUNDERLAND, Miners' Hall, Roker Avenue.

Members residing in the towns mentioned should make a point of supporting the shows which have granted the concession of reduced admission, and readers in those towns who are not already members should join the LEAGUE at once to obtain the advantage offered by the societies holding the shows.

A Christmas Offer to Readers.

To every reader who, between now and Christmas, introduces two friends as members to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE will be presented a bonus consisting of a membership for one year for himself to the LEAGUE, together with a rolled-gold badge for watch-chain or coat-lapel. Here is an opportunity for readers who have not yet joined the League to participate in the benefits of membership without any cost to themselves. It would involve only a minimum of exertion to point out to birdy friends the work the LEAGUE has done in the past and the great field of work which lies before it, and it should be an easy matter for every reader to get two recruits to our ranks. Only strength in numbers can stand against the powerful forces that are being brought against us as bird-keepers, and although our opponents have been given pause by the mere organisation of a League which has for one of its main objects the defence of the individual bird-lover who would, standing alone, be entirely at the mercy of any prohibitive measures the professional humanitarians might succeed in establishing, it is scarcely to be hoped that they have entirely given up their avowed ambition to render illegal the keeping of any bird of whatever kind in a cage. It behoves us, therefore, to make our strong position into an impregnable one, and this is a very easy matter if only those readers who are not already members will co-operate with their fellow bird-lovers who have joined the LEAGUE in the first few months of its existence. Those who have read these LEAGUE columns from week to week will have learned of the work the LEAGUE has already accomplished. Our work, however, is only commenced. Much, very much, remains to be done, and I want every reader to set to work to earn one of our Christmas boxes by sending along the names of two of his friends as members of our LEAGUE. There may be those who are so placed as to be unable to find two recruits to our ranks, but they can at least themselves become members, and I shall accept the compliment of their joining as a Christmas-box in acknowledgment of my own humble efforts to put this LEAGUE of ours on such a basis that its success will be for ever assured.

What One Enthusiast Has Done.

As an example of what may be done by an individual fancier I think I cannot do better than instance the case of our member, Mr. Peck, of Bexley. Mr. Peck was in the first dozen of League members, and since his entry he has introduced no less than thirty-eight members. It happens that just as I am writing this note I am handed a letter from this gentleman introducing yet another member, this time to the juvenile branch of the LEAGUE. In his letter Mr. Peck writes: "This young fancier, Master Coakham, of Newport, is only nine years of age. He was showing his Greenfinch at Newport show last week, and noticed that his father and several other gentlemen at the show were wearing League badges, so he decided to join the LEAGUE himself and wear his badge with the rest in future."

In Defence of the Humane Bird Dealer.

It is our pleasure to have among our members quite a considerable number of dealers in birds—the men who are anathematized by the extremists as keeping "filthy and fetid bird shops, swarming with vermin and the germs of every disease to which caged birds are subject." We know, of course, that this accusation, as applied to bird shops as a whole, is a gross and unwarrantable slander, but we have to combat it, and with this view, a scheme has been devised as follows: It is that any bird shopkeeper may express his willingness to receive a visit from an accredited member of the LEAGUE, say the Local Hon. Sec., at any time during a period of six months. If at the end of that period a satisfactory report is received from the League representative, we shall prepare a certificate, duly signed by the representative, and countersigned by myself as secretary to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and this will be framed and sent to the dealer concerned for exhibition on his premises.

The tone of the many letters I have received from members who are dealers in birds makes it certain that the possession of such a document would be valued as having been granted only after the report of an expert. It goes without saying that any Local Hon. Sec. to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is himself a bird keeper and fully competent to judge whether the birds in any particular shop are being kept in humane and sanitary conditions.

If any bird-shop keeper will communicate with me I will put him in touch with our local representative, and our local hon. secs. will render assistance to our cause by bringing this notice to the knowledge of any local dealers, and inviting their co-operation in the movement.

Nothing but good could possibly arise out of the arrangement If our representative did not feel justified at the end of the period in recommending the granting of the certificate the bird dealer would only be where he was before, while, if the certificate were granted it could not fail to be not only of material advantage to the business of the holder, but a substantial defence against the possible accusations of inexperienced amateur or official inspectors.

I commend the idea to the serious consideration of each individual bird dealer throughout the country, and shall be pleased to give every attention to any expressions of opinion he may have to make upon the matter.

HENRY J. FULLJAMES,
154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

A FIRST ATTEMPT AT NEWPORT (MON).

The New Society's Encouraging Start. Excellent Management and a Good Entry.

This society (quite recently formed) is to be heartily congratulated on the grand success of its first venture, held Dec. 7th, in the Tradesmen's Hall, not a bad place by any means, though sadly taxed for room after admitting visitors. Given more time, the management would doubtless have utilised a portion of both sides of the hall, thereby making much more room down the centre, and adding to the comfort of all. Staging was nicely fixed up, the light fairly good, and the birds quite free from draught and very comfortably arranged. Entries numbered 440 in 40 classes. Quality was A1, and as is mostly the case in these parts, Yorks. proved the strongest, though all sections received very nice support, and many of the cracks of the day faced the judge (Mr. Jno. Robson). Quite a lot of well-known exhibitors put in an appearance in the evening. The management, under the able leadership of Mr. A. T. Rogers (vice-chairman), and Mr. J. Hammett, secretary, backed up by a really hard working committee in Messrs. E. Richards, J. C. Nathan, J. Davies, H. Gregory, E. Moss, W. Dark, T. Dully, G. Hughes, and G. E. Carruthers (treasurer)—had everything in apple-pie order, and must be complimented on their attention and courtesy to everyone present, and with such a body of fanciers we see no reason why this society should not become one of the very best around these parts. The guinea cash special, kindly given by Mr. J. C. Nathan, went to Messrs. Evins Bros.' Crest. The guinea tea-set by Mr. Watkins, junr., fell to Mr. Bale's variegated C.B. Best in British and Mules, by Mr. Dark, went to Mr. Shellam's Canary-Bullie; and best members to Mr. D. Edwards' Goldie-Bullie. Most points, members', Mr. Allen; 2nd most points, Mr. D. Edwards. About 200 fanciers visited the show.

RUNCORN MAKES A CAPITAL START.

Entries, Sales and Attendance all Good: Management First-rate

Runcorn C.B.S. 1st open show, held under its new management on December 8th, and 9th, in the Greenway Road Schools, a room suitably adapted for the purposes of a cage bird show, being nicely lighted throughout. The exhibits were staged at a nice height, and could be seen at a glance. The room is well lit up at night, and the Runcorn fanciers must be congratulated on having at commaud so good a show room. The secretarial reins are in the hands of that go-ahead fancier, Mr. T. P. Baxter, who runs the show like an old hand. We admire the amount of work he got through in so short a time, seeing he had to go to and from his business all day. Cards were up before they left the judge's table, so that none could be missed. Before leaving on the Friday we found prize money was being paid out. May the Society long have Mr. Baxter's admirable services. That old and enthusiastic exhibitor, Mr. W. H. Cawley, was looking after the arrangements in the show room, and exhibitors know what this means. These officials are well backed up by an excellent committee in Messrs. Bradbury, Suttou, Farrell, Guy Rone, Joues, Hayes, Whyte, Boote, Ratcliffe, Lunt, Wood, Houghton, Waterworth, Norton Locker, and Clark. We heard that £10 worth of tickets were sold previous to the opening of the show. The attendance was really good, and sales better than was expected, considering the bad time we are going through. Most points, Yorks., Mr. Baxter; closely followed by Mr. Knowles; Nor., Mr. J. Raynes; 2, Mr. Dick Barker; Brit., 1st and special, Capt. Hurst (with his noted Goldie); 2nd, Messrs. Bartram and Baines, Mr. Almond taking sp. in the Mule section. In the novice section (which contained some grand birds) Mr. Gregory led off, with Mr. Bains close on his heels, Mr. F. R. Jones capturing special from Mr. D. Metcalfe in the novice Nor. All told, some 400 birds were staged, and these were put through their paces by Mr. Alf. Wellings, whose awards gave entire satisfaction.

AUCHTERARDER.

Annual show of cage birds, held Ayton Hall, Dec. 9th. The Hall is a capital one for a show, and the cage birds were staged right along one side in a good light, the only drawback from our point of view being the noise arising from poultry, etc., which filled the rest of the hall. The cage bird committee were all good workers and gave the birds every attention, notably Mr. Roy, who seems to be the head and front of the section, and he was well backed up by Messrs Cranna and Halley; while the secretary, Mr. Dow, was courteous and obliging, and discharged his duties in a way that pleased everyone. The attendance was fairly good. The entry was disappointing to the Society, being a good bit down on the last show, but quality was very fine, many winning Birds being shown. Mr. Jeans (Falkirk) judged, and his decisions gave general satisfaction. Mr. D. Roy was winner of members' cup for most points, CAGE BIRDS' special for most entries, and medal for best member's bird.

WORKSOP F.S.

Members' initial 10 mile radius show held Dec. 2nd. A spacious light room, attached to the Golden Ball Hotel, provided nice accommodation for the exhibits, which were very neatly staged. The committee consists of practical and enthusiastic fanciers, and great credit is due to Messrs. Marshall (chairman), Bush, Rawson, Haslam, G. Sugden, Richardson, Rawson, Simpson, J. Sugden, and W. H. Fishbourne. The secretaries, Messrs. Herbert Smith and H. P. Sissons, are a brace of capable organisers, and are most courteous and obliging. Mr. T. Simpson's six-pointed buff Goldie-Can. was awarded special for best in show. Other special winners: Messrs. T. Simpson (6), J. J. Sugden, G. H. Pilsworth, G. Lane, and A. Rawson (2). Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) judged, and his awards were well received.

The Latest Success of the Sheffield C.B.S.

Entries 100 up; Extra Prizes Given; Wonderful Display of Norwich; Up-to-Date Management.

The 32nd annual exhibition of the Sheffield C.B.S. was held on Dec 9th. The Montgomery Hall, which is well lighted, well ventilated, centrally situated, and of good size, was the venue. The entries pleased greatly, being 100 up on last year's number; and the quality by far exceeded anything at most of the past shows. Norwich were an array of so superb a character that those who were lucky enough to gaze upon such magnificent creatures will long remember their visit. Once again Mr. J. E. Davies' variegl. yell. cock and unflighted clear buff cock, both "knock-outs," added 1sts to their already long list of "top-rung" mentions. Yorks., the birds of "Grace and Beauty," were also a great feature: Birds of great length, feathered like glass, shining like polished marble, and standing like guardsmen, distinguished themselves in every class. Novice birds in both the Nor. and Yorks. were very numerous, competition being as keen as "Colman's." Crests and C.B's. made a nice show. Hybrids contained several stormers, viz., the Yell. Greenie Can., Mr. A. Somerfield, it has already captured 26 1st prizes in open competition; the Can.-Bullie of Mr. R. Bond, and the Linnet-Bullie of Messrs. Tams. The Britishers were superb. The committee are composed of many well-known and hard-working Fanciers, who did their level best to ensure a success, supported financially and otherwise by Messrs. H. Barber, W. Oxley, A. Bradshaw, J. Thorpe, J. Memmott, J. Bailey, J. G. Cowley, Wilkinson and Elliott, J. Woolhouse and W. Bingham. Treasurer Mr. W. Oxley is a most trustworthy official, and one who has held this position for a great number of years. The secretaries are Messrs. A. Hobson and J. Woolhouse, a brace of very capable workers; both are extremely courteous and obliging, and always on the go. They fully deserve all the praise they received. The stewards, who acted promptly and efficiently, affixing prize cards as each class was adjudicated upon, and attending to the many details that crop up during show day, in a masterly manner, were Messrs. T. Hemmings, H. Lockwood and J. R. Webster. The staging was neatly carried out, and all birds could be seen at a glance. Long-distance birds were got off quite early by the best routes. Special conveyances had been engaged to get the birds to the various stations as quickly as possible after the exhibition closed. Amongst the many visitors we had the pleasure of meeting and chatting with Messrs. G. W. Lythgoe (late sec. of Manchester), S. Cook and W. Booth (Manchester), J. Pepper and E. R. Ridley (Chairman and Sec., Hull), A. Flint (Sec. of Tideswell), and W. Fox, D. Hunter (Scarborough), J. Evans, of Crest fame (Stocksbridge), T. Dawn (Chairman Sheffield O.S.), J. W. Woodall, A. Somerfield, and J. Memmott (Sheffield), and hosts of others. Messrs. Saywell and Edwards's entries arrived at 1.30 p.m. and 2.45 p.m. respectively, the former's were just in time to take their place, but the 2.45 consignment had to be marked "too late,"—hard lines. Promptly at 8 p.m., the show room was cleared (being packed at the time). Special mention might be made of Messrs. J. Woolhouse, T. Hemmings, J. Memmott, A. Lawton, A. Bradshaw, G. Fletcher, J. R. Webster, H. Lockwood, and W. Oxley, who all gave of their best, hang up to the close of the show. The judges were Messrs. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) and W. A. Cowgill (Bradford), and their awards were well received Silver medals, presented by Mr. J. C. Barnes for novices, were won by Mr. A. M. Craven (Yorks.), A. Hobson (Nor.).

Mr. J. C. Barnes' Classes.

YELL., NOR. (11): 1, Davies, very massive cl., delightful shape, col., and quality, often described as near the best on the bench; 2, vhc, Vardy, cl., lovely feather and col., fine head and neck, not quite so thick through, yet capital carriage; 3, Cook, red hot cl., all shape, feathered to perfection, full of style; 4, Turner, mkd. head, capital quality and col., true type, moves finely; h, Leach; c, W. Oxley. BUFF (14): 1, Turner, cl., bouncer, capital shape, A1 quality, nice col., covered with neat frosting, clean cut away, very bonny; 2, 3, Vardy, with a sweet brace, former better col. than 1st, shapely, rich quality, very close up; 3, ablaze with col., short and thick-set, well clothed, jaunty in carriage, very little removed from 2nd; 4, Smedley, mkd. wing, cobby and full of col. and quality, well across nerch, clean under; vhc, Harding; hc, Davies; c, Hawkes. No. 1, Lees, very soft at judging time, apparently grand specimen when right. UNEVEN (13), what a hot class: 1, Davies, unbeatable yell. variegl., unsurpassable for substance, quality and col., rare shape, good "big 'un"; 2, vhc, Vardy, buff, mkd. wing, eyes and head, equally well known, one of the best living, fully worth a first, hard lines in having to compete against yellows; 3, Woolhouse, buff, mkd. wing and eye, short and thick set, lovely col., feather and mealing; 4, Cowley, yell., mkd. head, very massive in build, good shape, col. and feather, clean cut, nice carriage; hc, Rathbone; c, Smedley; No. 2, Holmes, absent. UNFLIG. (23), a fine collection: 1, 2, hc, Davies, a trio of beauties, former well-known cl. buff, Manchester, Liverpool, etc., hero, certainly not a giant, but a "demon" all over; 2, cl. yell., full of col., well feathered, fine head, neck and chest, jaunty carriage, stood 1st Manchester, exceedingly promising; 3, Vardy, mkd. head, more substance than 1st, shapely and of capital carriage, not quite the colour; 4, Rathbone, yell., mkd. head, ablaze with col., soft silky texture of feather; ex. 4, Tow, extremely smart buff, will make up well with time; v, Thomas; c, Woolhouse. No. 22, Vardy, down at judging time, or would have been in tickets. HEN (22), a collection of bewitching damsels: 1, 4, Cook, brace of "Parisian Models," both cl. yells., 1st, short and thick set, rich tone of col., lovely texture of feather, well up in size; 4th, fine size and quality, sweeter in head expression; 2, Vardy, warmly fed cl. yell., sweetly moulded, lovely head character, good substance of body, clean cut, very close up, put down in the pink; 3, Cowley, very massive cl. buff, capital symmetry, rich quality col., neatly frosted; vhc, Hunter, a beauty; hc, Thomas; c, Tow; No. 7, Holmes, absent. NOVICE LELL. (18): a capital lot; 1, Wilson, red hot cl., grand feather, shape and carriage, well up in size, 1911 bred; 2, Flint, cobby cl., A1 quality and colour, good substance, clean under, charming; 3, Hoyle, well fed cl., good size and quality, nice head and neck, good 3rd; 4, Shepperson, nicely fed var., good texture of feather, fine substance; vhc, Marshall; hc, Hibberson and Richinson; c, C. W. Hobson; Nos. 12, 13, absent. BUFF (23): a rare class; 1, Dunford, tasked eye, model for shape, teeming with quality and col., well up in substance, jaunty carriage; 2, A. Hobson, cl., beautiful quality and col., shapely and of capital carriage, clean cut away; 3, Critchley, cl., ablaze with col., A1 quality and mealing, nice size; 4, Poulter, var., smooth as wax, short and thick set, lovely quality; vhc, Hudson; hc, Flint; c, Shepperson; No. 4, Wilson, grand bird, but at judging time had his "breeches down." HEN (10): 1, Critchley, yelt. mkd. wing and head, tight as a bottle, beautiful outline, fine substance and carriage, enchanting damsel; 2, Hobson, very finely modelled cl. buff, capital size, col. and feather, clean cut away, ran the winner a close race; 3, Hibberson and Richinson, bouncing yell. mkd. wing and eyes, fine shape, moves nicely; 4, Wilson, shapely cl. buff, rich in colour and quality, jaunty in carriage; vhc, Flint; hc, Robins; c, Shepperson. No. 15, Mellor, absent. CREST (10): 1, 4, Radley and Son, green, pied tail D.C., wealth of feather, capital substance, crest thickly packed, round as a hoop, delightful droop and centre, not a feather wrong; 4, buff, marked wings, D.C., heaps of rich quality feather, shapely, good size; 2, Barker, green pied tail, D.C., more substance, abundance of feather, crest large and as round as a hoop, pressed hard; 3, c, Evans, buff var. D.C., quantity of rich clothing, crest of lovely frontal; vhc, Nuttall; hc, Radley. C.B. (7): 1, 2, Barker, couple of "clinkers," former, buff var., massive in build, heaps of feather, great length and density of head feather, lashed to perfection; 2, buff var., abundance of quality feather, fine substance, rare width and rise of skull dense, well browed, close up; 3, Radley, almost green, pied wings and tail, well up in size, shapely, not quite so lengthy in head feather; 4, Nuttall, buff mkd. wings and head, good size and shape, worth its place; vhc, Moore; hc, Memmott; c, Evans. LIGHT MULE CAN., DARK (12): 1, 3, vhc, c, Somerfield, grand quartette, with his wonderful yell. Greenie-Can., claiming the biggest plum, finest of this "mixture" living; 3, very smartly built yell. Linnet-Can., well up in size, superb quality and col., showing parentage distinctly; 2, Lawrence, yell., Gold.-Can., rare substance and shape, teeming with quality and colour, magnificent face and markings; 4, hc, Bond, prettily mkd. yell. Sis.-Can., shapely, and of good size; No. 9 and 10, Edwards, absent. HYB. STRATFORD-ON-AVON.

Eighth annual exhibition held in the Corn Exchange on Dec. 6th. The hall is an admirable one for the purpose. Speaking from a selfish point of view, we should, of course, have liked to see it full of cage birds, but we must be thankful that our section was the leading feature of the show. This fact was strongly commented upon by His Worship, the Mayor (Councillor Ballance) who opened the show. There was a record entry in the cage bird section, and the quality, too, was extra. Nearly every class contained some noted specimens. The society are to be congratulated upon having such a secretary as Mr. R. W. Ingram, as nothing seemed too much for him to do in his endeavour to further the interests of the society. He was backed up by an able body of real fanciers. Mr. J. H. Roe judged.

WOOD GREEN.

Wood Green F. and F.A. show, held in Connell Schools, Nov. 4th. It was the third annual members' show, and was a complete success, for entries, quality and staging. Mr. G. F. Harris is the hon. secretary, but the management was in the experienced hands of Mr. T. Callegari, and that gentleman and his associates on the committee deserve the highest credit for their able management. The schoolroom in which the show was held is a splendidly lighted and airy room of the most modern type. Mrs. A. Barratt, whose interest has been enlisted in the welfare of the Society, opened the show, and in a well chosen and excellently delivered extempore speech congratulated the Society on their splendid collection of exhibits. Mrs. Barratt commented specially upon the beauty of the cage birds, expressing her admiration of the beautiful plumage and colour of the Norwich Plainheads. She had joined the Society, she intimated, and considered herself "one of them." There was a splendid array of cups and specials, amongst the winners being Messrs. P. Brooks, Jones, Griffin, Pettit, Pledger. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged.

CHAMPION SECTION. YORKS. CL., ETC., YELL.: 1, 2, Green, both fine upstanding birds, leader a trifle the finer at waist. BUFF: 1, 2, Green, winner grand length, back and wing carriage, trifle the better at thighs. VARIEG.: 1, 2, Green, 1st smart varieg. buff, just a trifle strong, but nice pose and good behind leg. A Triumph for Yorkshiremen.

MAGNIFICENT CHARITY SHOW AT BRADFORD.

Promoted by the Yorkshire Union, and given that whole-hearted and generous support for which the men of the County of Broad-acres are famous, the Bradford National Show promises to bring joy into the lives of many poor children.

The first great exhibition, promoted on National lines by the Yorkshire Union, took place on December 8th and 9th, in the Central Baths Hall, Morley Street, Bradford, when a grand total of 1,122 entries from 318 exhibitors were on view. As was naturally expected the Yorks. section came up well in numbers, no less than 790 out of the total being in these classes, and for quality it was by far the best collection ever brought together, it being impossible to find fault with some of the winners, and many that have stood their own in strong competition had at this event to take a back seat; in fact, most of the classes contained several sets of winners, so keen was the competition. The strongest classes were the two unflighted Yorks. classes, where the "Bradford East Rose Bowl" was in competition, the winner of this having the right to say he has bred the best Yorks. of the year; and to have the honour of this when no less than 75 birds competed is no small item. The honour fell to Mr. J. Bailey in the yellow class. In the novice section competition was also very strong; the open novice four classes contained only one short of the hundred, but the Yorks. Union novices had in four classes 29 over the hundred; the green marks totalled 39, and the Cinnamon marks 31, with two classes each, and the four selling classes had 82 birds entered in them.

Norwich Plainheads were not numerous, but were of nice quality. We should very much have liked to see a far greater entry in support of the most deserving cause, "The poor children of the City." British, Hybrid, and foreign birds were truly a grand lot. Our national songsters were up in good numbers, great in merit, and in most instances staged in a very delightful manner. Hybrids, greatly admired as they were, fully deserved the attention paid them. The outstanding "mixture" we thought was the Greenie-Chaffinch, the recent L.C.B.A. sensation (late Miss Reeves), now the property of Messrs. Martin and Archer. This unique specimen stood second in its class, and when we saw it it looked in the best possible trim. Wondering how it came to be second, beaten by a smart, but not great Goldie-Buffie, our curiosity was aroused. Making enquiries, we were informed by Mr. J. Beswick, the judge, that at judging time the bird was somewhat "off." Foreign birds with their gorgeous dress, added tone to the function. The judge of the foreign, who has officiated at the Crystal Palace for a very large number of years, remarked that the display, though small, was quite on a par for rarity and quality with anything he had ever had the pleasure to adjudicate upon. The meagreness in these sections was accounted for by the fact that there were counter attractions at one or two other shows held on the same date.

Borders came out well, this being, as it were, the introduction of the "Wee Gems" into the district; and, judging by the attention paid them by visitors and breeders, we predict a glorious future for them in the district. The questions asked us as to their points of merit, how they were bred, and what they were bred from, how we put such a grand finish on their feathers, etc., kept us busy. The entry was fully up to expectation, and quality first-class. It is a pity the executive had not separated the yellows from the buffs, which would have fetched a larger entry, and allowed both colours a chance on their merit. The medal winner was a fine bird shown by Mr. Gilchrist (Coldstream).

An Alderman's Interesting Views.

On the Friday it was expected that Mr. Percy Illingworth, M.P., would open the show, but owing to the great call made upon his time by his Parliamentary duties he was unable to attend, and his chairman, Ald. David Wade, J.P., kindly consented to officiate; and the committee were fortunate to secure the services of Mr. Emsley to take the chairmanship. The Chairman, in his opening remarks alluded to the great hold Canaries and Canary breeding had of the inhabitants of Bradford and district, and to the great industry connected with it; a look round at the birds there would, he said, convince anyone of the interest such a hobby contained. He hoped the show would be a great success, and that the Cinderella Fund would benefit greatly by it. Mr. Wade said he could not say much about Canaries; he had had a look round but failed to find the variety of Canary he was in search of and which variety he said were known to be in Bradford, i.e., a Canary with a blue tail (laughter). He was sorry Mr. Illingworth was unable to be present, but he hoped the show would be a success both financially and from a fancier's point of view. Mr. Lupton proposed, and Mr. R. Halliday seconded, a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Wade for his attendance, the former stating that he was a fancier and had sometimes as many as 200 birds in his aviary, and he was delighted to be present to see such a fine collection. Mr. Halliday drew the attention of the councillors present to the backwardness of Bradford in the matter of aviaries in the public parks, and thought it might be remedied in the near future. Mr. Towers proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Emsley, Mr. Hill seconding. After the dinner to the officials and judges, Mr. Towers called upon Mr. Hammond to propose a vote of thanks to the judges, and in his remarks laid special stress upon the fact that they had all accepted their engagements with alacrity, and had, he was pleased to relate, accepted the positions for a matter of expenses only, a fact that would add greatly to the financial success of the show. Mr. S. Dean seconded, and Mr. Battye and Mr. Camps responded on behalf of the judges.

The attendance during the first day was very satisfactory and encouraging, but during the second day it was magnificent, the room being packed quite early in the afternoon, and at times it was almost impossible to see anything of the birds; in fact, a couple of stewards had to be told off to keep visitors on the move at the tables where the foreign birds were benched.

The Lord Mayor Attends.

At 3 o'clock on the Saturday afternoon the show was officially opened by the Right Honourable Lord Mayor of Bradford (Ald. J. B. Moorhouse, J.P.), and he had as his chairman the ex-Lord Mayor of Bradford (Councillor Jacob Moser, J.P.). Mr. Moser (president Y.U.) introduced Mr. Moser with a few remarks, and Mr Moser, in his speech, alluded to a recent visit of his to Palestine, where, he said, there was a great variety of birds, and he had had the pleasure of seeing a collection of over 100 different kinds of eggs that had been collected by an agent of the Turkish Government. He then called upon his friend, the Lord Mayor, to declare the show open. The Lord Mayor quoted particulars of the great industry of Canary breeding, referring to the number of breeders in the district, and said it was the first opportunity he had had to be present at such a representative show; he hoped it would be a great success, and that the Cinderella Fund would benefit greatly from it, than which he could tell them there was no finer fund. The hobby, he remarked, was a valuable asset to the city, and was also valuable in that it kept men and also women well employed. Mr. Ramsden was called upon to propose a vote of thanks to the Lord Mayor for his services, and he congratulated the management on getting together such a fine collection. He hoped it would rival the Crystal Palace in the future. Mr. H. Hill seconded the vote, and remarked upon the help it was in work of this description to have such gentlemen who so freely give their time to assist in such duties. The Lord Mayor responded. Mr. Towers proposed a vote of thanks to Councillor Jacob Moser for his kindness in attending, and Mr. S. Dean seconded. Mr. Moser responded, and told a secret—that Mrs. Moser has a room set apart in the top of the house and there she is usually successful in rearing at least a dozen young birds each year, and from them supplies the rising generation with birds.

Grand Work in a Grand Hall.

The Central Baths Hall, where the show was held, is absolutely the finest room that could be secured for a show, and with proper staging could easily be made to hold at least 2,000 birds without overcrowding; it is exceptionally well lighted, both by day and night, and has a gallery running round three sides of the room, where the visitors can rest and talk and see all the birds with ease. It is also quite close to the stations, and trams pass the door, coming into town from the highly populous districts of Horton, and Queensbury, with access from Halifax. A special room was provided for the Roller Canaries, and a better one could not be found; it is already racked round, and would hold 100 birds, and another similar room could be had if required. A large refreshment room is also included, and the rent of the room entitles the payers to the services of three men to do any work required; this was found useful, as one of them stayed up with the birds each night, and it left all fanciers free for the day work. The secretary, Mr. H. Hill, had his hands full for a considerable time before the show, but he got through his duties in fine style, and all are agreed that he is the only man for the position. He is ably backed up by Mr. Hammond (treasurer), and a host of willing workers, who fetched all birds from the station on the Thursday night, staged them, etc., and on Saturday night every one of the birds was packed and off by 9 o'clock—not bad when the show did not close until 7 o'clock. A lot of birds from a distance were got off early, and nine cases were taken in hand by fanciers for the week-end, to be sent off on Monday morning. Altogether a dozen judges had been engaged, and as each had not many classes to officiate upon, judging was over in good time ready for the opening. On the whole every satisfaction was given, and the best thanks are due to them for their services.

An Extraordinary List of Helpers.

A very large number of officials were responsible for the working of the show. They were as under: Chairman (white ribbon badge) Mr. H. H. Towers; Executive Committee, Messrs. W. A. Cowgill, H. J. An Amazing Special Prize List.

The specials and diplomas awarded proved very interesting, and the following is a general outline, though one or two awards will have to be left over, as the slips are missing, and the judges will have to be written to for particulars. Mr. H. H. Towers won diploma for best Yorks. in premier classes (1 to 8) with his noted unflighted buff, also sp. for best bird opposite col. to winner of the sp. for best Yorks. in the show, this latter coveted award, a silver cup, being secured by Mr. J. Bailey with his splendid Cinnamon-marked yellow, which in addition was awarded diploma for best Cinn.-mkd. Yorks., the Toronto medal, and the sp. for best bird in champion classes—truly a remarkable performance. Mr. Bailey was also awarded the "Bradford East rose bowl" for the best unflighted bird exhibited by the breeder in the unflig. classes. His unflig. yellow secured this distinction. The championship diploma for the best Green-mkd. Yorks. was won by a novice, Mr. E. Ellis, who is to be congratulated on scoring over the champions. Mr. S. McNulty secured diploma for best Green Yorks., with his winning yellow; best Green Norwich, won by Mr. L. F. Harding's buff. Best in open Yorks., novice, Mr. T. Farnish; sp. for best Yorks. hen, Mr. W. H. Shackleton. Messrs. Ogden Bros. put down a strong team and secured sp. for most points in open Yorks. classes, and that for most points with vhc birds. In the novice classes Mr. S. B. Grayshon secured the sp., Mr. F. Ludbrook doing likewise in selling classes; Mr. L. Briggs, stock bird class sp.; most points with vhc birds in Yorks. novice classes, Mr. Shaw. Messrs. D. Mallinson and Son were the winners of the championship diploma in open Norwich, and Mr. Clegg secured that for the novice section of the Y.U. Norwich classes, whilst the points sp. for open Norwich went to Mr. J. Thomas. In Border, Mr. Gilchrist secured the championship diploma, and B.F.C. medal for best bird, also the points special. Mr. Mulcaby won the championship diploma in British with his Cornish Chough, that for best Mule or Hybrid going to Messrs. Martin and Archer, they also winning the points special, Mr. J. Lane taking the points special in British. Lady Kathleen Pilkington put down a strong team of foreigners, securing championship diploma and the F.B. club medal with her Blue and Black Tanager, also gaining most points and winning the special. Diploma for best Roller went to Mr. Wirth, he also winning the points special and Mr. Kilshaw the P.R.C.C. medal for best young bird in open champion class, the medal for open novice class going to Mr. Percival. Mr. J. Helliwell won sp. for best-fed Yorks., fed on Ramsden's Peppers, the one for the Norwich section going to Messrs. Greenwood and Pickles.

LEITH.

Leith O.S. annual show held in Junction Road Church Hall, Nov. 11. The hall was A1 for temperature, with the exhibits placed around the hall on two sides and end and right down the centre, every inch of the staging being practically utilized. The show, we believe, is a record one for the society, there being 600 exhibits, an increase of 50 over last year's. The President, Mr. J. Lumsden, was observed with his usual smile, doing his fair share of the work. Mr. G. Brown, the popular and enthusiastic secretary, had everything at his finger-tips. Few secretaries are so well gifted, all his efforts making towards the success of the show. Mention must also be made of the committee; each and every one of whom played his part. The attendance was magnificent, and we feel assured the smiling faces of the financial committee will beam for many a day to come. The exhibits in every section were of the highest order. The Norwich and British bird sections were undoubtedly the finest the public have been privileged to view, in or near Edinburgh this season. The Smith silver cup for best Scotch Fancy was won by Mr. G. T. C. Hope.—Special for best Nor. cock, Mr. W. R. Finnie; and special for best hen, Mr. R. Craig; silver cup, Border Fancy club medal, and a handsome special presented by the society, were won by the Secretary (Mr. Brown). Mr. W. R. Finnie won a silver cup and a handsome special for best Mule. The Secretary again chipped in for special in British bird section. The awards were made by: Messrs. J. Carson and W. Rodgers (Scot Fancies), A. G. Cameron (Nor.), J. Craig (Borders), and A. Cochrane (British and Mules), whose placings pleased everybody.

Canary Breeding for Beginners

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

YET ANOTHER RECORD.

A Tremendous All-Round Success: Over 1,500 exhibits: The "cream of the Fancy" in every Section: A Splendid Example of Model Management.

The twelfth annual show of Gateshead ("Palace of the North") Society was held on December 8th and 9th, and was undoubtedly the greatest and best show of cage birds ever seen in the North of England. The venue was again the famous Burt Terrace Drill Hall, one of the best in the kingdom, and when we say that this great hall was literally packed with exhibits one can gather some idea of the vast nature of the show. The liberal classification was rewarded by a wonderful entry of 1,520 birds, which is about 70 over their last year's record show. The quality of the exhibits, too, was the best seen in the North of England for the past two or three years, this being especially noticeable in the Norwich section.

We "take off our Hat."

It will be readily understood that the successful working of a show of such magnitude can only be accomplished by a vast amount of hard work, together with the necessary tact and skill, and it is with pleasure that we raise our hat to the officials, for the arrangements can only be described as perfect, and just what one would expect at the "Palace of the North." Mr. A. Holden, the popular secretary, has a hard task, but his keenness as a fancier, and his great abilities in getting through his work, enable him to make light of it, and we always found him cheerful and obliging, and ready to assist anybody; and judging from the practical precision with which he carries out his clerical duties we do not think he has anything to learn in the matter of working a large cage bird show. With so able a fancier at the head of affairs it is scarcely to be wondered at that the society keeps so steadily on the up-grade, and we hope soon to have the pleasure of recording a 2,000 entry, as a mark of the esteem in which he is held by fanciers. Mr. F. F. Hawkins, the well-known Border enthusiast, again undertook the duties of show manager, and the whole of the arrangements for the staging and watering and feeding the exhibits were in his hands, which is equivalent to saying that everything was carried out in great style in the usual Gateshead manner, Mr. Hawkins personally seeing to it that nothing was overlooked; exhibitors and visitors alike are indebted to this gentleman for the great care and attention he bestows upon the exhibits, nothing appearing to be any trouble to him, and we again congratulate him upon the fact that everything was in perfect order, and went off without the slightest hitch. He was very ably assisted by a grand body of fanciers, headed by the popular chairman, Mr. R. Tindale (who, by the way, we heartily congratulate upon his success in winning the Northern Yorkshire challenge cup for best young bird), Mr. Shafto Robson (vice-chairman), and Messrs. W. Longstaff, A. T. Hodson, J. Moor, W. J. Smith, R. W. Smith, E. B. Hooper, D. E. Kent, A. Storey, J. Adams, J. W. Reed, H. Johnson, J. Mackenzie, T. Tomlinson, C. Eastop, G. C. Petterson, R. Gladson, H. Wellsbury, R. Hope, F. Ayre, and J. Davidson, while a special word of praise is due to the stewards, Messrs. Wellsbury, Reed, Moore, Brown, Hope, Dobson, Geo. Taylor, J. Maddison, Tindale, Mather, Kent, Lawson, Young, Mackenzie, and J. G. Hutchinson; while we also noticed Mr. T. Almond (late chairman) and Mr. Tom Taylor lending great assistance.

Displaying the Wares.

The staging was again a treat. It was erected upon similar lines to last year, rows of cages three and four tiers high running the length of the hall, with the Foreign birds and British softbills again at the far end of the hall, away from the entrance, the whole effect producing a magnificent spectacle. The beauty of these large shows is the precision with which the classes are arranged, every section being named, with the classes following one after another, and the winning birds placed in regular order. This is a great boon to everybody concerned, and enables visitors who may not be fanciers readily to follow the birds without any difficulty. Nothing great was done in the matter of sales, although a good number of birds changed hands at the smaller prices, and we were informed that the amount taken was about the usual. Both days were rather dull, yet despite this the show was well attended, the "gate" on Saturday especially being splendid, the hall being simply packed. We noticed a great many well-known fanciers present from different parts of the country, including Mr. G. E. Russell and Mr. J. Brotherton, who do not usually get up as far North, and who, we understand, were enchanted by Gateshead's brilliance, and are coming again.

Wonderful Quality all Through.

Coming to the exhibits themselves they were without a doubt the best display seen in the North of England for many a day, this being especially noticeable in the Canary section. Here indeed some charmers were staged, marvels of type and colour. It would be invidious to give any one variety the preference where all were good. Crests, Yorks. and Borders, all retained their high standard of excellence; indeed, it would be difficult to find better, but we were especially delighted with the display of Norwich. Here, we are bound to say, we noticed a great improvement; that is, taking the birds all through. It was not a case of "the winning birds good ones and the rest nowhere," as we have sometimes seen; but the birds were much more level in type all through, and made the best display we have seen for some time. This section totalled 206 in 12 classes, an average of over 17 per class, the best in section going to Mr. J. Smeaton, with a lovely clear yellow unflighted, a gem for type, colour, and quality. This gentleman put down some grand specimens, as did also Messrs. W. H. Howe, A. G. Cameron, W. Dormer, G. Dobinson, E. Cowling, F. F. Lawson, Pickering and Wright, W. Burdett, A. Holden, W. H. Butler, and W. Aitchison. The last-named gentleman's natural colour yellow is a stormer for type, size and colour, and won the same class last year. Crests and Crestbreds were a grand lot, and this section provided the winner of Hindhaugh's special of £1 1s. for best bird in show, the successful exhibitor being Mr. A. J. Smith, with a grand yonng Crest. This section was under the patronage of the Crested C.C. and the Northern C.C., and competition was very keen throughout. The section totalled 101 in 10 classes, an average of 10 per class, and although the numbers were not large, the quality was splendid. We regret that the Cinnamon Crest or C.B. class had to be cancelled, and it is evident this variety has not yet taken hold of the popular fancy, at least in the North. Special prize winners in this section were C.C.C. 5s. specials, best clear body, any colour, crested, T. Taylor; best buff crested, other than clear body, A. J. Smith; best buff C.B., R. S. Bewick; best yellow crested or C.B., J. Brotherton; best young buff C.B., Dobson and Son; while the diploma for best novice crested went to Mr. J. Gillespie, and that for best novice C.B. to Dr. Twigg. The Northern C.C. special prize winners were: Ford Malling challenge cup and medal for best old crest or C.B., Mr. T. Taylor; silver challenge cup and gold medal for best young crest, W. F. Swan; silver challenge cup and gold medal for best young C.B., Dobson and Son; silver medals were also won by Messrs. J. G. Hutchinson (3), Dodson and Son (3), R. S. Bewick (2), T. Taylor (1) and T. Bewick (1). Yorks. were splendid, both in numbers and quality, the section totalling 176 in 10 classes, an average of over 17 per class. Mr. Bailey seemed to be particularly happy in selecting the winners here. It is quite evident that he does not believe in thick-bodied birds, no matter how good they may be in length and col., and the result was that the birds he had on top were true specimens of what a good Yorkie should be, slim, well rounded birds, well drawn, yet of standard length, the extra long thick-bodied birds having to take a back seat; and we heard his judging commented on very favourably. Special for best in section was won by Mr. F. Ellis, with a beautiful specimen, an unflighted clear yellow, a good one all over. The winner of the Northern Yorkshire challenge cup for best young bird bred by exhibitor was won by the popular secretary, Mr. R. Tindale, with a splendid unflighted buff, a topper for style and finish, while Mr. J. W. Ramsden's silver cup for second best bird went to Mr. G. Tweedie, also with an unflighted buff. Cinnamons averaged 10 per class in four classes, which is not so bad; while the cream of the Fancy were out, especially Mr. Dormer's 1st and 2nd yellows, these two birds standing out by themselves as marvels of colour and polish, the winner taking special for best in section. Mrs. F. E. Deacon and Mr. Godley also put down good teams, and the section all through was very good. Lizards totalled 20 in the two classes, and not a bad one amongst them. Mr. J. Dewsnap secured special for best in section with a clear cap gold. This show finishes the competition for the Northern Lizard club's cup and bowl, and Mr. J. Riseborough having succeeded in winning both, the cup now becomes his own property.

The Northern Beauties.

The Scotch Fancy classes contained many good birds. The entry was scarcely up to that of previous years, although the quality all over was well maintained. Diploma for best in section was won by a good buff hen shown by Mr. Willison, but the clear yellow cock must have given her a tight race. The Border section was the feature of the show, the entry being grand and the quality A1, many noted winners being amongst the tickets. We heard one or two well-known breeders and exhibitors stating that the even marked class was the finest ever brought together, in which we agree, the eye marking being simply perfect, and any of the first five birds might have won, so close were they in ideal points to one another. A very nice foul buff cock, shown by Mr. J. Smart (Tweedmouth) won the B.F.C.C. medal and also diploma for best Border. The Tynesiders are hot on a good green Border, and they carried away all the honours in this section. Cinnamons, we are glad to say, came out well, and the col., type and quality were all one might wish to see. Every year in this variety we see them nearing the ideal. We heard some remarks passed by exhibitors against the Crest section being judged first, the Scotch second, and the Borders last. The light was fading fast when the judge started to make his awards, and clean gone before he was finished, and no man can do justice to himself and Borders in a fading or artificial light. The Borders, birds of position, where colour, condition and tightness of feather must have careful attention, need a good light in the early part of the day for anyone to apportion the awards. The birds here might in themselves have kept Mr. Robson the best part of the day, with another judge taking the other varieties, and so saving Mr. Robson having to judge after the show was opened, with visitors going backwards and forwards. However, his awards, under the circumstances, left little room for complaint.

Members' Birds to the Fore.

Members' entries came up well, and the quality was very good, many of the birds holding enviable positions in the open. Norwich were the best in numbers, closely followed by the Borders and Yorks., while some really grand birds were exhibited in the British and Foreign bird classes. The principal members' special prize winners were: Best bird in members' classes, Mr. R. Tindale; most points, R. S. Bewick. Novice members' classes also came up well, and made a very creditable display, several really good birds being staged. Special for most points in members' novice classes was won by Mr. J. W. Reed.

Taken all through the show was a grand affair, and the officials of the Gateshead society have every reason to feel proud of their great achievement. The judges were: Norwich, Cinnamons and Lizards, Mr. J. H. Roe; Crests, Borders and Scotch Fancies, Mr. J. Robson: Yorks., Mr. J. Bailey; Mules, British and Foreign, Mr. J. F. Dewar; and their awards met with general approval.

Mules, British and Foreign Birds were one of the outstanding features in the show, the majority of the English and Scotch cracks being present doing battle, and some upholding their well-known reputation. Messrs. Martin and Archer had forward a nice team, and accounted for a goodly share of the spoil. Special for best Mule was secured by their well-known clear Linnet and "Perfection." British were strong classes, some gems being forward. Spl. for best was found in Mr. Harris's grand Hawfinch, while spl. for best Foreign was secured by that gem of gems, Mrs. Taylor's lovely yellow-winged Sugar Bird.

GUERNSEY.

Owing to an unfortunate difference between the authorities of the show and the local cage bird fanciers, the entries at the show of the Guernsey Agricultural and Horticultural Society were not large, neither was the quality up to the average. It is to be hoped that when another year rolls round the dispute will have been satisfactorily settled, and that an extended classification will be given hy the society, and increased entries furnished hy the local fanciers. Mr. Carre made a most efficient secretary, and his efforts were well seconded by his committee. Mr. C. A. House judged.

KILSYTH.

Kilsyth and Dist. F.A. annual open show held Dec. 9th, in the Drill Halls. President, Mr. Wm. Irvine; vice-president, Mr. J. White; treasurer, Mr. J. Brown; hon. sec., Mr. A. D. Duncan; executive, Messrs. T. M. Aulay, W. McGreachan, W. Russell, G. Shillinglaw, W. Hardie, D. Barrie. The halls are splendidly adapted in every way for show purposes, and secretary Duncan, who is courteous and most obliging in every way, and much respected, had all arrangements made for the comfort of visitors and exhibits. He was well supported by a hard-working committee of well-known fanciers. British birds were certainly an outstanding feature of the show. The success of the show is greatly due to secretary Duncan's special efforts. Mr. Duncan provided all the handsome specials for the British bird sections. Bordors were on almost equal terms in point of numbers with the British. Quality was excellent all round, and the number of entries all over were 90 in excess of last year's. Entries were received from England and distant parts of Scotland, which speaks volumes as to the care and promptitude of dispatch displayed by the secretary and the officials of the society. The well-known breeder and fancier, Mr. J. Johnstone won special for best bird belonging to an exhibitor beyond Scotland (with a grand model of a Border Fancy). Silver medal for best Crest or C.B., Mr. J. Sharp, who also won Hyde's special; Nor., Mr. McLay, and Mr. D. McLaughlin; Borders club medal for best, Mr. H. Bennet; other specials, by Messrs. Irwin, Hamilton, and Wilson; British, most points (confined to members), Mr. Duncan, who also won the handsome silver cup for best Brit. or For. (members'). The show was well patronised by the public and fanciers. Judges: Nor., Mr. H. Moreland (Falkirk); Borders, Messrs. A. Walker (Lesmahagow) and J. Pendrigh (Edinburgh), whose awards gave all-round satisfaction, very little grumbling being heard.

Cumnock Makes Great Progress.

Cumnock C.B.S. held a most successful show on 2nd Dec., in the Co-operative Hall, Auchinleck. There was an entry of about 250 birds, almost 100 in excess of their initial venture a year ago. Should this young society continue thus we are safe in saying that within a very limited time they will be conducting one of the best and most important confined shows in Scotland. Cup for most points goes to a very popular member in Mr. Sam. Montgomery, and right well he deserves it. The ambition of the club is to possess a cup for each of three sections, and should another one or two of the members follow the excellent example of their worthy president, Mr. Kinuear, such an aim should not be long delayed. He is undoubtedly one of the ablest and most genial men we have had the pleasure of coming across, and the society is indeed fortunate in having such a model president. In Mr. Nutt they have also a very capable and obliging secretary who has nothing to learn in the way of running an exhibition. Messrs. T. Findlay and A. Tannock (vice-presidents) are also well-known exhibitors, and rendered valuable assistance. The committee are all keen and willing workers. Amongst them we noticed Messrs. S. Montgomery, G. Gibb, D. Richmond, Jas. Whitelaw, J. McDougall, D. Smart, J. Tannock, J. Davidson, J. Mair, and J. McGaviu. The hall is a very suitable one. Messrs. P. McQuiston and W. Kirkhope judged, and their awards met with general approval.

SHETTLESTON.

Shettleston C.B.S. held their 4th annual show in the Hill Street Hall on Dec. 9th. The day was rather milder. than had been experienced during the preceding week, but the ground in many places was still under the white mantle it had donned tha night previous. It was pleasing to see so many well known faces, and the "gate" must have come up to expectations, as the hall, which was a good place for a show, was overtaxed hy visitors. Mr. A. Berry, the secretary, had everything well in hand, and was courteous and obliging to all. He was supported by a staff of good and true fanciers. The judges got through their work in fine time. Mr. J. Renwick (Hamilton) took the Canaries and Mr. Ward (Shettleston) the British.

WISHAW, N.B.

Annual show held Nov. 4th, Watson's Hall, when over 200 exhibits were present. The hall was all that could be desired for a cage bird show, being well lighted and heated, and free from draughts. Scotch Fancies, though not numerous, were of good quality. Norwich were well forward, notably the Crest-breds; and the Borders were the best display, including some charming specimens. In the British bird classes some very fine exhibits were staged. Office-bearers: President, Mr. W. Robertson; treasurer, Mr. A. Allardice; stewards, Messrs. Wyper, Watson, and McAllister. The heavy end of the stick was held by that very capable secretary, Mr. A. McAllister, who managed everything in a very satisfactory manner. The awards were made hy Messrs. D. J. Gardner (Bathgate), and G. Smart (Carmyle), and they were well received. In the afternoon the show was well patronised.

32 UNEQUALLED COLOURED PLATES
32 ART PLATES. By H. NORMAN.
Depicting every variety of Canary.

The publication of this magnificent work in its complete form marks a Red Letter Day in the lives of all breeders and keepers of these popular Pets.

The renowned author aided by the most famous Canary artist have produced a work the like of which has never before been issued.

Crammed full from cover to cover with information of the greatest practical value lucidly compiled and profusely illustrated, it forms a volume which every Canary lover great or small will hail with acclamation. Note also this vital point

IT IS NOT ONE MAN'S WRITING ONLY

To make this work thoroughly practical in every detail, the author Mr. Claud St. John has been assisted by a large number of the Leading Breeders and Exhibitors of the Day.

These gentlemen have given from their own personal experiences the methods of Breeding Management and Exhibiting which they have found give them the greatest measure of success with the respective varieties in which they are justly famous.

The Magnificent Coloured and Art Plates and all the other numerous sketches with which this volume is illustrated are by Mr. H. Norman, and can best be described in the words of the author as "Aiding considerably to elucidate the letterpress and the coloured and art plates as models of present day types of perfection of their respective varieties which the breeder may safely strive to evolve in real life."

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

The Yorkshire Breeders

Society has been formed to supply any variety of Yorkshire Canaries direct from the breeders to fanciers, instead of allowing dealers to show and sell them as their own strains. Particulars as to how each bird has been bred will be given, and as we hold some of the best pedigree strains living, purchasers can rely on getting the best blood obtainable. We can supply breeding sets (cock and 2 hens) at 12/6, 15/-, 20/- per set, pairs 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 upwards; cocks from 6/-, hens from 4/-; exhibition birds at reasonable prices; travelling cages 3d. extra. Unsolicited testimonials have already been received from delighted customers. Don't be misled, we are the actual breeders, and in buying from us you save the middlemen's profits. Terms: Cash or deposit system; state wants to "Secretary," 40, Springcliffe, Manningham, Bradford, Yorkshire.

Various Canaries.

BOLDON COLLIERY CBS

First annual show held Co-operative Hall, Dec. 9th. The hall is a grand one, being well lit and roomy. Seventy birds were on view, and the quality was of no mean order. This being a new thing in Boldon, the people were delighted to see such nice birds. Mr. R. Sanderson (Jarrow) judged.

WEDNESBURY.

Under the auspices of the Wednesbury Central and King's Hill H.S., a few classes were allotted to cage birds at the show held Dec. 16. This was through the kind courtesy of the secretary, who guaranteed the prize money in full. He, and those connected, are to be congratulated upon the splendid array of birds sent, many noted fanciers extending their patronage. The judge, Mr. J. A. Tonks (Wednesbury) had a poser in picking out the winners, especially in the British. He carried out his duties in a quite satisfactory manner. Mr. Alfred Blakemore proved to be an obliging and hard-working secretary.

GOLDIE, ETC. (12): 1, Brotherhood, nice conditioned Goldie, pure, square cut blaze, a little broken in cap, otherwise extra good; 2, Baseley, beautiful Bullie, grand cap and wings, fine tone of breast colour; 3, Gibbons, a grand Linnet, nice tone of col., well laced; 4, vhc, Poole, Bullie, deeper tone of breast col. than 2nd, but beaten a trifle in shape; hc, Price; c, Hutton. A.O.S. BRIT. (14): A very nice class: 1, sp, Brotherhood, simply a glorious Bramble, absolutely perfect, wins; 2, Hingley, Chough, nice condition, quite an attraction; 3, Poole, a grand Hawfinch, some thought might have been 2nd, hard lines to meet the winners; 4, Capewell, lovely Waxwing, another attraction; vhc, Baseley; hc, Cooper; c, Thomas. CAN., A.V.: 1, c, Brotherhood, buff mkd. Nor., good shape, nice tone of col., well braced wings; 2, Millinecamp., cl. yell. Yorkie, good quality, nice position and style; 3, hc, Weaver, real good yellow Nor., grand colour, pressing hard for honours; 4, Gibbons; vhc, Hingley.

BOWHILL.

Fourth annual show held in the Gothenburg Hall, December 16th. The hall is a good one for the purpose, and the cage birds were staged in a fine light along one side and one end of the hall. The entry was a bit up on previous shows, and many of the principal winners at recent Fife shows were forward in Norwich and British classes. The Scotch Fancies were cancelled. The executive are all grand workers, from the President downwards, and the Secretary (Mr. A. Spence, jun.) was well backed up by his assistant, Mr. W. Spence, who was the moving spirit in the section. The show was well patronised during the day, and towards evening it was difficult to move about. Cup for most points was won by Mr. Ramsay, closely followed by Messrs. W. Spence and A. Dickson. Medal for best cock, Mr. Pratt; best hen, Mr. Kirk. Crests, Plainheads, and Borders were judged by Mr. A. Thomson (Aberdeen), and Mules and British by Mr. Pettigrew.

NEWTOWNARDS (Co. Down)

First annual show of the Newtownards and Dis. C.B.S. held 16th Dec., in the Town Hall, a very suitable place for a cage bird show, being well lighted and free from draughts. The committee are a good company of genuine fanciers, who had everything in apple-pie order. They had in Mr. F. Robinson a splendid leader, who thoroughly understood the arduous duties entrusted to him, and who, by his willingness and the amount of energy displayed, did much to encourage his able body of helpers. The committee were Messrs. Cahoon, Doggart, Montgomery, Morrison, McIlroy, W. Montgomery, McCullagh, McDonald and Copeland (hon. treasurer); President, Mr. D. Finlay. Mr. J. Reid placed the cards, and his awards gave entire satisfaction. Mr. Neill and Mr. Trimble staged as fine Scotch Fancies as we have seen in Ireland. The Nor. classes filled well, and some very choice birds were staged. Yorks. were few, but good. Taking everything into consideration, the show was a great success, and will help to extend the Fancy still further north.

WOOD GREEN F.F.A.

Meeting held Dec. 12th, Mr. C. T. Wilson in chair. Forty members present. Table show cage birds, judge Mr. J. Robson. After judging, Mr. Robson gave a critique on the exhibits, and answered questions. Eight new members were elected. The Assist. Sec. reported progress in regard to our efforts for a combined show of North London fur and feather societies. Two delegates were elected for same.—T. Callegari, Assist. Sec.

WARRINGTON AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting and dinner held Nov. 30th, Mr. W. Weston in chair. Present: Messrs. Knowles, Weston, Wilkinson, Hardy, Harper, Barnett, Pitchford, and Nelson. The dinner did not prove the success it ought, several failing to attend after promising. Officers for coming year elected: Sir Gilbert Greenall, Bart., has kindly consented to become President; Mr. Weston, chairman; Mr. Hardy, vice-chair; Mr. Nelson, sec. and treas.; Mr. Harper, assist. sec. Decided, to hold a members' show on New Year's Day, with Mr. Metcalfe (Liverpool) as judge. Mr. H. Warburton (Ellesmere Road) was elected. Members' prize money was paid.—G. M. Nelson, Sec.

METROPOLITAN C.B.A.

Very good meeting held 16th Dec., when cups and trophies (won outright last year) were presented by Mr. Martin to the winners, namely, Messrs. Moore, MacMillan and Hall, cups: Mrs. Denham and Thynne rose bowl and case of silver spoons respectively. The runners-up also received medals. Agreed, that the pair show be held January 21st, at 7 o'clock, to be preceded by the annual meeting at 6 o'clock. Mr. Robson will be asked to judge and give a lecture. Also agreed, that we hold two young bird shows, as last year, the first to take place on the third Saturday in June (Mr. Robson to be asked to judge). The second and annual show dates left for further consideration. Two new members were nominated, viz., Mr. and Mrs. Vinall.—J. W. Burgess, Assist. Sec.

CUMNOCK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Committee meeting held Dec. 16th, Co-op. Hall, Auchinleck. Mr. Kinnear, president, in chair. All members were present, which speaks well for them. Report given of late show and the year's transactions. The accounts gave every satisfaction. Sec. also read a very interesting statement of the year's workings. The late show was a greater success than the previous one, it being in its second year. The Scotch Fancies topped the list with the biggest increase of 26. We have to congratulate the members on turning out as they did to make it the success it was. We are left with a good substantial balance to carry forward to next year. Next general meeting fixed for Feb. 10th, so I hope to see by that time a few more new members. Very important business will be transacted.—Joseph Nutt, Sec.

PARTICK AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

Social evening, held in Mr. Anderson's Room, 427, Dumbarton Road, to present trophies and medals to winners. Mr. R. T. Anderson (president) presiding over a good turn out. Mr. Anderson called upon Mr. J. McMillan to accept the large cup and gold medal for best young bird; Mr. McMillan suitably replied. Mr. MacRobbie was then asked to accept the small cup for 2nd best bird, also silver rosebowl for most point in Yorks., with three nominated birds. The following gentlemen favoured us with songs:—Messrs. Rice, Maxwell, Sinclair, Park, Henderson, Fairweather, Boag, Priest, Walker, and Sellars. A most enjoyable evening terminated with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne." As our next meeting starts a new session, the secretary would be pleased to hear of fanciers wishing to join. Next meeting, second Friday in January.—W. Priest, Sec.

LEITH O.S.

Annual meeting, held in Liberal Club, Hope Street, 9th December. President, Mr. J. Lumsden, in chair. The balance sheet was read, showing an income of £38 4s. 3½d., and an expenditure of £25 16s. 10d., leaving a sum of £12 7s. 1½d., to be divided among the successful prize winners, working out at 5s. per class. The report was considered very satisfactory, and the show was voted the best in the history of the society. Election of officer-bearers:—President, Mr. J. Lumsden; vice-president, Mr. J. Baxter; secretary, Mr. G. Brown; committee, Messrs. D. Brown, J. Hendry, J. Milne, and W. Purvis; auditors, Messrs. J. Messer and A. W. Watson. The society is open to a radius of 12 miles, and any fanciers desirous of joining can get all information from the secretary, whose address is 89, Henderson Street, Leith.—Geo. Brown, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

General meeting held Dec. 14th, Wentworth Cafe, Pinstone Street, when a great amount of business was gone through, Mr. A. Bradshaw in chair. A very pleasing incident took place, in the election of Mr. J. C. Barnes as an Hon. Vice-President. A vote of thanks was accorded our old friend, Mr. T. Dawn, for his kind wishes and very generous special. Arising out of our open show were several votes of thanks to the members and friends who worked so hard to make it such a success. Important alterations to rules were made, viz., that partners be allowed to show their birds jointly and not divide them as previously; also that the four highest birds of any exhibitor count for the cups, providing he has paid his extra 1s. for the cup entries; in the event of a tie the best team of birds to win; also that any number of ticks, no larger than sixpence, be allowed to constitute a ticked bird; further, that all birds belong to the exhibitor 14 days before showing, instead of 28 days. Other business re annual members' show to be held in the Montgomery Hall, December 28th, was dealt with. The election of stewards, doorkeeper, etc., was done at once. The election of officers was then proceeded with. Messrs. Thorpe and Tomlinson were elected scrutineers. Following are those elected: President, Mr. F. Jones; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. J. Thorpe and T. Hemming; Treasurer, Mr. W. Oxley; Secretary, Mr. A. Hobson; Assist Sec., J. Woolhouse; Auditors, Messrs. J. G. Cowley and J. Thorpe; Committee, Messrs. W. H. Champion, W. T. Furnies, W. Kelley, C. W. Hobson, J. G. Cowley, G. Drabble, T. Tow, C. Tomlinson, P. Walsh, J. Memmott, J. Bennett, and A. Lawton. A table show of matched pairs has been arranged for January meeting; one class each Yorks and Nor.; fixed prize money and no entry fee, 2s. 6d. special for best novice pair. All members joining same night are eligible to show. Messrs. J. Hartley and L. Marcroft were elected new members. Will all members who have ticket money for open show kindly bring it in as early as possible. Winning numbers of gift birds not yet claimed, are 335, 906, 384, 848, 873.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN AND DIS. F. AND F.C.B.S.

Meeting held Dec. 16th, and still we are going strong, enrolling 15 new members, making in all 40 on the books. One of our members, Mr. E. Gaffarey, has secured a cup, kindly given by the firm by whom he is employed. Peg away fanciers, it gives pleasure to the secretary to see such grit. Will everyone note that our next meeting on December 23rd, 7.30, Smith Arms, Catchgat, is for arranging members' show and consideration of rules. All cordially invited, subs. 2s. 6d.—J. W. Christon, Hon. Sec.

EDINBURGH N.C. AND M.B.S.

Annual meeting, held Dec. 7th, in Rooms, 142, High Street, Mr. J. Cooper, president, in the chair. Agreed, to abolish special prize fund, and that annual subs. for next year be fixed at 6s., also that judges for annual show be elected at March meeting. There will be no meeting in January. Following were elected office bearers: Hon. President, Councillor W. B. Lindsay; president, Mr. J. B. Cooper; vice-president, Mr. W. Dods; secretary and treasurer, Mr. J. Welsh, 67, Raeburn Place; committee, Messrs. J. Holmes, W. R. Finnie, and W. Watson; auditors, Messrs. J. Berry and R. Renton.—J. Finnie, Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Meeting held Arcade Hotel, 13th December, Mr. J. Simpson presiding. A discussion took place regarding several items at late show. Decided unanimously that the reading in the schedule was correct; consequently Mr. J. C. Murray was declared the winner of members' medal. Secretary gave reports re model cards and the West of Fife C.B. League, stating that our society had a total of 141 points. Secretary gave notice of motion to alter rule regarding membership. As our next meeting will be the annual general meeting, it was decided that all members who were not present at this meeting be summoned, meeting to be held 27th Dec.—R. Reid, Sec.

HYDE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First annual dinner held Wellington Hotel, Dec. 16th, when 23 sat down to an excellent spread provided by our amiable host, an ex-fancier, Mr. T. White. I am sorry Mr. J. Raynes (Manchester), judge at our annual show, was unable to be with us owing to sickness again. After the inner man had been amply provided for, a capital programme was provided. Mr. T. Rowbotham (President) in chair, kept the concert going in a very able manner. The artistes were: Messrs. Earside (pianoforte), Wrigley, sen. Vickers (recitations), Oldham, Hall, Brown, and J. Vickers (songs). Mr. Shaw moved a vote of thanks to the host and hostess, and Mr. Barraclough moved a vote of thanks to the artistes for their splendid services, Messrs. Oldham, Vickers, and Wrigley suitably responding. Mr. Fildes moved that we have a similar dinner party next year.—T. Allsop, Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting held Sydenham Hotel, Dec. 13th, a splendid attendance. Eleven new members were elected, including our first lady member. The Chairman said he hoped other ladies would join. The total number of members on the books was now no less than 50. Mr. Murray has secured 6 more specials, making a total of 26 for competition at the Boxing Day show. The great interest shown in the allotting of same speaks well for the show. All the agenda was got through in a businesslike way, leaving the members time to fill up entry forms and have a chat. Catalogues of names and classes will be on sale, and as the room will not be at liberty until Boxing Day morning, the stewards look like having to be at the rooms at 7 a.m. (So don't overdo it on Christmas Day, stewards!) to fix staging. The British classes will probably be the best in the show. All please attend the opening at 2 p.m., as photos are to be taken.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

YORK C.B.S.

Annual meeting, held Dec. 11th, All Saints' Room; an excellent attendance. Balance sheet and yearly report passed as read, and I am pleased to report the society is in a sound financial position, thanks to the hard work done during the year by the chairman, the secretary, and most of the members. Four new members were elected, and we trust more will soon join; all fanciers are given a hearty welcome. I am sorry to say Mr. Thompson has resigned his secretaryship, a position he has filled to everyone's satisfaction, and with all credit to himself. Following officials elected:—Chairman, Mr. V. Zimmerman; secretary, Mr. H. Sayles; treasurer, Mr. S. Campling; assistant sec., Mr. F. Sissons. Members should congratulate themselves on again obtaining the services of Messrs. Zimmerman, Sissons, and Campling, who have held similar positions during the last year, and are a hard-working trio. A members' show will be held on Boxing Day, when Mr. H. Todd (Darlington) will judge. We are hoping all members will send a good number of exhibits, as there are 3 specials to compete for. All birds to be staged not later than 2.30 p.m.—H. Sayles, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

A large and enthusiastic crowd of members attended at headquarters, December 5th, for election of officials for 1912, the chairman (Mr. T. Dawn) presiding. The balance sheet of our all-England show, disclosed a balance on the right side of £12 10s., not a bad result for a first venture. Arrangements were made for a dinner and concert, to which all members and friends are cordially invited; date, January 9th. Other arrangements were left in the hands of a sub-committee. Decided to present the five handsome silver cups, won by members at the concert. A few minor items were dealt with, after which we laid the foundation for the success of 1912 by the election of officers. The chairman (Mr. T. Dawn) was unanimously re-elected, everyone admitting he was the right man in the right place; vice-chairman (Mr. J. A. T. Woodall) re-elected; hon. sec, our tried and true friend, Tom Bishop; that old and enthusiastic fancier, Mr. R. Colton, was re-elected assistant sec.; Mr. J. W. Drabble was re-elected treasurer; auditors, Messrs. Cowley and Furness; Press correspondent, Mr. J. Woodall; Messrs. H. Bishop, G. Fletcher, J. Memmott, J. Mace, H. Wilkinson, Dr. Craig, C. Marshall, T. Ridals, G. Moore, E. E. Smith, T. Turner, J. Milne, P. Walk. We next considered date for all-England show. Decided, to hold same on Nov. 1st and 2nd, 1912; and we should take it as a favour if secretaries in fixing their show date will bear this one in mind. Following judges already engaged: Mr. Mundell (Bradford) for Yorks., and Mr. C. Houlton (St. Helens) for British and Foreign. We enrolled a good number of new members, including Mr. Rout (late chairman of East Ham). I might point out that the secretaries of the four other societies are now members of ours.—J. A. T. Woodall, Press Correspondent.

WIDNES AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Dec. 14, headquarters, Grosvenor Hotel, Mr. R. Jenkins in chair. Business: Arranging for members' show in Conservative Hall on Boxing Day, Dec. 26th. Several new members joined, and the show promises to be a success.—S. Andrews, Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting held Dec. 18. Final arrangements made for club show and cup competition at Newcastle-under-Lyme, Boxing Day. All members present expressed their intention of making it a success if possible, and a show worth anyone's while to visit. This is the first show of cage birds held in the ancient town for many years, and if the show is patronised satisfactorily it will not be the last. We had the pleasure of electing two new members—Mr. S. Pygott (Shelton), and Mr. J. Peake (Stoke). Next meeting falling on New Year's day, same was altered to January 8th. As this will be the annual meeting for election of officers and revision of rules, I trust every member will make a special effort to be present.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

KENT COUNTY C.B.A.

Meeting held at Barton Road Boys' School, Dover, on Dec. 13, when Messrs. Birch and Oshorne were appointed auditors. Points gained in bowl competition were checked, and resulted as follows:—Norwich E. Meades 21, H. E. Taylor 20, F. J. Wickham 16; Yorks.: C. Lockett 15, E. C. Rayner 10, W. J. Abbot 1; Borders: Rev. H. A. Soames 16, Mrs. Aitkin 5, Mrs. Soames 1; Lizards: E. J. Wood 13, Rev. H. A. Soames 5; Mules: Mrs. Soames 12, Rev. H. A. Soames 1; British: F. J. Wickham 24, W. A. Austen 20, L. A. Brett 20. Secretary instructed to have cups handed over to engraver (since done), and forward them to successful competitors on completion. Letter read from Mr. F. J. Wickham expressing regret that the competition was confined to two shows only. This was endorsed by the members present, and a special effort will be made to extend the patronage of the association next year. Books are now in the auditors' hands, and it is hoped to have balance sheets ready by next meeting.—A. Hendry, Hon. Sec.

Singing Contests.

LONDON, N.

The final race takes place at 1.30, Dec. 24, with Linnets, at "The Swan," Caledonian Road. On Saturday night (Dec. 23) there are special prizes for Chaffinches (open to all comers). Timekeeper, Tuggy Wilson.—F. Westmore.

BLACKBURN.

Blackburn quality Linnet S.A. (club headquarters, Old Red Lion, Snig Brook). Meeting held Dec. 16. Mr. D. Bentley (Great Harwood) was present, and all members were pleased to see him in the pink of condition. We elected Mr. R. Hayhurst as Sec. Meetings every Saturday, 8, for contributions and receiving new members.—Rd. Hayhurst, Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Linnet contest for time singing held Royal George, Brightside Lane, Dec. 17th, when 13 birds entered. 1, Thompson, 53; 2, Thompson, 23; 3, Brown, 22; 4, Harry, 21; 5, Hill, 10. Contest 1 o'clock December 24th, when Chris Hill will add 4s. to entry fees. First pair of birds up at 1.15. Also Chris Hill will give a silver cup to be sung for; open to all England; sing to take place Jan., 1912.—C. Hill.

CASTLEFORD.

Linnet contest held Dec. 16, George and Dragon Hotel, Bride Street, before a good company. 1, 3, J. Brindley; 2, A. Towler. Also Dec. 17, we had a sing. There were not many birds, but we had a good sing. 1, 2, 3, J. Brindley. Open sing, Boxing Day, time singing 5 secs a break. I hope to see some Linnet fanciers from other clubs.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Week-end Linnet contest held Prince Albert Inn, December 17th, when 15 birds entered, judged to the satisfaction of all present. Judges, Messrs. P. Madden and A. Lorriman. 1, J. Chippendale; 2, T. Chippendale; 3, A. Bryan. Also a Canary contest in the evening, when 11 birds entered. Judges, Messrs. W. Sisson and C. Biss. 1, J. Chippendale; 2 and 3, divided between E. Wood and A. Binns.—E. Wood, Sec.

LEIGH.

A delegates' meeting will be held at Globe Inn, Bradshawgate, Dec. 23rd, 6 o'clock prompt. Will all delegates kindly have their business drawn up so that we may be able to get it over early? Will all members kindly note that Dec. 23rd will be the last night to pay up all contributions for the Globe Inn Linnet Club previous to first club contest on Jan. 1, 1912? Don't forget the open-to-all-England contest at the Globe Inn, on Dec. 23rd, at 2 prompt. Ent. fee reduced to 6d. on this occasion.—J. M. Allister, Sec.

TYLDESLEY.

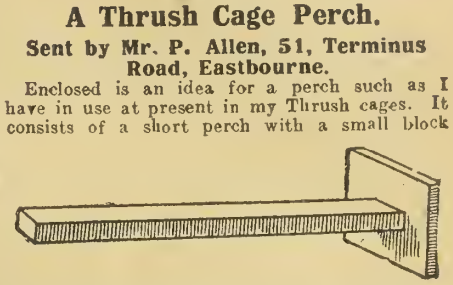
Open-to-all-England contest for time and quality, at Union Arms, Tyldesley, when 48 birds faced the judges. Although gaslight had to be used, there was some very good singing. Result.—Quality: 1, Cain; 2, J. W. Jones; 3, Howcroft; 4, W. H. Topping. Time: 1, P. Owen; 2, W. McFarlin; 3, Lloyd; 4, J. McAllister. Judges for quality: Messrs. T. Statham and W. McFarlin. Time: Messrs. S. Fearnley and J. Everett. Minute man, Mr. T. Hurst; bird man, Mr. J. Halliwell. Our landlord thanks all competitors and fanciers for the great contest.—J. Harrison, Sec.

LEEDS.

Quality singing contest for Linnets held Skinner's Arms, Buslingthorpe, Dec. 16th, when 19 birds sang. 1, Ward; 2, J. Chippindale; 3, Sellars. Also Dec. 17th, when 24 birds sang. 1, Sellars; 2, J. Chippindale; 3, Ward. Contest for Canaries December 24th, at 7.30; also on Boxing Day night, when a fine copper kettle will be given; open to all. Linnet contest, Christmas Day, Dec. 25 (for this year's pink birds only). First 2 birds to be on nail at 1 o'clock prompt.—C. Clayton, Hon. Sec.

Linnet contests for quality held Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon Street, December 16th, when 19 birds sang. 1, H. Wigfield, 2, Butler; 3, shared between Butler and Johnson. Judges, Messrs. T. C. Summers, S. Hardcastle, and Walt. Naylor. Also Dec. 17th, when 29 birds faced the judges, Messrs. Jennings and Naylor. Extraordinarily good singing was heard. 1, Blands; 2, Stead; 3, Butler; 4, Wigfield. Also a German Roller contest, Dec. 17th, when 19 birds faced the judges, Messrs. Hardcastle and Jennings. 1, Sinnister; 2, Wrox; 3, Walt. Naylor. A Canary contest Dec. 24th, 8 p.m. Open to all comers.—T. C. Summers, Hon. Sec.

SALFORD.



Open contest for time held Boat House Hotel, Oldfield Road, Dec. 16th, when 14 birds entered. The surprise was in the winner. 1, J. Caswell; 2, J. Green; 3, B. Wharton. Timekeepers, Messrs. W. Cain, Wharton, and H. Cootes; birdkeeper, Mr. J. Pearson. After the contest a very pleasant evening was spent, and all present were well entertained with songs, etc., by Messrs. Wilson, Beates, Caswell, Miss Cootes, and Mr. Haigh, of Leeds, and we certainly had one of our best concerts. On Dec. 24th we are holding a Canary contest at 8 prompt. Messrs. Green and Wharton will again represent the club at Leigh on the 23rd, and any other members going are advised to get there early for the drawing of the birds. The club match (special) is fixed for Jan 6th, 1912.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

Illustrated Ideas

No. 557.
A Thrush Cage Perch.

Sent by Mr. P. Allen, 51, Terminus Road, Eastbourne.

Enclosed is an idea for a perch such as I have in use at present in my Thrush cages. It consists of a short perch with a small block of wood nailed or screwed to the end. The perch is passed through a small hole in the back of cage. If made to fit, this perch is quite secure and is easily removed for cleaning.—P. Allen.

No. 558.
A Useful Seed Bin.

Sent by Mr. F. G. Hamilton, 14, Havelock Street, Dowanhill, Glasgow.

On pages 23-24 of his excellent book on "Canary-breeding," Mr. Claude St. John mentions a seed bin as being a necessary requisite of the bird-room. I enclose a sketch of an easily made article which I have proved to serve the purpose of holding seed very well. Simply, it is a long narrow box, divided—in my own case—into eight compartments. It can, of course, be divided into the number of spaces to suit the particular individual. The tops are made to slide out and in in grooves, and for this purpose a small brass knob is fastened on each lid. The lid of each compartment is labelled with the name of the particular seed which the compartment contains. The bin may be completely made of wood, or the front of each compartment may be made of glass. This latter way is, perhaps, more satisfactory, as one can see, at a glance, when a single compartment needs replenishing.—F. G. Hamilton.

The Young Naturalist.

*A Sensible Thrush.

A friend of my father went on his holidays for ten weeks, and left father a Thrush of his to keep for him. On his return he took it away in a paper bag. But when he got home he found the bag bottomless, and there was no bird. Within an hour, however, the bird had returned to its right home about a mile away and hopped in at the back door no worse for its adventure.—Sent by Gladys Gray (aged 12 years), 12, Orchard Street, York.

A Funny Parrot.

I know a funny Parrot who, when the breakfast bell rings, will push open the door of her cage with her bill, fly down to the breakfast table, take her own chair (which she always knows), and wait till the family assembles. If they do not gather as quickly as she thinks they ought to she will call out: "Hurry up, folks, hurry up!" and at the same time she will hop over to the oatmeal dish and attempt to lift the lid. After finishing her breakfast she flies back to her cage.—Sent by Frances Ashton (aged 12 years), 36, Cobourg Road, Old Kent Road, S.E.

*Sparrows Feed Blind Bird.

For several days four or five Sparrows visited a certain place near a gentleman's window. They always brought food for another little fellow, who never tried to fly from the spot. The visiting Sparrows never came empty-billed. They would drop tiny morsels of food near the little Sparrow. When it began to eat the crumbs the others set up a chirping, and then flew away. After watching this for a few days the gentleman went on the roof and approached the lonely bird. It did not flutter away, and made no resistance when he picked it up. The bird was blind.—Sent by Florence Shinn (aged 13), 33, Edward Road, Bedford.

Under the White Rose.

THE talk of the week in Bradford and district has, of course, been the great success achieved by the first open show on national lines; and the fanciers hope it will be an annual affair. It will doubtless prove an impetus to the Fancy in the district, and will help to place it on a higher plane than it has occupied before. Next week it may be possible to state, or at least to give some idea of, the amount that is likely to be handed over to the Cinderella Fund.

THE next item that will claim the attention of fanciers who serve on the various committees is the annual prize distribution that usually takes place in March. The first meeting in connection with same is during this week, when the points requiring early consideration will be brought forward.

QUEENSBURY had a nice little show on Saturday last; the officials were all smiles. Last year they had to get their hands down to a big extent, but this year ends will not be far from meeting, which for a late show is satisfactory to all concerned.

BOXING DAY is by most societies considered a good day on which to hold a members' show, and as a rule such is well patronised; and as no open show is usually held on this day it comes in useful as a finish to the year's shows for specials, and as a happy hunting ground for budding exhibitors it has no equal. Not forgetting also the budding judges who officiate at these shows.

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

By W. E. TESCHEMAKER, B.A.

A "lonely bird" and a bird with a marvellous voice.

The Lapland Bunting being, perhaps, the rarest of our regular autumn visitors, a recent advertisement in our columns announcing that the advertiser had "plenty in stock" caused the writer to address a letter of enquiry to Mr. R. Cubitt. In response to this enquiry Mr. Cubitt not only wrote an interesting letter, but also very kindly sent some of the Buntings for our inspection, so that there should be no possible doubt as to the identity of the latter. It appears that Mr. Cubitt (who, by the way, has had 25 years' experience in trapping) saw several of these rare Buntings in the early autumn, but did not succeed in catching one till the 3rd October, when a single specimen pitched in the clap-nets and was caged and subsequently used as a call-bird. Between the above date and the 29th October no less than twenty-two were caught—9 cocks and 13 hens, three at one pull of the nets and two at another, the rest being singles. I believe the above to be probably a record for, though Lapland Buntings, like the Bloaters, mostly come from Great Yarmouth, it is a rare event away to some further point, accompanying us till they thought danger to their nests was past. Before we left (July 16th) family parties were on the wing preparing for migration. The nests were chiefly placed in fissures formed by rain and frost in the edges of the bluff, above the sea and water courses."

A Voice that makes You Jump.

One of the writer's earliest impressions of the Zoo. is of two beautiful white birds, larger than a Missel-Thrush, which lived in the Parrot-house, and which every now and then would throw back their heads and utter a metallic note of such tremendous volume that it made the roof ring and the casual visitor fairly jump. These were the Naked-throated Bell-Bird, known to science by a name "fearfully and wonderfully made," which will not be mentioned here because we are approaching the festive season, and it might depress our readers' spirits. From that date to this importations of Bell-Birds have been few and far between. Quite lately, however, almost a dozen arrived in one consignment, with a corresponding slump in prices, as may be gathered from the fact that a well-known London dealer some years since is said to have received no less than £16 for two adult specimens, whereas some of the last consignment were sold at a figure which would bring them well within the reach of most aviculturists.

A very cursory inspection of the stout legs and feet and wide, flattened beak of this species will convince us that it is no relation of the Thrushes; it is, in fact, a Chatterer. Briefly, they are a group of beautiful South American birds, mostly fruit-eaters, among which are numbered the Umbrella-bird and the wonderful Cock-of-the-Rock, lately admired at the Zoo.

In this last consignment there were two distinct types of plumage, one having the back dark olive-green, the crown black and the breast feathers with narrow buff central stripes, which corresponds well with the description of the adult female; the other having the back of a much lighter green, and some of the breast feathers nearly all buff—presumably young males.

What would the Neighbours Say?

These Bell-Birds are said to have been brought over on boiled rice and fruit, but they are certainly not hearty eaters. In the "Arabian Nights" there is a story of a bride who refused to partake of any other food than rice and this she insisted on conveying to her lips with a bodkin, grain by grain. Naturally this irritated her lord and master. I forget whether the lady died by the bow-string or was chucked into the sea in a sack, but at all events it was by one of those quaint Oriental methods which went a long way towards solving the matrimonal problem, but which, in a finicking and ridiculously sentimental age, have fallen into desuetude. The lingering way in which they get through a breakfast of rice, grain by grain, reminds one irresistibly of that unfortunate lady. It is singular also that, though partly insectivorous, they are not to be tempted either by the elusive gentle, the lustrous cockroach, or even by the delectable mealworm. Altogether my impression is that Bell-Birds would not as a rule be an easy species to cater for. Add to this that they certainly could not be recommended to the owner of a suburban aviary. What would the neighbours say to a bird whose cheerful notes can actually (according to Waterton) be heard at a distance of three miles, and an early riser at that? Why, the "frolic wind" would waft the notes from balmy Balham as far as tranquil Tooting, and even at mirthful Mitcham they would hear those strange bell-like tones and wonder whether the local Fire-brigade had been called out.

A STOCK OR FLIGHT CAGE FOR BRITISH BIRDS.

The type advocated by Mr. A. J. A. Marley in his recently-published lecture. A: are the doors, the two at the right-hand end being arranged to facilitate the catching of the birds. B: Perches, three inches long, fixed along the back. C: Sliding doors in the partitions. D: The food vessels. E: Tray to catch water splashed out by the birds when bathing. F: Large zinc bath. The size is: length 8ft., height 2ft., width 18 inches. The left-hand and middle compartments are each 3ft. long, and the one at the right 2ft. long. Very useful at the moulting season.

In the Courts.

A CONVICTION AT BRISTOL.

Three professional bird-catchers, named Samuel Griffiths, Henry Griffiths, and Henry Parsons, were on December 13, at Bristol, summoned under the Wild Birds' Protection Act for being in possession of freshly-caught birds within the city.

P.C. Budd said Griffiths and Parsons were carrying a bird-catcher's outfit. Witness stopped them, asking what they had there. They replied: "Linnets," and witness warned them that those birds were protected within the city of Bristol. They said they did not think so. Witness took them to the station, and there he found eleven wild Linnets and a Cirl Bunting. Griffiths had six decoy birds and a long cage for the wild ones, at the back of which was a secret compartment containing trapping paraphernalia. Parsons had fifty-four Linnets, one Chaffinch, and one Lark. These were all liberated.

The Defence.

Parsons, in the witness-box, said the decoy birds he had were some of them quite old—one Linnet nine years. On the day in question he had been to New Passage to catch the birds, this being perfectly lawful in the county. For many years he had been out birdcatching, and he was reputedly skilful in their care. It needed judicious feeding and much kindness to keep them. In winter the decoy birds were given rum and water to keep out the cold. Witness was a wire-worker by trade, but when he was out of employment he did bird-catching, as he had a wife and nine children to keep.

Mr. Pomeroy pointed out that had the men killed the birds before they brought them into the city there would have been no offence, since it was not either forbidden to take or kill them in Gloucestershire. He submitted that they behaved with the most humane feelings towards the birds, and were men who had been doing all they could to earn an honest living. It was only a technical offence they had committed.

In reply to the bench, the Clerk said they had the power to impose a penalty of £1 in respect of each bird.

The bench said there must be a conviction, and defendants would be fined each 5s. and costs. The catching outfit would be confiscated, but defendants would be allowed the decoy birds and their cages.

indeed for more than two or three to be taken at one time.

Gatke, speaking from an experience of half-a-century of Heligoland (which is right in the track of this species as it crosses the North Sea) says: "It occurs here only in solitary instances"; and Howard Saunders states that "only about forty specimens had been taken in England up to 1892." That year, however, and 1893 witnessed a remarkable immigration of this species and the present season promises to be no less remarkable. Evidently these Buntings have already found their way as far south as Central Europe, for they were quoted in the recent price-list of a well-known Continental dealer, though that they are there looked upon as a rarity may be inferred from the fact that they were listed at 8s. (cocks), whereas Meadow Buntings, which always command a goood price on account of their popularity with the exhibitor, were listed at only 5s. (cocks).

At Home in Artic Regions.

Mr. Cubitt rightly describes this as a "lonely bird," and it breeds in some of the most lonely places on the face of the earth. Here is a pen-picture of one of its nesting haunts—Kolguev Island in the Barents Sea, a little south of Novaya Zemlya (from Pearson's "Beyond Petsora Eastward.") "Scenery, there is none; its shores are sad-coloured bluffs of glacial mud; its rivers shallow streams, impassable by even the smallest ship's boat, and flowing through great marshy hollows full of more mud; its mountains a few sand-hills; its forests dwarf sallow-scrub some two feet in height; its plains destitute of anything we call grass and covered with many—coloured lichens and sedges. . . . The valley is chiefly marsh with numbers of lakes and tarns scattered over its surface. . . . The bluffs forming the valley's sides rise fifty or sixty feet above the sea-level. . . . The edges of these bluffs are the driest part of the country we saw and have a slight coating of peat, on which grows a variety of beautiful lichens. . . . Young Lapland Buntings, Snow Buntings, and Dunlins were on the wing. These two Buntings were the commonest birds on Kolguev. The males of the former species . . . . sat on some mound until we approached, evidently giving the alarm note to the females, and then flitted

Important Notice

"CAGE BIRDS" ANNUAL FOR 1912

Is now in preparation, and with the co-operation of our readers will be a greater success than any of its predecessors. Any suggestions for new features, or for the improvement of present features will be welcomed by us.

TO SECRETARIES OF SOCIETIES.

Free.—The Insertion of full particulars (name of society, latest list of officials, place, time, and nights of meetings) in the Alphabetical List of Cage-bird Clubs. Remember, no society should be missing, for this feature of "Cage Birds Annual" is the only Directory of its kind in existence. Secretaries who have moved please let us know your new address.

TO JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

Free.—The insertion of their names and addresses, and the varieties in which they specialise, in the List of Judges. The only condition is that judges must have officiated at one of the recognised shows. Remember, this list is the only complete one published, and is universally consulted by show officials.

TO OUR TRADING FRIENDS.

Free.—The insertion of names, addresses, and specialities in the Bird Trade Directory. No matter what you sell, so long as it has to do with the Fancy, particulars are inserted free. This directory is of exceptional value and fanciers the world over find it indispensable. For one shilling names can be thrown up in heavy black type.

Breeders, Exhibitors, Judges, and Advertisers generally: Do you want something that will bring you orders throughout next year for a "mere song"? If so, just try an advertisement in the "Annual."

AT A VERY LOW COST IT WILL BRING YOU BUSINESS FOR A WHOLE YEAR.

Full particulars as to rates can be had of THE MANAGER, "CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL," 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Wild-Bird Life.

Wood Pigeons and Stock Doves.

Up to the present we have had no real wintry weather, and of late years we seldom get any very severe until well in the New Year. But if we have not had frost and snow we have certainly had a vast amount of rain. Town dwellers can hardly realise the soaked and sodden state of the country roads and lands after several days of wet. But the rain does not appear to affect wild life in the same way as the frost and snow. With the wet we generally get open weather, so that food of all kinds is still plentiful, and many of the grubs and insects have not yet retired from the surface. The larger insectivorous birds are plump and healthy, with glossy coats and bright alert ways; the smaller birds, such as Robins, Hedge Sparrows and Wrens are still living in luxury and care nothing for the scraps from the table, or the waste from the poultry pens.

One of the sights of the open country where trees are plentiful is the huge flock of Woodpigeons. Although deadly raids were made against them last season, they are still very numerous, and are undoubtedly destructive to certain crops. Of the four varieties of Pigeons or Doves inhabiting Great Britain there is only one that is at all familiar to the general public. This is the big bold bird known by many names, such as the Blue-rock, the Cushat, the Quest, the Woodpigeon, and the Ring Dove, the two latter names being the most familiar, especially with country people. This variety is undoubtedly the most numerous of the Doves, and is the one most dreaded by farmers and gardeners. Although the Ring-Doves rear only two young ones as a brood, they breed practically from early spring until late autumn; consequently they increase rapidly unless their numbers are kept within reasonable limits by periodical raids. The Stock Doves frequently mix with the Woodpigeons, but although they are similar in shape and colour, they are a bit smaller, and are without the white ring round the neck, from which the Ring Dove gets its name. During the breeding season the Stock Doves frequent the more open country and prefer holes to nest in, either in branches or trunks of trees. The hole need not be a great height from the ground; in fact, the writer of these notes has found more than one nest in a hole on the hill side, partly obscured by bracken and long grass; evidently originally scratched out by a rabbit.

Twitterings.

Allow me to congratulate the Frome Show officials on their promptness in the matter of the payment of prize money, which I received four days after the show, writes Mr. T. H. Parr (Bristol).

We have received the cash for three of our "Nutshell Booklets" from Mr. A. Wileman, who, however, omitted to enclose his address. We shall be pleased to forward the booklets on receipt of the address.

I must thank you for the excellent report of our show which you had in your last issue, writes Mr. Thos. Mayne, sec. of the Larne and Dist. C.B.A. Winners who attended the show were paid their prize money on the Friday evening.

I am sorry to say I have not received one entry in the cage bird section, and only six in all other sections, writes Mr. D. Consitt, sec. of the Market Weighton F.S. This is only just before entries close. I do trust fanciers and exhibitors will help us; otherwise the show will have to be cancelled.

OBITUARY.

Mr. J. CLEMENTS (Portsmouth).

With sincerest regret the members of the Portsmouth C.B.S., write Messrs. King and Joiner, the secs., report the loss of one of Portsmouth's oldest fanciers in the person of Mr. John Clements, who passed away on Dec. 18 after a long and painful illness. We feel sure that all who read this announcement will unite with Portsmouth fanciers in deepest sympathy with Mrs. Clements and family in their sad bereavement. Mr. Clements was a bird breeder and exhibitor for many years past. His particular fancies were Crests and Crest-Breds, and of late Yorkshires. Many a topper of both varieties has graced the bench from his stock. With abundance of experience, he was always ready to inform any who sought his advice, and those who followed his instructions have at all times been amply rewarded.

Visitors to Ipswich this holiday should not fail to see the largest Cage Bird Show ever held in this town at the Social Settlement Hall on December 26th and 27th. Admission 3d.—(Advt.).

Bury and District C.B.S. Draw.—Winning numbers.—1st, 923; 2nd, 3231; 3rd, 1936; 4th, 2385; 5th, 110; 6th, 4932; 7th, 4779; 8th, 1263; 9th, 3865, 10th, 1089; 11th, 441; 12th, 3789; 13th, 1135; 14th, 521; 15th, 613.—H. Jameson, secretary and treasurer.—(Advt.)

We have been notified of the following corrections to show reports:—Runcorn, in the A.O.V. and in the open novice hen Norwich, Mr. Bibby (not Bitty); Newport (Mon.), 1st prize in Norwich non-fed class, Mr. D. Jeremy (not Young); Edinburgh C.B.S., 1st and B.F.C.C. medal, yellow hen, Mr. Smart (not Napier); Bradford National, additions to list of special winners, diploma for best Yorks in the Union Novice classes, Mr. A. Gledhill, also spl for best Yorks in all novice classes; championship diploma for best Nor., Messrs. D. Mallinson and Son.

Greetings to . . . . Our Readers.

It is very gratifying to us once again to have the pleasant duty of acknowledging the many seasonable tokens of good-will which have reached us from readers. We desire gratefully to reciprocate the friendly greetings they convey, and to wish bird-lovers the world over

The Merriest of Christmasses - - and a - - Happy and Prosperous New Year.

TWITTERINGS—Continued.

Two errors occur in our catalogue, writes Mr. J. Bryson, sec. of Aberdeen O.S. Class 8, No. 7, Mr. Geo. Steven, is first; and Class 55, No. 2, Mr. F. Garden, is first.

We shall hold our annual show (postponed from Nov. 30) on Jan. 25, when Mr. C. A. House will judge, writes Mr. S. Priddle, sec. of the Yeovil and Dis. F. and F.S. Schedules will be sent to those who have previously applied for same.

We have received a postal order for 4s. 6d., being deposit money and fee for Linnets from a Nottingham dealer, but no name and address were enclosed. If the sender will communicate these to us we shall be able to forward a receipt.

Allow me to thank Mr. Hill and the Bradford National Show Committee for the care and treatment my birds got while at the show, writes Mr. P. Mulcahy (Dublin). My birds were back in good time, and are none the worse for the long journey.

A splendid lecture on the management of cage birds was given at our last meeting by Mr. T. Harrison, writes Mr. A. Royle, sec. of the Sale and Dis. C.B.S. There was not a very good attendance, but those who were present had a very enjoyable evening.

In last week's issue of your admirable paper, writes Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, my name is mentioned in connection with the Anfield, Everton, and Dist. C.B.S., which is very misleading, as I was not at the show in question, although I received an invitation from the hon. sec.

We have engaged the services of Mr. D. A. S. Longden (Swansea) to judge our members' show, to be held at the Assembly Rooms, Pentre, on Dec. 27, writes Mr. George Lingard, sec., Pentre and Dis. C.B.S. Fanciers around this district should not miss this treat.

Metropolitan bird-lovers should not overlook the L.P.O.S. dinner, held at the Holborn Restaurant, in the Duke's Room, on Wednesday, Jan. 3. Chairman, G. Crabb, Esq.; covers at 7.15 p.m. Particulars can be obtained of Mr. Law, the hon. sec., Brimley House, Woodhouse Road, Finchley, N.

I should like to offer a word of praise to the new management of Yarm Show, writes Mr. Geo. Cotton (Northallerton). Mr. Wilson, the secretary, and his helpers seem determined to put the society upon a sound basis. The show was only held on Saturday last, and upon opening my letters this morning (Monday) I found my prize money and my money for claimed birds to hand. I hope this treatment will induce exhibitors to give this show their support.

Our next show will be held on Oct. 9-10, 1912, writes Mr. A. L. Priest, sec. of the Clapham and Dis. C.B.A. Judges, Messrs. J. Robson, H. Norman, and H. J. Fulljames, have been appointed. We are this time having four judges instead of three, as hitherto. We have again secured the same hall for three days, so that the staging, etc., can all be erected before the birds arrive. A slight mistake on my part appears in our syllabus for the coming year. I have the open show down for Oct. 16 and 17; this should be as above.

Having received several letters of enquiry from fanciers who are desirous of exhibiting at both the Scottish National Show on Dec. 30 and Jan. 1, and Glasgow and District on Jan. 2 and 3, writes Mr. Fred Bowman, sec., Glasgow and Dist. C.B.A., we have appointed a special committee, who will give particular attention to all birds arriving from the Scottish National Show. To enable these birds to compete with an equal chance of success, their cages will be cleaned and the birds fed and watered immediately on arrival. Fanciers desiring to work these two great shows should instruct the secretaries at the time of making their entries, and so avoid any possibility of their exhibits going wrong.

URGENT NOTICE.

Owing to the Christmas Holidays this year extending over the Monday and Tuesday (December 25th and 26th), advertisers, correspondents, and our readers generally should note that any communications for insertion in our issue dated December 30th MUST BE POSTED TO-DAY. "CAGE BIRDS" will be on sale as usual on the Friday (December 29th)

Owing to an oversight the particulars of the patronage of the E. and W. Border Fancy C.C. have been missed from our schedule, writes Mr. W. H. Wright, sec., Carlisle C.B.S. Will the members of that club please note that all the medals and specials are competed for at our show, Dec. 30 and Jan. 1?

At Beamish Show, writes Mr. W. Elliott (Stanley), I was not 2nd and v.h.c. in the Greenfinch class—only v.h.c.; further, the Siskin I showed was natural colour, and the Redpoll a Mealy. My 2nd prize Bramblefinch is reported as "a trifle out of condition," but he was, and is now, in the pink of condition.

Barnsley and Dis. C.B.S. are holding their annual members' show on Boxing Day, Dec. 26, at Headquarters, Clarence Hotel, writes Mr. F. C. Sims, the sec. Ten classes are provided, and the judges are Messrs. J. Eyre (Yorks and Brit.) and E. Scargill (Nor.). The show will be open to the public at one o'clock.

Entries for our Boxing Day Show closed with 190 entries, not so bad for a young and growing society, writes Mr. J. Sheppard, sec. of the South Birmingham O.S. We shall be able to give fanciers who visit us a rare treat, as several leading fanciers and breeders have entered some warm birds, which have not yet been out. Our President, Dr. Taylor, will open the show at 2 p.m., and it should prove a grand attraction.

We have engaged that well known and competent judge, Mr. J. Thornton (Liscard) to judge our show on Boxing Day, to be held in the Mission Hall, Burleigh Road, South Walton, Brick Road, writes Mr. R. B. Wright, sec. of the Anfield, Everton, and Dist. C.B.S. The show opens at three o'clock. Classes are provided for Borders, and we hope for a good response. Schedules may be had from me at 9, Canon Road, Cabbage Hill, Anfield.

Is Being Prepared.

WATCH OUR FUTURE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Will fanciers kindly note that we are having an open class for Linnets at our next table show about the second week in Jan., writes Mr. J. Hall, hon. sec. of the Eccles C.B.S.

All prize money in connection with our show was paid within twelve hours of our closing, writes Mr. T. Wilson, sec. of the Yarm, Eaglescliffe, and Dis. C.B.S. Our show was a great success.

The members of the Spennymoor and Dist. C.B.S., writes Mr. C. Ramsey, the hon. sec., are sorry to inform exhibitors and fanciers that their annual show, to be held on Jan. 1, 1912, is cancelled owing to poor support.

That all printers are not bird fanciers is plain, as one of ours last week made Mr. W. Rudd, of Norwich, say (according to his advertisement) that all grey Parrots have grey tails. This, of course, should have been "red" tails.

I am daily receiving letters of congratulation from satisfied exhibitors at our show, writes Mr. T. P. Baxter, sec. of the Runcorn C.B.S. Allow me also to thank CAGE BIRDS for the good report given. Your reporter omitted to state that Mr. T. L. Glover gave of his best to make the show a success.

A Flying Start.

As a novice, in my first season of showing Yorkshire Canaries, writes Mr. E. Reynolds (Seven Kings), I have been successful in breeding a few winners, viz.: Ilford F.S., 1st and special best bird; Wimbledon, 3rd; E. Ham annual, challenge cup, gold medal, and spl for best Yorks; Ilford annual, one 2nd, three 3rds and two spls, one vhc, two hc, out of seven entries. Some of these were bred from birds I purchased of Mr. Skinner. I also attribute my success to the very valuable information given week by week in CAGE BIRDS, and to Mr. Battye's book on the Yorkshire Canary. I wish your paper every success in the future.

Wild Parrots for Berlin.

In addition to the Sparrows, Pigeons, and other birds usually seen in a great city, Berlin has now a colony of wild Parrots, says "The Standard." Since the early months of the year a small group of common grey Parrots have been observed in the streets of the extreme northern quarter of the town, where there is still a good deal of unbuilt land and garden vegetation, and have been a constant source of interest to observant Nature-lovers. The little strangers, to the number of twelve or sixteen, who are supposed to have escaped from the cages of some bird fancier, have successfully foraged for themselves all through the summer months, and if they succeed in overcoming the rigours of the approaching winter and reach the brooding season next spring, there seems some possibility that Berlin will in a year or two have a regular population of wild Parrots in its streets.

We have received many congratulatory letters concerning the satisfactory management of Kingswood (Bristol) Show, write Messrs. Morris and Barnett, the secs., and the prompt payment of prize-money. We enclose one from Mr. Bousfield, of Bournemouth, who, you will see, promises us more entries next year. We thank the writers of these kind letters.

Changes of Address.

Secretaries and others are asked kindly to note the following changes of address:—Mr. S. Priddle (sec. of the Yeovil and Dis. F. and F.S.), from Alexandra Road to 70, St. Michael's Road, Yeovil; and Mr. A. Wake (sec. of the Middlesbrough and Tees Side C.B.S.), from Aske Road to 122, Princes Road, Middlesbrough.

The Silent Owl.

The downy plumage of the Owl, with the edges of the quill feathers softened so as to look quite ragged, gives the bird the power of noiseless flight as it skims over the meadows to pick up mice and shrews for its quaint nestlings. It seldom leaves fur for feather, but a bird is no doubt occasionally taken.

A Close Struggle at Bradford.

Now that the shows where the patronage of the Bradford County British Bird and Mule Club is given are drawing to a close, writes Mr. J. Lane, the hon. sec., it will be interesting for exhibitors to note how they stand in competition for the Club's specials. There will be a struggle by the look of things for the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd places in the open competition. The following are the names and points:—Inman, 99; Martin and Archer, 98; Lee, 65; Stamp, 54; B. H. Wilson, 29; Bousfield, 27; Amateur Section—Lane, 116; Isherwood, 21; Bishop, 18. The above are the leading names and points only after Bradford City Show; a full list will be inserted in CAGE BIRDS. If any points are found wrong, please communicate with the secretary.

Seasonable Gifts.

What better Christmas present or New Year gift could you give to a bird-loving friend than either of the handsomely bound standard works, "Our Canaries" (post free, 15s.), and "Cage Bird Hybrids" (post free, 7s. 6d.); or select your friend any of CAGE BIRDS books, particulars of which will be found on our back page and on page 554 this week. Then there are CAGE BIRDS watches (note page 550), the best on the market at the price, high-class in appearance, and guaranteed splendid timekeepers, sure to be appreciated. Or maybe you have friends just setting up housekeeping; what better than our framed coloured plates to meet this case? All particulars can be obtained on application to the Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

N.P.C. Smoking Concert.

The committee of the Norwich Plainhead Club have decided to hold a smoking concert, writes Mr. G. W. F. Lythgoe, for members and friends at some place in Manchester on Saturday, Jan. 20, to be preceded by a dinner or tea, the cost of the latter not to exceed 2s. Messrs. Cook, J. E. Davies, Raynes, and myself have been appointed a sub-committee to arrange same. It will save considerable trouble if members would kindly intimate as early as possible to any of us their willingness to attend and how many tickets they would take. The committee would also be glad to hear from any member willing to assist at the concert, either by giving items personally or bringing friends willing to entertain the members. It is intended to present the N.P.C. Cup and other special prizes and medals won during the season at this meeting, and these will be exhibited at the members' show of the Manchester Society, which is being held at the Chorlton Town Hall on the same day.

ANOTHER SENSATION FOR HYBRID BREEDERS.

A Said-to-be Chaffinch-Bullfinch.

We have enclosed you description of our very rare young hybrid, viz., Chaffinch-Bullfinch, write Messrs. Tams and Son (Longton). It was exhibited for the first time at Llanrwst Show, held Dec. 14. General appearance: Shape, Bullfinch predominates; colour, Chaffinch predominates; wings, Bullfinch shape, with two white winged bars like a Chaffinch. White bars on shoulders are nicely intermixed with white and dark feather; tail, long, Chaffinch shape; dark feathers, except outer ones, which are white edged; legs, Chaffinch shape, long and white; breast, up to the beak, lovely pinkish red and brown combined; eye, large and full, set in light brown ceres; beak, yellowish in colour, very large, would look long if not so broad; head, beautiful pink, with light speckled purple-bluish cap. There is no black on the head or under the beak or eyes like a Bullfinch; but there are two nice dark pencilled marks over the eyes like a Chaffinch. A very lively bird and a cock. As it has moulted in an aviary, so is a little unsteady at present, and as a 1911 bird, it is a most striking one, its colours are so rich. [We hope this bird may prove to be of the Chaffinch-Bullfinch parentage; it would be exceptionally interesting. We note that our reporter at Llanrwst Show (where it got 3rd prize) describes it as the "Mealy Redpoll-Bullfinch" cross. We should be pleased to receive particulars as to its breeding.—Editor.]

"Cage Birds" Literary Competition.

Cash for Your Experiences.

In response to numerous requests, we have decided to hold another Literary Competition, and to offer £10 10s. in prizes. So, readers, utilise your leisure moments to put on paper, for the benefit of your fellow bird-keepers, that knowledge of birds and their management which is stored away in your head. Turn your spare moments to profitable account. Remember that all articles published by us will be paid for (note rules), also that photographs and drawings may accompany articles.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on Mating Canaries to Breed Exhibition Specimens. Any variety of Canary may be dealt with (i.e., Norwich, Yorkshire, Crest, Roller, etc., etc.) and the selection of the stock birds and the way to mate them, with a description of the good points to be looked for, and the faults to be avoided, should be fully gone into, and the reasons for the writer's advice should also be stated.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on the Management of Canaries. Competitors may deal with any one variety (such as the Norwich), or more than one variety (such as the Norwich and the Crest together), and questions relating to the general management from either the domestic or exhibition side; or the article may deal with any particular phase of Canary management, such as (1) How to prepare birds for breeding, (2), The procedure during the breeding season, (3) The rearing of young birds, (4) How to moult birds successfully, (5) How to colour-feed, (6) How to train young birds for the show-bench; or any side of Canary management the competitor may choose.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on any topic relating to British Birds. The habits, appearance, breeding, and management, etc., of any one particular species (such as the Goldfinch, Thrush, Skylark, etc.) may be discussed, or they may be dealt with collectively, or in groups, as may suit the desire or knowledge of the essayist.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on the art of Mule or Hybrid Breeding, whether in cage or aviary, and between any species of bird (either British or Foreign).

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on any topic relating to Foreign Birds. The habits, appearance, breeding and management, etc., of any one particular species may be discussed, or they may be dealt with collectively, or in groups, as may suit the essayist.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay written from the aviarist's point of view, embracing the fitting-up and management of a bird-room; or the fitting-up, stocking, and general management of an aviary (outdoor or in) whether of Canaries, British Birds, or Foreign Birds, or a suitable combination.

A beautiful original Painting of birds (framed) Value Four Guineas, will be awarded to the best essay, in the opinion of the judges, out of all the sections.

Closing Date, January 15th, next.

(Read these very carefully.)

Each essay must be clearly written (or typed) on one side only of each sheet of paper used. Violation of this rule may entail disqualification.

The length is left to competitors, but essays should not contain less than 1,000 words, wherever possible.

Faults of spelling and grammar will not be counted against any essay, practical utility, interest, and simplicity being the chief essentials.

No name or address must be put on any essay, but each must be signed with a nom-de-plume, the sender's name and address being attached on a separate sheet of paper.

The Editor's decision will be final. Competent assistance will be called in to aid him in arriving at his decision.

All essays sent in (and any accompanying sketches or photographs) become the property of CAGE BIRDS, but all which are published (over and above the winning essays) will be duly paid for according to their worth to us.

Parrakeets Which Catch the Judge's Eye.

Experiences with the Tiny and Charming Hanging Parrots.

Since so very little has been published concerning the lovely birds. comprising the Genus Loriculus, or Hanging Birds, I am taking the liberty of giving readers of CAGE BIRDS my experience with them. These tiny Parrakeets are characterised by their somewhat slender beaks, the upper mandible of which is long and not much curved. The species of the genus range from India and the Philippines eastward to Duke of York Island and the Papuan sub-region. At one time these birds were supposed to be related to the Lories, but the absence of the brushes to the tongue proves that they are not.

In the wild state these little birds feed upon honey and sugar cane. They nest in holes in trees. A nest found by Mr. Davidson was 20ft. from the ground, and contained three white eggs. Colonel Legge says that these birds are very fond of the juice of the sugar palm, and feed on it to such an extent that they become stupefied and fall easy prey to the natives.

Life in Captivity.

The first mention of a Hanging Parrakeet in Europe seems to date from 1865, when an example of Schlater's Hanging Parrakeet was purchased for the London Zoological Society. Others soon followed, and now at any of our larger shows an example of Loriculus may usually be seen.

In captivity these birds should be kept in a good-sized cage (mine are kept in a Crystal Palace aviary) the top of which should be wired, as these tiny Parrots sleep hanging head downwards from the roof. The cage should be cleaned out frequently.

My specimen has daily for food boiled rice well sweetened, a little canary seed, and about a quarter of a ripe banana. It seems to prefer the fruit, but I have often seen it sucking the sugar from the rice.

The Ceylonese Hanging Parrakeet.

In this bird (L. indicus), the general colour of both sexes is green, paler below than above, the crown, rump, and upper tail-coverts red, lores, cheeks, chin and throat bluish, the nape and mantle washed with orange, inner webs of flights and under surface of tail, blue. The female is smaller than the male. In the young the forehead is greenish grey, shading into orange behind, mantle almost pure green, cheeks without bluish tinge, throat very slightly bluish.

This is the most frequently imported of the Hanging Parrakeets, but nevertheless is rare, price about £1 per pair. In 1910 I obtained a Ceylonese Hanging Parrakeet. He soon became very tame and amusing. I had him for about four months, when he died through catching cold at a show to which I had sent him. This species is also known as the Red-crowned Hanging Parrakeet.

The Blue-Crowned Hanging Parrakeet.

The general colour of this bird (L. galgulus) is green, with a brownish-yellow spot on the back, rump and upper tail-coverts red, a blue spot on the middle of crown, under wing coverts and tail, blue. These lovely little birds are found between Wellesley Province and Singapore. This is a specier tolerably well-known to bird-keepers, and is generally represented at L.C.B.A. and Crystal Palace Shows. The price is about 40s. per pair. I now possess a beautiful adult example of L. galgulus. It is very fond of banana. It rarely comes to the bottom of its cage, but likes to get as high up as it can.

Three other species of Loriculus have been imported, namely, the Vernal Hanging Parrakeet (L. vernalis). The Golden-backed Hanging Parrakeet (L. chrysomitis) and Schlater's Hanging Parrakeet (L. sclateri) but all three are very rare. Dr. Russ had an example of L. vernalis in 1873, while the London Zoological Society have possessed the other two species.

Breeding and Exhibiting.

Only one of the above-named species has been bred in confinement. The Golden-backed Hanging Parrakeet was bred in the London Zoological Gardens in 1871, and one youngster was reared. I have no account of the breeding of either L. indicus or L. galgulus. I mean, if I can get a hen, to have a try with the latter next year.

A good pair of Hanging Parrakeets, especially the Blue-crowned, will generally catch the judge's eye. They should be shown in a cage measuring about 16in. by 8in. by 12in. The wires of the front should be ½-in. apart, while the roof of the cage should be wired to enable the birds to hang.

These tiny birds require a little heat during the winter, as they are rather sensitive to cold.

Dirty Birds Mean Wasted Entry Fees.

By J. TAYLOR (Bankfoot).

A Lecture given before the Bankfoot and District C.B.S.

When a fancier is about to launch out on to the show bench he invariably does so with mixed feelings, and no doubt a great many thoughts pass through his mind, such as, "Are my birds good enough?" "Are they clean?" "Are my show cages clean and tidy?"

I will deal with the first of these questions —"Are my birds good enough?" One never knows whether they are or are not, until he has staged the birds and seen the awards. Champions and novices are alike in this respect, because how many times do we see champions buying a bird, which, no doubt has won many times in the novice section; and when they have staged it in high company it seldom counts! It happens every week. How many times does a novice exhibit at a members' show birds which he has just bought and probably counts with them at the first show, and yet when he shows them at the open exhibition they fail to get a card! My advice to a beginner is, show a few birds at a members' show before exhibiting them at open shows; unless, of course, he happens to have a very deep pocket, and is ready to pay for his birds and his learning.

Where Care is Necessary.

When I am about to enter my birds for the open shows, I generally look round and pick out two or three, never more, on the Monday or Tuesday; these I take into the house to wash. Now this process is where a great deal of care is necessary, as much depends on it, because a badly washed bird, however good its other points may be, will not stand much chance under our present-day judges. You must have cleanliness both in birds and cages, or you might as well keep your money in your pocket, and your birds at home.

Some Good Advice.

My method of washing is as follows: Procure three bowls, and half fill each with hot water; be very careful not to have it too hot, or it will scald the bird and damage the plumage. I always have mine so that I am able to bear my elbow in it; then I think it is right and ready for use. In the third bowl I place a teaspoonful of vinegar to each pint of water. I was told of this last season by a very prominent fancier, because I staged a bird with a little soap left on the neck, and, as you know, this is very easily done. This good fancier gave me the advice, and I have acted on it ever since, and have never been troubled with the soap question since. I may say here that the neck is the only place where a bird cannot preen itself, so that if any soap be left in, it is bound to show until the bird is washed again. I use white curd soap; it is sold in tablets at twopence each. I do not use a shaving brush like most fanciers; I use a baby brush instead. A sponge and some cloths in which to roll the bird up complete my washing outfit.

To commence washing, I take the bird in a sort of crouching position in my left hand, with my thumb under its head, and my little finger on the root of its tail; and with the middle fingers I hold it gently but firmly. I lay its tail on the table, and wash this first. Next I wash the back and flights; then I roll it over on my hand and wash its body, and under its flights. I always finish with the head, and generally do so without the brush, simply using my finger, as I think this is a far better way than using the brush. I next give the bird a thorough swill in No. 2 bowl, and a similar treatment in bowl No. 3 containing the vinegar. Always use plenty of water; it will do the bird no harm. Should you find the bird slipping out of your hand, by all means let it go; you can easily catch a wet bird.

I always take care to have a really good fire; the birds then stand little chance of catching a chill. I generally let my birds remain in the drying cloths about 20 minutes, and then remove them into show cages, where I let them remain for another fifteen minutes. After this I place them on the table, where they remain until thoroughly dry. I always keep them in the house over-night, returning them to their proper quarters the following morning.

Perhaps a word or two on my method of feeding will not be out of place. When my birds drop into the moult, I give them a good deal of Cod Liver Oil food along with their egg-food. I usually mix one egg to a slice of bread about 2in. thick; add a little maw seed; also about a tablespoonful of the Cod Liver Oil; these mix well together. I am a great believer in Cod Liver Oil, because it keeps the birds warm, and their bowels open; it can also be used to advantage during the breeding season.

When my birds return from a show, I always supply them with a little egg food; and instead of giving them water to drink, I fill their glasses with milk that has been previously boiled.

Now I trust that we may have a good discussion, and if I can answer any questions, I shall be only too pleased to do so.

Question: Does the lecturer believe in washing birds in the morning?—I prefer to wash my birds at night.

When does the lecturer prefer returning the birds to their proper cages?—The following morning, as previously stated.

Do you give the birds any extra food after the wash?—I give them a little egg food next morning.

What effect has the vinegar during the wash? —It removes all traces of soap instantly.

Could the lecturer give us a good conditioner?—I usually give birds mixed seed, and if the weather be very cold I add a little extra hemp.

This question led up to a number of remedies being given, such as lettuce seed, isinglass along with egg-food, etc.—F. GELDER.

THE TALKING ROOK AND ITS FAIR MISTRESS.

A Rook that Talks and is a Model of Good Behaviour.

By J C. BRISTOW-NOBLE (Horsham).

The Story of A Little Girl's Interesting Pet.

A little girl—the child of poor parents residing at Horsham in Sussex—is the happy possessor of a strange and most interesting pet, namely, a talking Rook. The bird lives in a small pen in a tiny back garden, and is the admiration and envy of everybody who has seen it, both on account of its conversational powers and its excellent behaviour. Its history is curious and entertaining. Four years ago an elder brother of the little girl picked it up on the road, near a local rookery, when it was little more than a fledgling. The foolish young Rook, disregarding the proverb which tells us that "Discretion is the better part of valour," had fluttered down on to the road from its nest in a tall, over-hanging tree, and was too weak on the wing to fly back.

Rearing Baby "Jack."

The boy carried his prize home, thinking he had caught a Jackdaw, and although his parents saw at once that the bird was the familiar and despised Rook, they allowed it to be kept, and, moreover, advised that it should be christened Jack. The bird was even too much of a baby to feed itself, so, of course, had to be fed. Small pieces of food were dropped into its mouth from the end of a match. But he soon learned to feed himself.

By the autumn the Rook had assumed adult plumage—a mantle of glossy black feathers, with some dark green ones intermingled, which are even more glossy than the sable ones.

It was just about this time that Jack gave its owner a great surprise. Early one morning when some of the family were preparing to go to work and some to school, it was heard to call "Come on, Jim." Jim is the eldest brother of the Rook's little mistress, and Jack was mimicking her. No attempt whatever had been made to teach the bird to talk, for Rooks are generally supposed to be far too stupid to be capable of imitating the human voice; but this, it would now seem, is a fallacy. Moreover, ever since that morning never a day has passed without the Rook speaking. Indeed, it has now a vocabulary of close upon a hundred simple words and phrases.

It will call a neighbour's dog by its name, it will shout "Hallo," "Puss," and "Mater," and say "Good morning," "Good day," "How do you do," and so on. One day a very large grub was dropped into the bird's cage, which for some moments it tried in vain to swallow. Then in the greatest rage it dashed the unfortunate grub to the floor of its cage, and assuming a very hostile attitude invited it to "Come on, come on."

Two Little Weaknesses.

Jack has always been very tame. Although the bird can fly swiftly and strongly and is allowed out of its cage nearly every day, it has never shown signs of being dissatisfied with its home and of wishing to join its fellows in the surrounding rookeries. On the contrary, it seems to love its little pen, and to be as happy as the summer's day is long. But although a well-behaved Rook, it delights in nothing so much as running its little mistress round the garden and pecking her legs, or in chastising all the rats that come near it.

Up to the spring of the year, the bird had been said to be a male. Then, however, it built a nest and laid five eggs, which interesting occurrence settled once and for all Jack's sex!

"Jack eats almost anything," said his little mistress, and is very fond of greenstuff, meat, potatoes, cake and grubs. He hops about while father digs the garden and picks out the insects. We have often seen Jack sop pieces of bread in his bath before eating them, and one of the funniest things is that he does not like worms. Jack eats porridge in winter, and if we give him too much food he buries it in his cage and picks it out again when he is hungry.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us, by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—*All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Sits Huddled Up (J. M.).—If, as you say, the bird is quite free from draughts, you are probably keeping it too near a fire, or hanging over or near a burning light in the evening, which exposes it to extremes of heat and cold. In addition, your feeding is not very suitable. Attend first to the suggested causes, and see that the bird is kept in a comfortable but equable temperature, not necessarily a very warm one, and, of course, free from draughts. Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give just a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and millet. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and in the next week four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day. No, do not hand-wash birds without a real need for it.

Stuck in Moult (Lochty).—In addition to the staple diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake every second day for a week, dusting it lightly each time with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkle it with maw seed. On the alternating days give a pinch of summer rape and a pinch of maw, and add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece, and a few blades of meadow saffron. Keep the bird rather on the warm side, but be cautious about draughts, and allow bird to bathe two or three times a week if he likes in mild weather. At the end of the first week give the bird a hand-wash, using the water rather on the warm side, or if you are not expert at the job get someone who is to do it for you. This should set matters right.

A Great Eater (Perplexed).—Does the bird really eat so much as you suggest? Individuals vary greatly in appetite, as in all else, but it frequently happens during this season that birds will get through an enormous amount of seed, though when the matter is looked into it will be found they remove the husk and drop the kernel on the floor. Sometimes it is due to digestive derangement, but at others is merely a habit to work off spare time. Treat the bird in all respects the same as advised to "J.M." in this issue for a fortnight, and if it has not altered its habits by that time write again referring to this reply, and I will advise you further.

Breeding Queries (Amateur).—I take it you mean breeding in cages. If so, the three cocks would be quite sufficient for five hens if you run the two most vigorous cocks alternately with two hens each, and keep the other mated to one hen. But if you mean to breed with the birds flying loose, three cocks will be quite too many. Use only two of them in that case, and add another hen, making two cocks to six hens. The best staple diet for this season is good sound canary seed only. A pinch of rape may be given separately three times a week, a little mixed seed once a week, and a little egg food or crushed biscuit once a week. A scrap of green food when fit for use may be given twice a week or so, or a morsel of sweet apple or banana as a substitute. For details see "Canary Breeding for Beginners." Some, not all, of the foods you refer to are very good, and useful for winter use, and are used successfully by many fanciers for rearing young. You will be much safer in adhering to orthodoxy. Yes, your room is large enough to make a fair start. The main point, however, is to see that it is properly ventilated, and quite free from cold draughts, damp, and excessive fluctuations. Though you mention no definite size, I should say the Crystal Palace aviary will be quite suitable as a flight for the hens through the winter. There is no necessity to crack hemp seed for adult birds.

Singing and Seeds (A. B. C.).—(1) If your bird begins now to show signs of coming in song it is probably a cock, if that is what you wish to know. Many late-hatched cocks, especially when caged with others, do not do much at singing until the "turn of the year." If caged alone they usually open out soon after the moult is quite finished. The dietary and treatment advised to "J.M." will do much to bring it out. The only alteration you need make is to sprinkle the sponge cake with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure instead of only maw seed. Give it the aperient, and then the tonic medicine the same as advised in that reply. (2) Linseed, niger, and winter rape, or newly harvested rape, are relaxing; gold of pleasure a little less so. All the rest you name, and matured, mellow summr rape, are constipating, more or less.

Outdoor Birdroom (Pippin).—You do not mention the thickness of your walls, nor whether they are single or double. If the former, unless the building is in a nicely sheltered position, you will probably find it subject to extreme fluctuations of temperature. Otherwise, providing you have made adequate arrangements for ventilation during the hot summer months, I see no reason why any of the breeds you mention should not thrive well in it without artificial heat, again providing they have hitherto been accustomed to a normal temperature. These, indeed, are the only class of birds you should start with in such a building. The amount of glass in front will also make the place very variable, and you would do well to provide shutters to cover most of it to suit prevailing conditions during the winter and spring. If you start with quite hardy birds, as suggested above, you may put them in whenever a spell of mild weather occurs, and no heating will be at all necessary, but if the birds have hitherto been kept at a comfortable temperature by heating, you must continue it until spring at least. On the whole you would do better to defer stocking it until the end of March. Do not keep any birds flying loose as well as in cages. The place is too small for this to be a success.

Pestered with Insects (Darby Joe).—If you are correct in saying the insects are on the bird they are probably grey lice, not red mites. The latter, except in an exceptionally severe case, would only be found on the bird at night, and it is the cage, wherein they harbour by day, that needs most attention. For grey lice, a hand wash with a teaspoonful of creolin mixed in each pint of the first and second waters is the best way of dealing with the case, if you are expert at washing. Do not attempt it otherwise. In any case, you must put the bird in a temporary cage and thoroughly overhaul the other one. Clean thoroughly inside and out, probing well any open joint or wire hole, and afterwards wash out the cage well two or three times at intervals of a day or so with a strong solution of Jeyes' or Izal, working it well into the joints with a small brush. After the last dressing run a drop or two of the pure Jeyes' into each open joint or crevice. Then re-distemper and varnish cage, and when quite dry bird may be returned. Whilst in the temporary cage give it a bath daily in which a few drops of quassia extract have been mixed. See that the wall or hook where the cage hangs is quite free from any trace of mites before replacing the cage.

Border Fancy Hen (Serin).—(1) See reply to "J. M." in this issue, and treat the hen the same as advised therein. Do not keep her too near a fire, but select a cosy place—not overheated, nor yet cold—where the temperature is fairly equable day and night. See that it is nice and bright and well aired, but not draughty. (2) The price of birds varies so much that it is not always an easy task to advise one what they ought to give for a pair, and you do not say whether you want to breed exhibition specimens or not. You could get a decent pair of Norwich for 10s. 6d. or 12s. 6d., quite good enough to "learn on," or a more typical pair of stock birds, which may breed very nice quality youngsters, with an occasional prospective winner at small shows, for 20s. or 30s. For really high-class stock of good winning strains you may have to pay anything from 20s. per bird upwards.

Hens Dying, Etc. (J. B.).—(1) Sorry I cannot dogmatise as to the cause of the deaths after this lapse of time, and from the meagre particulars you give. The only way to have got a really satisfactory solution was to send a body to our post-mortem examiner, who would have been able to clear up the matter. In all probability it was due to bacillary infection, and you would be well advised to get Dr. Clarke's brochure on septic fever, which our manager would send you, post free, for 7d., and read up the subject before another season arrives. Also get the Nutshell booklet on disinfection, and disinfect all your cages and appliances thoroughly as a precautionary measure before starting next season. Prevention is the only remedy (if I may be excused the "bull") for this complaint. (2) German hens and Roller hens are, to all intents and purposes, one and the same breed, so there is nothing to choose between them as feeders for fancy breeds. (3) Lizards are, as a rule, very good feeders, and require no assistance in rearing their young. Exceptions are met with, of course, just the same as in any other good feeding breed. It is often more a question of strain than breed in all cases.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Another Lump (E. E. Griffith).—Follow the advice given "A. J. Bowen" in this issue. It applies exactly to the case of your Blackbird. I hope it may prove curable.

Trouble with the Blaze (A. H. J.).—I do not exactly know what you mean by the blaze being "all mottled." Do you mean mottled with white feathers? If so, nothing can be done except to hope that it may moult out a normal colour next year. Or do you mean that part of the feathers forming the blaze have moulted and part have not? Kindly make the matter clear.

A Goldfinch Fallacy (J. G. Quill).—Whoever told you that only white-legged Goldfinches would breed Mules was talking nonsense. I have bred Mules from scores of black-legged (i.e., not house-moulted) Goldies. And so have lots of other fanciers. Will you kindly explain what you mean by "different classes of Finches," as I cannot comprehend your second question. The Linnet, for instance, is a Finch, and a Linnet Mule could thus be accurately described as a "Finch Mule." But when fanciers speak of "Finch Mules," they always have in their mind Mules bred from a Goldfinch and a Canary.

Two Common Crosses (H. Jones).—I find it very hard to think that your query is a serious one, and that it is not addressed to me by way of an alleged joke. You ask whether the Goldfinch-Canary and Goldfinch-Greenfinch matings have been successful. These two crosses are just about the commonest we have, specimens being on view at practically every show in the land, as a perusal of the show reports will tell you. A good-sized breeding cage of the ordinary type is suitable for these couples. It is not absolutely essential that the pairs should run together throughout the winter; but it is not at all a bad plan to allow them to do so.

A Swelling, Etc. (A. Forrest).—You are bound to catch the bird to properly treat the swelling you mention. I think that if you paint it lightly over with tincture of iodine twice daily (night and morning), it will quickly disappear. Use a small camel-hair brush and keep the iodine off any other part of the bird—out of its beak and eyes, for instance—only a light smear being necessary. If you want something difficult to get, as you put it, try either Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, or Yellowhammer with your hen Canary. Any Mules from either mating would be very valuable.

Sexing Lesser Redpolls (H. Bartlett).—1. It is exceedingly difficult to accurately sex most house-moulted Lesser Redpolls. A bird excelling in size and colour, and with well-defined (distinct) black pencilling can safely be put down as a cock. In the breeding season the actions of a bird and examination of the vent will infallibly decide its sex. If your bird showed no red on the breast when in field plumage, then quite likely it is a hen. The red (whether of head or breast) is not reproduced after a house moult, though often a kind of golden tint is to be seen.

A Hard Growth (A. J. Bowen).—I cannot explain what has caused the hard growth on the wing-butt, unless the bird has knocked or otherwise injured its wing at some time or other. Try the iodine, as recommended "A. Forrest" in this issue for a time. If this is not successful in removing it, just touch the growth once daily with a stick of caustic, obtainable from any chemist. If the swelling is not a surface excrescence (like a corn, for instance), but is under the skin, then the caustic must on no account be used. If the iodine fails, there is no cure.

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A Trio (Fritz).—1. A cock Linnet is not too old at five years to breed Mules. I am myself successfully using an older bird than this, and he sired some fine birds last season. Everything depends on the bird's vigour and condition. 2. The only Bramblefinch Hybrid at present known is the Bramblefinch-Chaffinch. A fair number have been bred, but a good example is valuable. You could try your cock bird with either a hen Bullie or a hen Canary, if you choose, by way of experiment. 3. Chaffinch-Bramblefinch and Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrids have been produced (only one of the latter; see our last double number), but your Chaffinch could also be tried with a hen Bullie or Canary. By the way, I hear that a reputed Chaffinch-Bullfinch Hybrid is now to be seen. If genuine, it should be a most interesting and handsome bird.

An Aviary (Urmstonian).—I am sorry to have to say it, but I do not like your aviary at all. It is open at front and on both sides, and faces due north; further, it is very small. I do not know if it is in anyway sheltered by adjacent buildings, but even so I am afraid you will find the birds in it stand the cold winds and frosts of winter very badly. So far as I can see, there is no shelter except the little provided by the slope of the roof. It would make a good summer (or fine weather) aviary, but I am dubious as to its usefulness at other periods. Cover the floor very thickly with gritty sand, or sand and fine builder's gravel mixed. You could put in the centre a large dead bough of suitable shape, renewing it when soiled; plenty of perches in the roof and at the back; none near the wires, for fear of cats. It is suitable for about 20 small birds; but less if you want them to breed. If you are going to turn out the Canaries now, see that you obtain birds bred in an outdoor aviary, or you will surely lose them.

Six all at Once (Chaffinch Lover).—1. Everything depends upon the time it takes the birds to settle down to cage life. Some Linnets ("kind" birds) will sing a week or so after being caught. With Chaffinches it is different, as few commence to sing before the "love fever" attacks them in the spring. I have a bird now, however, which is commencing to sing, after being caught about a month. 2. They might, but it is very doubtful if success would result in an ordinary breeding cage. You would have to put the eggs under a hen Canary. 3. A cage such as you describe in question number six would be suitable to try a breeding pair in; a small outdoor aviary would be better. 4. The catching of Chaffinches is too lengthy a topic to deal with in these columns. Articles have appeared in back numbers. Many are caught by "pegging" (involving the use of lime), and others by nets. 5. Some Chaffinches it is impossible to get steady until they are house-moulted. Much depends on the "temper" of the bird; its age, too, is a factor. Kept in a medium-sized box cage (the Finch stock cage pattern) the average Chaffinch soon settles down, especially if the cage is placed in a room wherein people are constantly present. 6. I should try cock Chaffinch and hen Canary, and cock Canary and hen Chaffinch. I think this hybrid will one day be produced; but I consider it a difficult cross, with the chances heavily against the would-be breeder. The cage you describe is an admirable one.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Illness of Budgerigar.

L. Z. S.—The bird should be caged, but once brought indoors, it must be kept there for the winter, as even hardy Budgerigars after a period of warmth cannot be put out again till spring. It appears to have caught a bad chill, and there is evidently some stomach trouble as well—the extreme heat of the summer, followed by the recent changeable wet and cold, has caused many similar mishaps. Give two drops of Dinneford's Magnesia, direct to the beak, daily till full relief is given, and then as required to keep the bowels moving freely without being watery-loose. Dilute a small quantity of oxymel of squills with an equal bulk of water, and give two drops of this daily for a week, and then report progress. If you can catch the bird easily in the aviary, you can treat her there, but if the chill is at all severe, the only safe method is to bring her indoors till spring, and as soon as she has picked up a bit, bring the cock in as well, giving them a roomy cage.

An Ailing Grey Parrot.

Mrs. Carter.—You give me no data, and make it very difficult to assist you—no word as to food or treatment—but as you now have Nutshell Booklet No. 17 you will find correct dietary there. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of water, and let this form the only drinking water till full relief has been given—of course, mixing it fresh daily—as soon as this occurs only give it every fourth day; on the other days put the same quantity of byno-phosphates in the drinking water, and continue this treatment for a month. Note: While giving drugs, use only a glass or china drinker. If any other symptoms for the worse intervene, you had better repeat query, with fullest details, at once. While the bird's appetite is so small, tempt it with a little plain biscuit, moistened with equal parts of the phosphates and chilled water.

Budgerigars and Birds for Show.

Budge.—I should say the bird is merely maturally preening its feathers; still, it's best to make sure. Get a "mist" sprayer and spray the bird twice weekly with a diluted quassia solution. Of course, if you wish to exhibit this season you must purchase at once, and your best course would be to procure a few birds from the various shows at catalogue rates, but if it is next season you are referring to, your best course is to visit a show or two, notice the birds there, losers as well as winners, and make a list; also study the show reports in our pages. Next spring will be time enough to purchase, remembering that first of all comes condition and steadiness in exhibition birds, and then rarity and beautiful plumage. Of the commoner Finches and Waxbills, the following, if in condition, are likely to fare well: Diamond, Long-tail, Grass, Ruficauda, Gouldian, Crimson, Aurora, Saffron, Red-headed, etc., Finches. Also Grey, St. Helena, Gold-breasted and Orange-cheeked Waxbills, and various cock Weavers and Whydahs. Others more costly are Melba, Quail, and Parrot Finches, Violet-eared Waxbills, etc. If the above are insufficient, repeat query.

Birds for Garden Aviary.

Urmston.—No garden aviary should be without a shelter shed, and I am afraid you will not get much success with yours unless you so provided. If you can add it to the present erection so much the better, if not, then put a wood and glass front to the portion of the aviary to the left of the tower, and also put a portion across from front to back. This partition must have a door in it, with several holes for the birds to get in and out. As the whole of it is a covered roof, it will not be any use planting bushes, etc., but you can have a narrow border against the netting inside, and with an occasional watering you can grow grass, weeds, canary seed, oats, wheat, etc. I do not know your county, so I am in a difficulty here, too, but providing you are not too far north, the following would give you a nice selection: Pairs of Grey and Green Singing Finches, Rufous, and Long-tailed Greenfinches. Common and Green Avadavats, Red-billed and Madagascar Weavers, Grey, Orange-cheek, and Gold-breasted Waxbills, Silverbills, Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, and Bronze Mannikins; this will be as many as you have accommodation for. No. 1 mixture canary and white millet, equal parts; No. 2 Mixture, paddy rice, oats, and hemp, equal parts; No. 3 Mixture, any good wild seed mixture. Also keep a few millet sprays hanging about—greenfood (lettuce, flowering grass, and any non-poisonous weeds), cuttlebone, grit, and a little of some good soft-food mixture, when they are feeding young. Get our Nutshell Booklets dealing with the above—vide advert. in this column.

Foreign Hybrids (Sulphuratus).—The cross is not common, because the species is not often on the market in this country; nevertheless, it has been raised before on one or two occasions—in fact, all the genus Serinus are ready to mate with the Canary when lacking a mate of their own species. For the past two years the St. Helena Seed-eater has crossed with the Canary and young have been successfully reared, while the more common Serins on the English market have done so freely. I should say a successful union of the Sulphury Seed-eater with the Bullfinch is very improbable. Undoubtedly almost any two species of Serinus, if of anything like equal size, would ultimately pair and successfully nest, if isolated from their own species. The Foreign Siskins (Chrysomitris) will also cross with the Canary, and would very probably do so with any Serin or its near allies.

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A Feather Puller (Parrot, Durham).—I cannot give you a reply till you inform me how you have been feeding and treating the bird. In the meantime, put in its drinking water one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia every other day, and spray (use a "mist" sprayer) twice a week with quassia solution.

Cockatoo with Overgrown Beak (B. Magrath).—Your bird's beak will have to be cut back to normal size, and you must get either a vet., local farrier, or dealer to do it for you, preferably the former, as if you attempt it yourself without any previous experience, you may cut back too far and make it bleed; but it will have to be cut back by someone. I take it your bird is a Sulphur-crested Cockatoo. This has a black beak; the Slender-bill Cockatoo has a whitish horn-coloured beak, and the upper mandible of this species is very long, and curves in towards the breast. If your bird has a black beak it must be cut back, but if the beak is almost white, then it is possible it is a Slender-bill, and will not require cutting.

Cape Canary Hybrids (Young Fancier).—The Cape Canary and a Norwich would be almost sure to successfully cross, but on the question of value there are many points to consider. Mules and Hybrids are principally valued for exhibition purposes, and the above would have to go in the foreign class; it could not compete in the ordinary Canary Mule or Hybrid class. As a cage bird and pet it would be very handsome, and also a good songster, and should, at any rate, be equal to the average Goldfinch-Canary Mule in value.

Budgerigars (Ignoramus).—(1) So far as I know neither the violet nor chrysanthemum flowers will harm the Budgies. I have found Budgies rather fond of lettuce; they would also eat canary grass grown in small pots or pans. A little apple, if they will eat it, is also good for them, particularly at this season. (2) Give them a light spraying, say twice a week, with a "mist" sprayer; when wild, Budgerigars tub by rolling in wet (dewy) grass and herbage. (3) Keep up a constant supply. (4) About 8 p.m. would be a good time to cover up, but a portion of the top of cage must be left uncovered for ventilation. Get our Nutshell Booklet, "Budgerigars," 2½ post free, from our Manager.

Treatment for Cardinal (Cardinal).—A seed mixture of canary and white millet, one quart of each, with 1 pint of paddy rice, hemp, and sunflower seeds mixed in equal parts—well mix the whole and keep a supply in cage. Also supply ripe fruit, and about three mealworms per diem, with cuttlebone, greenfood, grit, and water for drinking and bathing. In spring and summer it can have in any quantity such as beetles, smooth caterpillars, earwigs, spiders, etc., as you can capture for it. Its cage should be roomy enough for it to be able to stretch its wings and take reasonable exercise.

Port Lincoln Parrakeet (Anxious).—The staple diet of this species will be canary and white millet seed, but it will be best to keep two hoppers in the cage or aviary, one containing canary and white millet in equal parts, and the other to contain paddy rice, oats, hemp, and sunflower seeds in equal parts, replenishing the respective hoppers as required. It is good practice to add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. Also greenfood, ripe fruit daily (any kind it will take); any nuts it will take are also in order, and it can be given a piece of plain biscuit to nibble at it if it cares for it. Keep a piece of clear cuttlebone in the cage, also drinking water. If it will not take a bath it must be sprayed, once weekly in the winter, every other day during the summer. If it is tame enough let it come out for a fly two or three times a week, the exercise will tend to its general well being.

What Parrot, etc. (T. J.).—I cannot give you a definite answer as to what your bird is, as you give me no idea as to size, etc., or whether tail is long or short, and the incomplete description of the plumage would fit many South American species; however, if your bird is about the size of an Amazon, and a short-tailed species, I think it is a Dufresne's Amazon. Get some powdered areca nut, mix as much as would lie on a sixpence, with a little syrup into three small pellets, and give to the bird. Give this quantity every other day for a week, then let a week go by, then repeat the treatment; after this period report progress. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, grit, cuttlebone, green food, and water.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; fot reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

S. G. Waldram.—Parrakeet died of acute pneumonia. There was no evidence of existing disease.

E. G. Haggis.—Tanager died of advanced tuberculosis. There was tubercular disease of the sternal muscles and sternum (breast bone and attached muscles), and a large mass of tubercle on the upper surface of the right lung. The disease must have been in existence for some time. The lesions I have carefully preserved as of interest; should you wish to view same I shall be pleased to forward for inspection if you will pay postage.

H. Lovibond.—Cerebral apoplexy, rupture of a blood vessel causing pressure. Such cases occur suddenly without any premonition; high condition and degeneration of the arteries are predisposing causes.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Century Food (T. Horton).—This preparation is not now on the market, we are informed.

Method of Fixing Perches (J. Podmore).—We have published this before.

A Glass Sprayer (R. L. Ker).—This idea we have already given.

Some Suggestions (J. H. B.).—We thank you heartily for suggestions you make, but assure you that there are insurmountable difficulties in the way of carrying some of them out, mainly connected with the technical side of printing the paper. It is impossible for us always to go to press with the pages in the same order.

Our Painting Competition (E. Bettison).—The actual front page must be used, not a tracing on to drawing paper, and any difficulties be surmounted by the competitors, who are all "on the level," so to speak, in this matter.

The Coloured Frontispiece (Argumentative).—We are sorry, but really cannot give this information until after the competition closes. Leave your argument until then for settlement.

Cape Canary Mules (A Young Fancier).—We have sent your question along to our foreign bird specialist, Mr. Page. Look in his query columns for an answer.

WAKEFIELD ROLLER.

Ninth annual Roller singing contest of the Wakefield Roller C.C. was held in the Co-operative Hall, on December 8th and 9th. No fewer than 190 birds were benched. The judging was in the capable hands of Messrs. F. A. Lester (London), Mr. Jacquemin (Wolverhampton), and F. Oldroyd (Wakefield). The arrangements, which were admirably carried out, were made by the Sec., Mr. H. Roebuck, assisted by members of the society.

POTTER'S BAR.

Potter's Bar F.S. show held Dec. 7th, in the Village Hall. The annual show is looked upon by the inhabitants of the district as one of the events of the year, and is generally well attended. By a strange irony of fate the committee, with a regularity which does not appear to have been disturbed for some four or five years, anticipate, and are rewarded with, a wet day to crown their preparatory efforts towards success. Dec. 7th this year was no exception to the rule, for rain came in torrents during the early part of the day, and the light was so bad that judging at times became difficult. Notwithstanding, the committee, ably led by the excellent secretary (Mr. W. Haynes), and his assistant (Mr. A. E. Hunt), worked well, and the show was a great success. The Canary classes were well patronised. British birds were very strong, and very meritorious, especially Bullfinches, Goldfinches, and Linnets. In spite of the weather conditions, judging was over early, cards up promptly, and catalogues quickly in readiness; and the public showed their appreciation. Special winners: Messrs. W. Bell, T. Nott, H. W. Tolman, and A. E. Gardner. The awards were made hy Mr. Geo. Gardner, and he appeared to give general satisfaction.

KEITH.

The Longmore Hall was the scene of the annual show of the Keith Association on Dec. 13. The entry in cage birds showed a big increase on previous years, being one of the best exhibitions in the North this season. The entry in British birds was exceptionally good, while the quality was of a very high standard. The birds were well staged in a comfortable hall, being well lighted. The secretary, Mr. C. Rulley, and his energetic committee, are to be complimented on having everything in first-class order. Mr. A. Steele (Aberdeen) judged.

A Cure for Colds and Asthma.

Sir,—There is nothing to beat glycerine for asthma. I have found out by experience that to give a bird two or three drops of glycerine every night by dropping it in the beak and two drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water is to have a sure cure for wheezing and asthma.

Proposed New Cage Bird Society for Radcliffe and District.

Sir,—It has been proposed by a few bird fanciers in Radcliffe and District to form a new society to be called the Radcliffe and District Cage Bird Society. All fanciers who intend to become members, please give in their names to Mr. Burton, Ainsworth Road, Radcliffe.

Southend's Invitation to "Nosey Parker."

Sir,—Will you allow me space to invite your correspondent "Nosey Parker" (who received an editorial answer in the Dec. 9 issue) to lay any complaint he may have re Southend open show before my committee, when it shall have due consideration?

Alleged Borrowed Birds at Wombwell Show.

Sir,—In this week's CAGE BIRDS I notice your editorial answer to a writer who signed himself "Bird Fancier," re borrowed birds at Wombwell. Now, I should like "Bird Fancier" to come to our next meeting, if he has the courage, no matter if he is a member or not, and I guarantee him that the matter shall be threshed out. We had a meeting on Dec. 16, but no member accused anybody either of borrowing or lending birds. I should like you, sir, to publish this letter, in the hope that "B.F." will see it; and attend our next meeting; or, if he knows of a case of lending, etc., put the matter in the hands of the secretary. A new society has plenty to contend with without being brought into disrepute by such actions as "Bird Fancier" in writing to the Press without proof of what he was writing about.

Novices in Manchester Societies.

An Appeal for More Classes.

Sir,—I write on behalf of myself and the numerous novices in the cage bird clubs of Manchester. By giving us your support much may be done to remedy what I think is a real grievance. The classes allowed us at all the shows are few in comparison with those allowed to amateurs and professionals. This, as all will admit, renders competition much keener amongst the very class of beginners (as I may call them) who ought to be helped and encouraged most. We are most of us somewhat ignorant of what success in exhibiting birds implies; our experience in rearing birds is limited, and we have had little time to breed and select good birds. At the same time, we form by far the majority of members in the clubs. Surely, then, the point is obvious—competition ought to be reduced to a minimum by allowing more classes to us. The lower runga of the ladder should be placed nearer together in order to support our feebler steps.

The Wild Life of the Bullfinch.

A Nest in the Bracken.

Sir,—I cannot help writing to express my approval of the letter on the above subject in your last issue. It has, too, always been a marvel to me when reading descriptions of Bullfinches' nests, either in books or articles in papers, how invariably the substances "moss" and "wool" are included as forming part of their composition. As I live in Scotland, I have not seen such a large number of their nests as others of your correspondents, but I have seen quite sufficient to be able to affirm that moss as a nest material is an abomination to the Bullfinch, and that though in a few cases sheeps' wool may be used for want of something better, wool should in no wise be included in the list. In captivity I have had them use sheep's wool, but I do not think they like it, nor would be likely to use it out of doors. They do use horse-hair and also cow-hair, but often these are left out. Of course, I am not prepared to say that there are no exceptions, but the materials in question should never be mentioned in a description of Bullfinches' nests in general. As a matter of fact, I think they are birds which are given to "making exceptions." If I had been told before this last summer that they would build in ordinary bracken on a hillside, I should have doubted it; but I found such a nest this year after a watch of two or three days off and on. The hen was sitting, and I watched the cock bird when he came to feed her, and for a long time I could not understand how he always seemed to disappear when he flew over the crest of the hill (as I thought) until I eventually found that he really went into the bracken, where the nest was placed. It was a very slender one, composed of birch twigs, fibre, and horse-hair, and contained two young ones about two days old and two unfertile eggs. As regards the food of Bullies, I quite agree with what Mr. Cobain says. I am not a believer in the insect and maggot theory as regards the birds. I am of opinion that they eat the bud for the sake of the tender shoot in the centre, but in their defence I should like to say that though I have seen blackcurrant bushes apparently stripped of their buds in the spring, I have never noticed any lack of fruit on the bushes when the season came round. I think Bullfinches are slandered as regards the damage they do.

Mice in the Bird-room.

Sir,—Mr. J. Key should try the following: Get some Stockholm tar and put three or four tablespoonfuls in the holes; then dip some wooden plugs in tar and insert in same. He will not be troubled much after that, as mice and rats hate the smell of it. I have cleared my room in this way, and have not been troubled since for 18 months.

How to Cut Out Cage Doors.

Sir,—To those of your readers who may wish to make their own box cages and have no special apparatus at hand for cutting out doors, etc., the following will prove useful:—Having marked with pencil, on the wood to be used, a square of the dimensions required, take a small saw (tenon, or such like), and, holding it almost flat on the wood, carefully cut a little trench all along the pencil mark. When the trench is sufficiently deep to act as a "guide" for the saw, the "heel" or handle-end of the latter may be raised and the cut deepened until the wood is finally sawn through. I have on several occasions made use of a saw in this way, and each time with perfect success. The enclosed photograph shows one side of a door cut through.

The Aintree, Fazakerley and District F.S.

Sir,—A large and enthusiastic meeting of local fanciers was held on Dec. 11 in the Church Hall, Long Lane, where the above-named society was formed. Judging by the support and speeches of local fanciers, the society has a very bright future before it, and as it is decided to throw open the radius for membership, and fix annual subscription at 2s. 6d., to suit the pockets of the working-man fancier, it is hoped many fanciers will rally round and join at once, and so assist the committee to make this a popular fanciers' society. Date of opening table show, judges, and headquarters will be announced later. In the meantime, send along your names for nomination for membership to the hon. sec.,

Why Do Shows Suffer from Short Entries?

Some Opinions as to Cause and Cure.

Sir,—I think it would be impossible to conduct shows with 1s. entry fees (four for 3s.), as some suggest; but at the same time exhibitors cannot be expected to patronise shows that charge 1s. 6d. entry fees, with 7s. 6d. or 8s. first prize. Some of the reasons for short entries are:—(1) entries closing too early. I consider seven days before the show early enough, and that gives exhibitors a chance to see in what condition their birds are after previous shows; (2) clashing of shows. Some of these could be held later. Why not go on until end of January?; (3) selection of judges. Avoid those who are dealers; (4) secretaries late in despatching labels. Many exhibitors must leave home before post time. Recently, after getting my birds ready, I was informed morning before show that two of the classes were cancelled. Very disappointing—after sending entries seven days before; (5) catalogues not despatched first day of show. My birds often return home before I get my catalogue; also, if exhibitors were sure to get them early there would be more demand for them. They would pay at 4d. each. As it is, a lot get left unsold, and it is not fair to those who advertise in the catalogues; (6) rough treatment of exhibits. I had one returned with cage damaged, evidently through being dropped at show. I keep a list of shows which I have decided not to patronise, whoever the judge may be, and I know I am not alone in this. Many do the same, and it must make a difference.

EXHIBITOR.

Too Many Choose the Same Date.

Sir,—The unfortunate habit of having too many shows on the same day is without doubt the principal cause of short entries. As a remedy for this state of affairs, which affects me considerably, as I am secretary of a Scotch show, I would put forward a proposal which I have been considering for some time, and take advantage of the present discussion to have it thoroughly thrashed out. My suggestion is that a National Association of Cage Bird Societies, and societies which cater for cage birds, be formed for the purpose of arranging dates of shows, etc. The Association would, of course, have to appoint district committees to take in certain adjacent areas, which could be arranged. Societies in any district committee's area are to send to their district secretary not later than a specified date the suggested date for their show, putting forward at the same time any special reasons why the date would be specially beneficial to them, such as local conditions affecting the gate, etc. After all applications were in the committees would meet and proceed to fix the dates of the various shows after giving consideration to any special conditions affecting any society. In this way we would not have the present unfortunate clashing of dates. With fewer shows on the same day, entries would go up, full prize money would be practically a certainty, and in course of time we might even get the length of four entries for 3s., with free carriage thrown in! I agree with "Yellow Green" about the model cards. Our society does not have them. I advertised the fact in your paper, and had a satisfactory entry; but even then we lost a few pounds. I should be glad to hear what your readers have to say to my proposal. I have a few more ideas in hand as to what could be undertaken by such an association. There would have to be an annual subscription, which might be so much per society, or, if representation by delegate was by number of members, then so much for each delegate or number of members. The committees of the "big" shows may kick at my proposal, but even they would benefit by some such arrangement.

A SCOTCH SECRETARY.

[Our correspondent is aware, we presume, that a scheme for the arrangement of show dates was one of the planks in the platform of the Cage Bird Union, but we think we are correct in stating that very great difficulties were experienced in endeavouring to work it. That the avoidance of show fixtures clashing would be a great boon cannot well be questioned.—Editor.]

Reduced Fees Advocated.

Sir,—I see I am going to have a "nice little time." This is exactly what I expected to get, and I do not think I shall be disappointed. Now, Mr. Holt, you first of all state that you do not think I have had much experience. What a wonderful man at finding out things you must be; if you will just take the trouble to refer once more to my letter, I think you will find that I distinctly stated that I was only a novice. Now it appeals to me very strongly (although I may be quite wrong) that you are an exhibitor of Britishers, and the sort of man who voices his own little grievances "behind the scenes," as it were, and that you are blaming various secretaries because they have no classes which exactly suit your own personal case. Poor secretaries! I, on the other hand, am blaming no one, my sole object being to see the show benches fuller, and to give one and all a chance to exhibit. Again, you accuse me of being lacking in enthusiasm. I cannot help but feel that you are either short-sighted or that you have read my letter upside down, because I fail to see what part of my letter drew that remark from you. My sole object, as I stated in my letter, was to champion the cause of the poor working man, and I still maintain that if we are to see our show benches full, we must place the entry fees within the reach of working men. Judging by your suggestion, that 2s. per head is cheap enough, I take it you must be a millionaire, and a man who would debar your poorer fellow creatures from the excitement, etc., of exhibiting—just the opposite of what I should term a true British sportsman. In conclusion, I should like you to thoroughly understand that I am not voicing my own grievances, for were the entrance fees to our shows treble the price they are, I should still remain an exhibitor.

Special No. 10 at the Scottish National Show.

Sir,—Permit me to point out that Special No. 10 at the Scottish National Show was offered and accepted for open competition, and not restricted to members or a district. Evidently the mistake has been made by the printer copying the matter from an old schedule. Competition for this special is therefore open to all my customers. I have written Mr. Watson, the secretary, to this effect by same post.

Do Fanciers Feed Goldfinches Correctly?

Two Advocates of Plain Canary Seed.

Sir,—I have been a reader of your attractive paper since its first issue, and have seen various theories propounded on feeding Goldfinches, and as I have had a good few through my hands (some winners), I think I am in a small way competent to give an opinion. Taking a fresh-caught bird, I put him on crushed hemp, with a supply of Finch mixture which I compound myself, and for about three weeks confine them to this diet exclusively. I then gradually wean them off the mixed seed and crushed hemp and put in their cages a saucer of clear canary seed, and when they become accustomed to that I remove them to the cock Canary flight, which measures about 6ft. by 3ft. by 7ft. high. They are then restricted to plain canary seed except when I give them all (Goldics and Canaries) a treat in the shape of tit-bits—egg and biscuit, or a drawerful of mixed seed. Out of about twenty birds in four years I have only lost one, and that through fright. The perch he was roosting on in the night fell, and I found him in the morning lying beside it on the floor dead, which I think is pretty conclusive that my diagnosis of the cause was right. In my early days of Goldfinch keeping I used to feed on the most stimulating foods I could think of in order to bring them into early condition, but few of their constitutions could stand it. I remember once I had a batch of a dozen carefully hardened off and well tended and fed on a mixture which contained a large proportion of teazle and niger as well as hemp, flax, and maw, and out of the dozen only four survived. I think this is enough to show which is the best feeding plan, and I strongly support your correspondent who first suggested it.

L. A. CANNON.

Sir,—I would like to say, in answer to your correspondent Mr. Gatehill, that I feed my Goldies on canary seed only. Just occasionally I give a little linseed or inga; I think this does the bowels good. I find they are in better health; in fact, I never had them in better condition. The bird I won with at our members' show was a picture with regard to condition, and not a feather out of place. Of course, I am speaking now of treatment after the moult. During the moult I put them in a large flight with plenty of fresh water, green food, and a good assortment of wild seeds. Hemp seed I rarely give, and then only one or two at a time with my fingers to make them "toe the mark," as I think hemp darkens the colours and takes away the brightness so popular in our British beauties. I have a cock Brown Linnet three times house-moulted, which will not touch any seed but canary seed, not even crushed sunflower, and it has sung hard all through the moult.

Show Abandoned—Joint Secretary Appointed.

Sir,—Will members kindly note that owing to the poor response to the circular re members' show (only 36 having replied), the committee have decided to abandon such show for the present season. Also that Mr. F. Cunliffe, 19, Lark Street, Burnley, has been appointed joint secretary with myself, and that in future all communications should be addressed to him at that address. I should be much obliged if those members who have not as yet paid their subscriptions for this season would kindly forward same to Mr. Cunliffe at once, and not wait for a private reminder, as these reminders cause the secretary a deal of work and the Club considerable expense.

A New Society for Winsford and District.

Sir,—A meeting of cage bird fanciers was held on Friday, Dec. 15, to discuss the formation of a new cage bird society for the Winsford district, a society no doubt that has been a long-felt want amongst Winsford fanciers. Fanciers present: Messrs. W. A. Bennett, T. Perry, J. Taylor, J. Davies, E. Weedall, A. Weedall, J. Spilsbury, W. Billington, J. Tomkinson, and S. S. Brooks. A proposition was moved that we form a society to be called the Winsford and District Cage Bird Society; this was carried unanimously. Mr. W. A. Bennett was elected to the chair, the duties of which he carried out in a most able and satisfactory manner. Mr. T. Perry was elected treasurer, and Mr. S. S. Brooks secretary. All members present elected on committee. It was also carried that members pay an annual subscription of 2s. 6d., and that fanciers within a seven-mile radius be eligible to join subject to the approval of the committee. Now, you Winsford and district fanciers, put your shoulders to the wheel and help to make this our new venture, a great success. A vote of thanks to the chair concluded a most enjoyable meeting.

A Cutting Machine.

Sir,—A fancier asks where he can obtain a cutter to stamp out a particular design for a ticket. My friend Mr. W. Hallett, of 27, Newington Butts, London, S.E., is one of the very few people who carry on the business of cutter makers. The cutters that are supplied are, of course, only shaped knives, pressure having to be applied to force them through whatever it is required to cut. He would no doubt quote a price or give any information that may be required. Should like to acknowledge the help I have received in my first year in the Fancy from CAGE BIRDS and "Cage Birds Annual."

H. A. FORDHAM.

The Judging of the Scotch Fancy Canary.

Sir,—Without particularising any bird, I wish to call attention to the unsatisfactory judging we have been treated to in 1911. The best did not win. It was painful to visit an exhibition and to handle the birds and see the injustice which prevailed. New judges were introduced, and they should be pardoned for misplacements in the order of merit, but when we find the meritorious not succeeding under the care of our experienced judges there is something wrong which calls for a remedy, and which should be put right before another show season comes round. The best and most reliable judges of our Scotch Fancy Canaries are never named in the nomination of judges. Wake up, fanciers, and put the judging on a right footing.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

Back to the Old Home.

Sir,—I had a fancier here recently to see my birds. He was quite pleased, and said how nice they all looked. I may say they have plenty of room. Before he left I made him a present of one of my birds (a Goldfinch). He went home about 10 a.m., delighted with same (a distance of half a mile). Later in the day (2 p.m.) I went around my aviary to see how things were, when I was a little surprised to see a bird trying to get inside. I shut all the other birds in the sleeping compartment and opened the aviary door, then came away, leaving the bird to do as it liked. On returning in ten minutes' time the bird was inside eating the seeds, and on catching it I found it to be the one I had given to my visitor in the morning. I have written this in the hope that it will convince "Faddist" that in some cases confinement to some birds is better than freedom.

The Mishap at Stoke-on-Trent Show.

Sir,—After carefully reading Mr. Pitchford's letter in your last issue, I feel it my duty to explain to the show committee my absence, which no doubt by now they have had quite enough of. I do not wish to say anything to cause further correspondence or grievance, as I would rather make friends than enemies. The cause of my silence was Mr. Pitchford's remarks that he could not accept the trap accident tale without further proof; for that reason I did not feel anxious to make any further statement until it could be accepted. I am pleased to see that Mr. Pitchford is satisfied that Miss Bibby's letter was correct and that I was thrown out of the trap. Miss Bibby thanks Mr. Pitchford and accepts his apology. Mr Pitchford mentions that I would be there on Friday. I must admit that I told Miss Bibby to say that I would be with you on Friday. In the state I was in at the time I did not think of looking for the date, but thought it was on Friday. Had the accident not happened, I should have seen the date in the shop next morning, 15th, which would have reminded me of my engagement for the 16th. I have no further explanation to give but that it was a pure oversight through the accident. I now ask the show committee to accept this statement; I can assure them that no one regrets the mishap as much as I do, both for myself and the Stoke committee. No one would have had more pleasure in coming to their native place than I should in coming to mine, and my absence from Stoke has broken my record of twenty-one years' judging and having never been absent from one engagement. I have no doubt that it did cause the society a great deal of anxiety to be placed in such a position over their first venture, and my sincere wish for the society is that it may prosper and have another record entry next show. I ask the Stoke committee to accept my deepest regret. I thank Mr. Pitchford for his remarks as to my abilities as judge, and at the same time I do not think I have lost the confidence of many fanciers, as I have received a good few enquiries as to my recovery from friends belonging to the Fancy. Then, again, I do not think there would have been much difference in the judging. I know Mr. Bates and Mr. Tams quite well, and I think they are quite able to place the cards. I hope the explanation I have offered to the committee will be accepted by Mr. Robinson, and wish him better luck next time. Mr. England, I am pleased to see, has found that my birds were absent from Preston, and has apologised for his mistake, which is accepted. Mr. Leeming, as secretary of the show, was quite justified in taking the matter up.

A. WELLINGS.

A Plea for Natural Colour Classes.

Sir,—Messrs. Moore and Wiggins want to do away with colour-feeding. They have no facts to give us, but want other fanciers to fight their case. Mr. Moore writes that fanciers who colour-feed are "imbeciles"; I think it is just the reverse, judging by his statement respecting it making the birds "constitutionally weak," and having to use other hens to feed. I will draw his attention to the show report the other week where it was stated that Mr. Davies' noted yellow variegated Norwich was looking well but a little too fat. And that is after the many times this bird has been washed and the many railway journeys it has made, and, above all, after being made "constitutionally weak" by colour feeding! My advice to Mr. Moore is this: if he has anything good to teach us, let us have it with all speed; if not, let him be silent. Mr. Wiggins' letter reads that he has been in the money, but cannot get first because he does not injure his birds' constitutions by colour feeding! It is most absurd to say that colour feeding injures the birds and at the same time gives them their depth of chest, quality of feather, pose, etc. Mr. Wiggins would have us believe that only colour-feed wins! I advise him to get societies to make classes for the "pretty and robust" kind, and to fill them, and then he and others will have more classes put on.

DICKEY DENT.

Sir,—I am very pleased with Mr. H. Moore's letter on the above subject. It is an eye-opener for those who, like myself, do not believe in dosing a bird for eight or ten weeks before and during the moult, as I find that if you want birds to eat the colour food you must take the seed away from them and pine them before they will eat it. Do those who practice that call themselves lovers of birds, fanciers, etc., because I, and several I know, do not. When the subject is mentioned to them they reply, "You must colour-feed, or a judge will not look at your bird." That is very true, and I do not believe they would colour-feed if they were not forced to if they want to win. That is one side of the question. Does it improve the appearance of the birds? I saw Golden Spangled Lizards years ago. Now you see red ones and red Cinnamons instead of yellow, and red in place of yellow Yorkshires and Norwich. The "red-hotter" they are, the better the judge will like them. Committees do right to schedule non-fed classes (nat. col.), as it is against nature to force the birds to eat the colour food mixture with which they have to be dosed annually. I hope to see the opinions of some of the old fanciers who, like myself, believe in breeding for colour in the bird-room, not buying it at a shop. I have taken CAGE BIRDS since it started; it is all right.

J. CROWSON.

The Alleged Stained Mule at Grantham Show.

Sir,—I was somewhat surprised to see the letters re above in your issue of the 16th inst., after what actually transpired in the presence of the committee during the judging at the show. These gentlemen saw me remove the stain, not dirt, from the bird's head. Perhaps they may have something to say on the matter.

W. VARDY.

Sir,—Owing to our secretary having to be away during part of the day, I undertook the secretarial duties in his absence, and was in charge during the whole time judging was going on. When the Mule or Hybrid class came up to be judged, my attention was called to this particular bird, which Mr. Vardy had in his hand. I, along with four other stewards, saw him, with a handkerchief moistened with the mouth, remove colour from the bird's face, which left a distinct stain upon the handkerchief. I can assure Mr. Lidgett it was not a matter of "thinking so" on the judge's part. If he had seen the result of the test, as I did, he must have been equally convinced that colour was removed, and I think Mr. Vardy was perfectly justified in taking the action he did. I do not wish to cast any slur upon the character of Mr. Mackender; he may have recently purchased the bird, and was innocent of the fact that it was faked.

FRED LOCKTON.

[While not wishing to enter into the merits or demerits of the case, we must point out that a disqualification is not necessarily a reflection upon the character of the exhibitor. There may be some quite reasonable explanation of the circumstance that leads to a judge feeling it his duty to disqualify a bird, of which the exhibitor himself is quite unaware.—Editor.]

Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. CUSHNY, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham.

"Cage Birds" Free to Patrons.

Beginning with the New Year, all PATRONS of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, that is, all ladies and gentlemen subscribing an annual sum of not less than one guinea, will have forwarded them each week, post free, a copy of CAGE BIRDS, our official organ, so that they may, without the trouble of purchasing a weekly copy, be kept informed of the doings and progress of the LEAGUE.

Another Hon. Sec.

This week a connecting link between England and Scotland is formed by an addition as under to our list of Hon. Secs.

Berwick-on-Tweed: Mr. A. Hay, 30, Main Rd., Tweedmouth, Berwick-on-Tweed.

Cage Birds Annual and our List of Honorary Secretaries.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL is now getting advanced in its course of preparation, and will contain a complete list of Hon. Secs. to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I shall be pleased to receive the names of members who are willing to act in the capacity of Hon. Sec. for towns and districts, where we are not already represented. These names should be forwarded to me without delay, as the Annual is nearly ready for publication.

Reduced Admission to the Shows.

The shows yet to be held to which CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members will be admitted at reduced charges are as follows. The reductions will be as announced in previous issues, namely, fourpence in the shilling.

Dec. 22—23 PETERHEAD.
Dec. 23. HEBDEN BRIDGE.
Dec. 25 ELGIN, Academy Hall.
Dec. 26. NORTH WALES C.B.S., Assembly Rooms, Market St., Carnarvon.
SCUNTHORPE.
TONYPANDY (free to LEAGUE members).
Jan. 2—3. GLASGOW & DISTRICT C.B.A., Crown Hall, Sauchiehall St.
Jan. 6. GUISBOROUGH.
Jan. 12—13. SUNDERLAND, Miners' Hall, Roker Avenue.

Members residing in the towns mentioned should make a point of supporting the shows which have granted the concession of reduced admission, and readers in those towns who are not already members should join the LEAGUE at once to obtain the advantage offered by the societies holding the shows.

Bird-shop Keepers and Our Certificates.

The announcement of last week that CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE certificates would be granted to keepers of properly managed bird shops has met with a most cordial reception, and if our friends the Humanitarians could see my post for the past week they would, I think, modify considerably their wholesale condemnation of the trade. I have received a large number of letters from dealers in birds, stating that the writers will be very pleased indeed to receive visits at any time from one of our representatives, and the movement so successfully started cannot fail to have a wide-reaching influence for good.

An esteemed correspondent, who is himself a certified Sanitary Inspector, writes me a letter marked "Not for publication" giving his views on the matter. I am, of course, precluded by the condition named from giving his letter in full, but there would appear to be no reason why I should not mention some of his points, as these are of general interest.

This gentleman writes "A report from a Local Hon. Sec. will not affect the position at all from a legal point of view." No one suggested it would. But it would be expert evidence in favour of the humane bird dealer, and could not fail to carry weight, if occasion arose.

My correspondent says, further, that as a sanitary inspector, he himself would have to be satisfied personally that any particular bird business was being conducted not only in a humane manner, but so as not to be injurious to health. Of course he would. If there were any danger to health in the way a bird-shop was being kept, not only would the medical officer of health step in, but a practical fancier, such as a representative of ours would in every case be, would scarcely recommend the granting of a certificate to the effect that the shop was being properly kept.

My friendly critic goes on to say that "The premises ought to be inspected by the representative at unexpected times." This would go without saying. It would not be likely that notice would be given of any impending visit. Those bird-shop keepers who have written to me say that they will welcome a visit at any time.

After coming to the conclusion that "Upon the whole, I think the certificate has no goodness in it," the writer of the letter continues "It may be the means of increasing the man's business, and of course I agree that the granting of the certificate will put the dealer on his spurs as to the upkeep of his premises—sanitary and cleanly." Is there "no goodness" in this? Surely, if the institution of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE certificates result in the keeping of birds in bird-shops in "sanitary and cleanly" conditions, and if, incidentally, the trade of the shop-keeper is benefited, there must be some goodness in the certificate.

I shall be very pleased to hear from the keepers of bird-shops in any part of the kingdom that they are willing to fall in with our scheme, and members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE will be taking a very important step in support of their hobby if they will bring my notes of this week and last week to the notice of any bird-shop keeper in their neighbourhood.

Prizes for Bird-shop Keepers.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has in contemplation a further scheme to encourage the proper keeping of birds in captivity. A gentleman who has perhaps more experience of the practical side of the subject than any individual who could be named, and who visits during the year in the course of his ordinary business practically every town in Great Britain and Ireland, has kindly promised to take notes of what he sees in bird-shops. His report will be considered at the end of the year (1912), and prizes will be awarded either in the shape of diplomas or gold and silver medals to the proprietors of the best kept bird-shops in the kingdom. The identity of the gentleman will not be disclosed to anyone, and no one will know of the nature of his visits.

A Word for the League.

It must be obvious that CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE must have substantial support afforded it in its efforts to carry out the objects for which it was instituted, and this support it is in the power of each individual reader to give simply by becoming a member. I hope, therefore, that one of the New Year's resolutions of every one who may read these notes will be to join the LEAGUE if he or she is not already a member, and to bring the work of the LEAGUE to the notice of those of their friends who are interested in the proper and humane keeping of our feathered pets. The subscription for ordinary members is only one shilling a year, but those who would like to subscribe a larger amount may become Vice-Presidents or Patrons on the terms mentioned at the end of these notes.

SUBSCRIPTIONS AND BADGES.

The SUBSCRIPTIONS to CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE are as under:—

PATRONS.—A donation in one sum, or an annual subscription of one guinea or more.

ORDINARY MEMBERS.—One shilling annually.

In all cases one-half of the subscription may be especially allotted by the subscriber either to the Literature Fund or the Defence Fund, or towards the purchase of special prizes to be awarded at any show nominated by the subscribers. Failing any such special allocation, the subscription will be devoted to the development and progressive work of the LEAGUE, to advertising its objects and promoting its ideals.

BADGES mounted in Rolled Gold: (1) as a brooch for ladies or for coat lapel or cycling cap, (2) as a pendant for watch-chain; one shilling each.

ORDINARY BADGES. (1) as a button for coat lapel. (2) as a brooch for ladies, or for cycling cap (3) as a pendant for watch-chain; sixpence each.

SEALS.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to notepaper postcards or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred fivepence for fifty, post free.

FREE BOOKLETS.

Members are entitled, if application is made at the time of joining, to a free copy of a sixpenny pamphlet on British Bird Culture, or a similar treatise on Canary and Hybrid Culture.

FELINFOEL.

Fifth annual show, held in the Public Hall, on December 16th. The cage birds were nicely staged round the room, and were well looked after by an enthusiastic lot of fancier stewards. The quality all round was excellent, Britishers especially being very strong. The hall is a good one, being lofty, well lighted, and roomy. Mr. T. J. Davies makes an ideal secretary, being cool, methodical and most affable and obliging. Mr. D. Morris is well up in his duties as show manager, and all seemed to work with a will. Mr. J. H. Payne made the awards.

LLANRWST.

First show of Llanrwst and Dis. C.B.S. was held December 14th, and proved a great success, the entries coming up well; and the quality of the exhibits was most excellent, thus giving the Society a capital send off. We trust they will soon be established as one of the leading societies in North Wales. The Concert Hall, in which the show was held, is a capital place for a cage bird show, being well lighted, roomy and quite free from draughts. The exhibits were nicely staged, and the room set off with flags and bunting. The best of attention was paid to the exhibits, the stewards under Mr. J. Thomas all working well. The President, J. Blackwall, Esq., J.P., was in attendance and took the greatest interest in the show, working like a Trojan throughout the day; in fact, we can honestly say we have never met a President who worked so hard and showed such unbounded enthusiasm for the good of the Society, the exhibits, and exhibitors. The Hon. Sec., Mr. J. Kershaw, makes a most admirable officer and had his work well in hand; he was the personification of courtesy and tact. With such officials at the helm and under such management, we shall be surprised if this society does not make great headway. Mr. J. H. Payne made the awards.

YARM.

Third annual show held in the Central Hall Dec. 16th. The hon. sec., Mr. Wilson, and his assist.-sec., Mr. Henderson, had the birds well staged, and fed and in good time. The committee, Messrs. Johnson, Watson, Weedy, Wilson, Danby, Harwood, Wilkinson, and Dawson were well to the front in looking after the wants of the exhibits during the day. This was the largest show ever held at Yarm, close on 400 birds facing the judges. Some fine Norwich were to be seen in that section, and we might state that in the Yorks. classes the birds were bad to beat at any open show. Mules and British turned up well, and we must congratulate the Yarm fanciers upon their keenness in working up a show like this; we hope they will go on and prosper. Mr. W. Mundell judged all Canary classes, and Mr. Marwood the remainder.

Six Hundred and Forty Birds at Broxburn.

Very Fine Display in the Mule and British Bird Sections.

Broxburn and Dis. C.B.S. annual show held December 16th, and it proved a great success. No less than 640 birds were entered. Scotch Fancies, on the whole, were a nice collection, some real good ones being staged, and they were carefully handled by a well-known local expert in Mr. A. Kinnear (Broxburn); his awards left little room for adverse comment. Crests and Crest-breds were the feature of the Norwich section, some gems being out. Plainheads were good. Mr. G.o. Scaife carefully judged this section, and his awards were well received. Borders again were one of the features of the show, all the classes being well filled, and the judge (the well-known Greca breeder, Mr. J. Thomson, of Newtongrange) had a difficult task to separate the winners; after carefully weighing up their respective points, however, little could be desired. This was one of the best shows of Mules in Scotland this season, some grand birds being on view. British were all that could be desired, some of the classes being very keenly contested, and the judges in this and the Mule sections had their work cut out to do justice to the birds. Mr. J. Mason (Peebles) judged odd numbers, and Mr. J. Strachan (Bathgate) the even numbers, and their awards were well received. The management of this show, as in the past, is par excellence, and we heard on good authority that this in so small measure is the reason of the grand entries year by year. Mr. McLaren, the worthy secretary, had everything in apple-pie order, the staging being ample; all the birds were carefully fed and watered, and were ready for the judges to start in good time. He was ably assisted by his right-hand guide, Mr. Thomas Sharp, ably backed up by an enthusiastic committee. The show was well patronised by all the local fanciers, and we are sure the show of 1911 is one of the most successful ever held.

FROME.

A Remarkable Record Entry.

Frome Cage Bird show, held in the Temperance Hall, and proved a great success. There was a remarkable entry of over 500 birds, an increase of 144 over last year's record. The committee wisely decided to engage a larger hall, and it was fortunate for them that they did. A better place for a show it would be impossible to imagine; it is well lighted, free from draughts, and in the centre of the town. The exhibits were staged all round the hall on three-tier staging, with two centre stages, so that visitors could without difficulty see the exhibits. As usual, the drawing competition attracted a lot of attention no less than 86 school children competing. A new feature was the Roller Canary singing competition, which brought 19 entries and attracted a large number of admirers. Crests and Crestbreds were only few in numbers, but of very good quality. Norwich were a remarkable section, some of the best being staged. The 1911 classes were well filled with gems, but the most remarkable was the novice class, which contained 33 entries. Yorks. were equally good, the 1911 and novice classes again being a treat to see. The Natural Colour class contained 11 entries. Lancashires contained some grand birds, amply repaying the committee for again trying this variety. Seeing that Frome is a warm place for Borders, the entry here was not quite up to expectations as regards numbers, but this was made up for in quality. The A.O.V. class contained some of the cream, Mr. Maisey beating Messrs. Minty and Young in their own castle. The Light Mule class was poorly supported, as was the new class for heavily variegated; considering there are hundreds of this variety about, it is a pity this class was not better supported. Dark Mules were a grand class, as was the Hybrid class, which contained some of the best. Goldfinches with 21 entries were grand, while the Bullfinches with the same number were, the judge declared, the best got together this season. The other British classes were all good, as were the Foreign. The chairman of committee was Mr. Cecil Glass, vice-chairman Mr. C. I. Young, treasurer Mr. A. W. Blaiden, committee Messrs. W. Dodge, P. Edwards, W. Tricker, J. Kelly, R. Pinnell, H. Payne, E. Sheppard, W. Singer, H. Leo, T. Biss. The hon. secretaries were Messrs. A. G. King and J. Yeo—model secretaries, who have worked tremendously to make the show what it is, viz., one of the best in the West of England. Mr. C. I. Young, the general secretary, acted as show manager. The show was opened by the President, when there was a crowd of ladies and gentlemen present.

QUEENSBURY.

A GOOD AVERAGE ENTRY.

Queensbury C.B.S. open show, held December 16, was a fairly successful venture, especially for so late in the season, there being nearly 370 birds staged in the 25 classes provided, averaging 15 per class; and quality was well up to the standard. The show was held in the Baptist School room, a very good place, and quite close to the tram terminus. Messrs. Ogden Bros. secured special for most points, with a good team, and also took specials for most points in classes 1 and 4, and in 5 to 7, others taking specials being Messrs. Shackleton, Bailey, Sutcliffe and Son, Dykes, Brown and Son, Towers, Jowett and Crabtree, whilst in the novice section Messrs. Smith, Birbeck, Simonett and Crabtree secured the specials. The secretarial duties were well carried out by Mr. A. Hartley, valuable assistance being rendered by Messrs. Pearson and Myers, show stewards, and Messrs. Allen, Lumb, Fowle, Brook, Smith, Briggs, Gregson Nicholl, Jagger, Jowett, and others. Mr. W. Cruise judged, and little fault could be found with his awards.

THURSO.

Thurso O.S. 23rd annual show held in the Town Hall on 6th December. The day was bright and clear. The exhibits were staged in perfect order. The secretary, Mr. D. Shearer, had everything in apple-pie order, the work being no strange task for him. Everything was in readiness for the judge, who remarked at once upon entering the hall that the quality of the exhibits and the general arrangements would compare favourably with those of any southern show. Mr. Laidler (Paisley) judged, and his awards were well received. The entries were the largest for some years, nearly all the classes being full. Messrs. D. and W. Shearer secured the cup for best bird in hall with a grand Scotch Fancy, this hen having championed the show now for three years in succession. Plainbeads were also very strong, while the Crests and Crest-breds were the best ever staged in the north. Borders made a charming show, 29 being benched. The show was patronised by an interested crowd of fanciers.

WATFORD & DIS. C.B.S.

Seventh annual show held at the Conservative Annexe, Dec. 1st and 2nd. The number of birds shown was not quite so many as in previous years, but the quality was far superior to anything seen in Watford. Norwich were grand. Yorks. were rather down in numbers, but some fine birds were shown. Crests were the best ever seen in Watford, and competition for the cups was very keen. British also were a fine lot, many winners in open competition being on view. The foreign class contained some grand specimens of Diamond Sparrows and Nonpareil Buntings, which, we hear, have changed hands for a good figure. The cups and principal specials were won as follows:—Gleeson cup, W. Buckingham; Partridge cup, W. Ginger; Sears cup, J. Cox; novice breeders' cup, H. Cambell; best champion bird, J. Cox; novice, W. Herridge. Mr. T. Heath judged, and his awards appeared to please all.

FALKIRK (Good Intent).

Second annual show held in the Oddfellows' Hall, Grahamston, Dec. 9th, and we have pleasure in recording a very considerable increase in the number of entries over the initial venture a year ago. Over 430 birds were placed on exhibit, showing an increase of 80 over the last exhibition. The show is run on correct lines, and the management is A1, so that little surprise need be expressed at the marked advance in the numbers of exhibits and exhibitors. The number of specials competed for was something to be talked about, no fewer than 56 being catalogued, and this, no doubt, adds to the popularity of the show. Norwich and Borders were forward in strong numbers, and the quality equal, if not superior, to most of the radius shows hereabouts. Mr. Muir (Pres.), Mr. Marshall (Treas.), and Mr. Clubb (Secretary) were untiring in their efforts to please all. They were ably assisted by a committee of good workers in Messrs. Condie, Gardner, Robertson, Sutton, Hunter, Baird, Gillespie, Laurie, Clarkson and Anderson. Messrs. Buchan (Falkirk), Reid (Shieldhill), and McQuistan (Ayr) made the awards, and left little room for grumbling.

BLACKBURN PROVES A RECORD-BREAKER.

Great Entry of High-Class Birds.

A Fight in the Goldfinch Class.

Blackburn C.B.S. annual show held December 15th and 16th, and it is very pleasing to note they beat their record by over 50 birds, some 675 being on view. And what a collection! The cream of the fancy was in every section. Truly this reflects credit on the Blackburn executive. "Good prize money; popular judges; and quick return of exhibits" is their motto. The show is held in the Orange Hall, a grand room, but not quite sufficient of it when invaded by the East Lancashire fanciers. The lighting is good, but what a day it was—raining all day Friday. We did not envy the judges their work. A lot of the birds were down consequently, and in some classes the awards could have been reversed when the electric light was turned on. A grand even lot of Norwich were on view. The Yorks. were very hot, the best seen at this show. The Novice Nor. and Yorks were a grand selection, the Yorks especially. British no doubt were the top sawyers of the show. They were absolutely the finest lot of specimens of their various species seen in Lancashire for some time. When it was known that Captain Hurst was sending his Goldie, the British enthusiasts knew they were in for a treat, but, my word! it very nearly met its Waterloo. The Finch shown by Messrs. Pitchford and Stocker very nearly gave the Captain a Roland for his Oliver. Truly it was a magnificent fight, but the Captain got it on finish of head blaze. Linnets were a show in themselves and took some sorting out; two sets of winners could easily have been found. The much-talked-of Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid won in its class. Mules came up wonderfully and contained some interesting crosses. Foreign birds had plenty of admirers. They were such a display of colours. The show is under the management of the Secretary (Mr. J. Cook), and right well he did his duties. He had above one all-night sitting. May he long hold the reins. The Chairman (Mr. J. M. Walsh) worked splendidly, and was admirably helped by Messrs. Tetley, Proctor, Bailey, Seed, Hunter, Fairclough, Booth, Thompson, and Hopkins. (All long-distance birds left room before 5.30 p.m. The Dr. Lax cup was won by Mr. J. M. Walsh, Mr. H. Bolton taking the Dr. Stephenson cup by one point from Mr. J. Cook. The Magnet bowls were won respectively by Messrs. Seed, Pope, and J. M. Walsh. The Australian Wood Swallow of Mr. Walsh's won the Foreign Bird Club medal. Mr. Snarey taking the British Bird and Mule Club medal. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe judged Yorks and Norwich, and Mr. J. Walsh the British, Mules and Foreign. We heard very little grumbling.

The Canary Classes.

EDMONTON F.A.

Held in the Town Hall, Dec. 14. This was the largest display of cage birds the society has ever had at its annual members' show, and a great deal of the praise for this result is due to the efforts of Mr. J. A. White, who laboured indefatigably to make this a record. The hon. secretaries (Messrs. J. S. Jackson and Burgess) also did their part excellently, and a great deal of assistance was rendered by Mr. Ward (hon. sec. of Waltham Cross Society). Mr. C. Sorrel, the popular chairman of Edmonton Society, was as busy as ever helping in the preparations, and other gentlemen whose names we did not get did their parts willingly. Cup for best in show was won by Mr. S. Williams, F.Z.S., with a splendid blue Tanager, shown in delightful feather. Quality in the cage birds was well represented all through, and the exhibits were the attraction of visitors, who attended in large numbers in the evening. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and his awards were well received.

The Critique.

NOR. YELL. (8): 1, sp, Cawthorne, smart bird, good shape, level col., nice quality, well posted; 2, vhc, Salter, another bird of grand quality; 3, Richer, varieg., full chest and body, good feather; r, Medley; hc, Simmonds; c, White. BUFF (8): 1, 2, two birds very close together in point of merit, rare under col., type, and quality; 3, r, vhc, Cawthorne, former fine shape, good quality; hc, c, Jauncey. CREST (6): 1, cup for best unflig. bird, and spl. for best Crest, 2, 3, r, vhc, hc, Richer, winner very neat and very sweet, clean body D.C., buff, not yell., for the latter we seldom see nowadays! Mr. Richer is to be commended upon his team, and the way they were shown. C.B.: Here again, Mr. Richer put down a very fine team, taking all the prizes. HEN (7): 1, sp, Medley, good yell. Nor., stout body, fine head, nice col., and rare feather; 2, Cawthorne, another yellow, nice bone of feather, good col.; 3, White, very shapely varieg., just the sort to breed from; r, White; vhc, Salter; hc, Simmonds; c, Richer. FINCHES AND LINNETS (8): 1, sp, 2, 3, r, Williams, winner a Goldie, good chestnut face, bars and buttons, 2nd beautiful feathered Greenie; vhc, White; hc, Matthews; c, Simmonds. A.O.S. BRIT. MULES, ETC. (8): 1, sp, 2, Williams, winner a large varieg. Goldie-Can. Mule, good flush face, close in feather, and well shown; 3, Clark, dark Linnet-Can. Mule, good size, nice markings; r, hc, Britten; vhc, Matthews; c, Simmonds. FOR. (6): Mr. Williams put down a nice team, in lovely feather, and secured the cup and sp. with a beautiful blue Tanager, as mentioned above. As Mr. Williams was the only competitor, all the other prizes fell to him in order, but the exhibits were quite equal to holding their own in keen competition.

EDINBURGH (Open) O.S.

This old established society's 58th annual show was held on December 9th, the venue being the now well-known Buccleuch Parish Church Halls, which are admirably suited for a cage bird show, being splendidly lighted and free from draughts. Entries this year showed a slight falling off compared with last year, but what was lacking in quantity was amply made up for in the grand quality of the exhibits. The Belgian classes were a feature of the show, especially the young bird class, with an entry of 22—the best seen for some years past. A few of last year's winning Scotch Fancies were again forward, and easily held their place. The two cup winning birds (belongong to Mr. J. D. Brown, a buff pied cock and a buff pied hen), we were intormed, were bred in the same nest. Sales were just about the average. The society are blessed with a capital set of office-bearers, including Mr. D. Martin (President) and Mr. J. Daigleish (Vice-President), and the committee, consisting of the following well-known fanciers, Messrs. D. Campbell, C. R. Dryedale, J. Hendry, P. West, J. McLennan, P. McNiven, A. Paterson, J. Robertson, M. Petrie, J. Sinclair, W. Thornton, and P. Farrell. We regretted to hear that Mr. J. McLennan had been confined to his house. The show was well patronised by well-known Scotch Fancy breeders, amongst whom we noticed Messrs. W. Montgomery, J. D. Brown, Hannah, and Tom Brown. The secretarial reins were in the capable hands of Mr. J. R. Meikle, who is very obliging and courteous to all who come into contact with him, and he spared no effort to make the show a success. Judges, Messrs. D. Caldwell (Baillieston), W. Rodgers (Colinton), J. D. Maxwell (Lanriston), and J. Kean (Edinburgh); their awards seemed to give entire satisfaction.

MUSSELBURGH O.S.

Fourth annual show held Nov. 25, in the Town Hall, which is well adapted for a bird show. Entries were down on last year's, but what lacked in numbers was made up for in quality. The fixing of the staging was in the hands of Messrs. J. Pearson and A. Hoyle, assisted by a good working committee, and everything went on smoothly. Mr. W. Bishop judged the Nor. and Brit., and Mr. G. Hyslop the Borders; both gave entire satisfaction. Mr. J. Smeaton carried off special for best bird; Mr. Fleming, the S.P.C. medal; Mr. Muir, Sandiford's medal; Border and club medals, Mr. J. Pearson, Mr. Little winning the novice Border medal; Mr. T. Sykes, gold medal for best Brit. The show was a very successful venture, and was well patronised.

PATELEY BRIDGE AND DIS. F.S.

Annual show held in the Oddfellows' Hall, Dec. 16. The entries for the cage-bird section were not large, but the quality of the birds shown was good. Messrs. Richmond, Barfe, and Raw staged some real gems. Mr. Barfe's unflighted buff hen (Yorks.) won special for best bird, and was admired by everyone. It is the best bird seen in the district for some time. Mr. R. Weatherhead, hon. sec., and his hard working committee, had everything well in hand. A grand display of CAGE BIRDS' posters, etc., were a great set off to the show. Mr. P. H. Marsden judged, and gave every satisfaction.

WALTHAM ABBEY.

Waltham Abbey and Dis. F.A., show, held Dec. 2nd, in the Town Hall, an ideal building for light; the hall vies with some of the best buildings for show purposes. The birds are comfortably staged on the platform, and form a pleasing adjunct to the other sections of the show. Mr. W. D. Ward is a splendid secretary, and has held the reins of office for some years. Nothing in the shape of detail escapes him; consequently things run smoothly, and success is assured. Col. Colvin, C.B., J.P., is the president, and Lady Gwendoline Colvin takes a practical interest in all that pertains thereto, and the list of patrons, in addition, is a very large and influential one. Mr. J. S. Jackson is chairman of committee. The entry was a nice one, and the quality up on the average. Challenge cup for best birds bred in the current year by exhibitor was won by Mr. J. W. Medley with a very typical rich coloured yell. Norwich, and this bird also took special for best Nor. British birds were a nice collection, some smart Goldfinches being staged. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged.

DAWLEY & DIST. C.B.S.

The 4th annual (6 mile radius) show was held on Dec. 5th, in the Assembly Room. Mr. H. Tams (Longton) placed the cards, and we heard no grumbling. One of the features of the show was the British class for boys, and a real good class it was, not a bad one in it. The boys evidently know how to look after their pets, for several tempting offers were made for the winners, but the lads wouldn't part with them. Another feature was the amusement caused by a merry little butcher giving a leg of lamb for best vhc in show: we believe the winner and donor are now friends for life.

NOR. (9): 1, 2, vhc, c, Campbell, 1st cl. yell., blaze of col., graud size, 2nd cl. buff, grand head, neck, wing, carriage; 3, G. Potter, cl. yell., as round as a ball; 4, hc, G. YORKS BUFF (10): 1, 3, Campbell, 1st tick buff hen, looking thick when we saw it, 3rd cl. cock, nice quality, good wings and tail; 2, Johnson, nice hen, straight as a rush; 4, Hyde, nice buff cock; vhc, Pritchard; hc, Ball, a really good one; c, Johnson. YELL. (8):: 1, vhc, Johnson, cl. yell., grand length, good position; 2, 3, Lavender, 2nd yell. hen, shows for all it is worth, 3rd yell. cock, not quite so good in feather; 4, hc, c, Campbell, nice yell. GOLDFINCH (11) a fine class, not a bad one in it: 1, Tomkins, grand Finch, rare size, splendid face, grand bars and buttons; 2, G. Williams, not much to choose between this and 1st; 3, J. Boycott, smart finish, shines like silk; 4, Pitchford, good big bird; vhc, hc, c, Potter. BULLFINCH (11) another grand class: 1, J. Williams grand cap, good col., distinct bars; 2, G. Williams, house-moulted, lovely quality, well put down; 3, Potter, good col., not quite so nice in cap; 4, c, Clayton; vhc, Potter; hc, Pearce. MULE OR HYB. Practical Handbooks for Bird Lovers.

Brief particulars of some of "Cage Birds" SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS for keepers of birds, with post free prices.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Normun; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

Jarrow-on-Tyne's Latest Open Venture.

Financial Success Assured.

Entry and Attendance both Satisfactory.

Jarrow annual show, held Dec. 16th, Mechanics' Institute. Owing to the recent bad state of trade in the district, the committee during the past two years wisely contented themselves with holding members' shows, but this year they felt that trade had sufficiently revived as to warrant them again going on with the open event, and it was therefore decided that this, their 5th annual show, should be an open one. After the great event of their near neighbours (Gateshead) last week-end, it was only to be expected there would be a considerable drop in entries, yet the society did fairly well, entries coming up as well as could be expected, reaching a total of about 340, which made a very creditable show. Norwich and Borders came up well, with the Yorks. in close attendance, and the quality in each section was quite up to the mark, many well-known winners being staged. British birds also came up fairly well, and here again the quality of the exhibits was excellent. In the Mule class two birds were exhibited which were alleged to be light Linnet-Canary Mules, one ticked and one clear, and catalogued at £40 each. Mr. Crawhall, who judged the class, had no hesitation, we heard, in putting both birds back as being Canaries. The Mechanics' Hall is a very nice place for a show, being large and absolutely free from draughts; with a little more light it would be practically ideal. In Mr. R. Blore the society possesses a most excellent secretary, who apparently thoroughly understands how to work a cage bird show, and we found him most courteous and obliging. He got through his duties in a most practical manner, everything going off without the slightest hitch. The chairman is Mr. Ralph Hutler, the well-known Yorks. Canary enthusiast, who in turn is well supported by a grand body of fanciers, composed of Mr. M. Coltman (treasurer), and Messrs. J. Stephenson, J. Richardson, H. Addison, W. Bowen, C. Bullen, J. Tracey, G. O'Hagan, W. Maughan, and W. Boldon. With such workers the society should make great progress. The principal special prize winners were:—Hyde's, Mr. R. Addison; Sandiford's medal, Mr. E. Cowling; the Kirkley challenge cup for most points in members' classes, Mr. J. Richardson. The attendance, though not large, was quite satisfactory, and we were informed by the secretary that the show would undoubtedly be a financial success. The judges were: Mr. A. Brown, Norwich, Cinnamons, and Borders, and Mr. T. C. Crawhall, the remainder.

NARBERTH.

The 24th annual show was held on December 13th in the Victoria Hall, a building most suitable for a show. The staging was nice, and there was plenty of room. We regret that entries did not come up better, for the society deserves splendid support at the fixture. The secretary, Mr. Owens, and his committee worked hard, and everything seemed to go alright. Mr. J. M. Lewis judged.

THAMES DITTON.

Started only last season, the Ditton Fanciers' Society has already made itself felt as one of the institutions of the district, and its second show, held in the Village Hall on Dec. 14th, was a most successful little affair. The classification was not great, but the entries included some well-known birds, and the quality generally was good. Nicely arranged at the end of the hall, with a background of foliage plants, the cage bird section was generally voted the best part of the show. Cage bird fanciers of the district are greatly indebted to Mr. and Mrs. Thynne for the great interest which they take in the section, and to their zealous efforts is due the success achieved. Mr. Kitching had charge of the general secretarial arrangements, and being assisted by some good stewards everything passed off well. Mr. C. A. House judged.

The Granite City's Splendid Show.

Entries at Aberdeen are over Fifty up.

Fifty-sixth annual exhibition held Music Hall, Union Street, December 15 and 16. The hall is well adapted for a cage-bird show, being high in the roof, well ventilated, and free from draughts; and a nice even temperature was kept. The society is blessed with first-class executive, the president, Mr. W. Allan, being present, and at everyone's command; he did much to make the show a success. We were very sorry to hear that the vice-president, Mr. J. Hector, has been laid aside through illness; the members miss him, as he has done a great amount of good for this society. The secretary and treasurer, Mr. J. Bryson, is a hard worker, and had all his arrangements made in good time, and his keenness and ability made him an ideal show manager. He was well backed up by a strong committee of well-known fanciers, consisting of Messrs. Alex. Thomson, C. Thompson, A. Thomson (Woodside), Ewen, Anderson, Lawrie, Lyon, Henderson, Sanderson, Balfour, Mackie, Garden, Gardiner, MacKercher, W. Rae, A. Rae, Ironside, Will Smith. The challenge cup was won by Mr. F. Garden for the third time, and it becomes his own property. The £1 1s. challenge cup for best yell. ck. nat. col. was won by Mr. W. Aitchison (Edinburgh), which becomes his own; Hyde's, Mr. Jas. Anderson; Sandiford's, Mr. W. Allison and Mr. J. Smeaton; Ramsden's, Mr. W. Clubb; 10s. sp. for most points in British, Mr. Fred Watt; the S.P.C. medal for cocks, Mr. W. Grewar; hens, Mr. W. Aitchison. The judges were Messrs. J. Sandison (Aberdeen) and A. Chalmers (Kirkintilloch), Norwich and British, Mr. A. Cochrane (Edinburgh), who gave satisfaction.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

Club Reports.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held Dec. 28rd, Mr. Swan presiding. Various matters connected with the open show, Jan. 12th and 13th, were discussed. Will members please let me know what specials they have for members' classes at the next meeting, Jan. 6th? Schedules are now ready. A vote of sympathy was passed to the family of the late Mr. R. T. Haswell (a member), who died suddenly on Dec. 20th.—J. Jeffrey.—Hon. Sec.

BEDFORD AND BEDS. O.S.

Meeting of the newly formed society was held, Dec. 15, at Ham's Restaurant (headquarters), Mr. J. Beanland in the chair. Eleven new members were enrolled, and the prospects of the society are very bright. Annual subscription for members is 2s., those under 18 years of age 1s. Annual meeting Jan. 19th, when the officers and committee will be elected. The meeting will be open to all who are interested in cage birds.—J. Wilmot, Sec., The Arcade, Bedford.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF SCOTLAND.

Meeting held December 19th, 71, Loudon Street, Glasgow. The President (Mr. Penman) presided over a fair attendance. Correspondence was read from secretary of Kilmarnock show regarding loss on Y.B. classes; secretary was instructed to settle this account. Arrangements for annual general meeting was gone through. I expect to be able to put ballot papers, etc., with full instructions, in the hands of members very clearly in the New Year. Meanwhile, will country members desiring anything discussed, or any alterations in our rules, kindly let me have particulars as soon as possible? In the points competition for club trophies the first six are: B. Martin, 68; J. McLellan, 54; R. Heggie, 46; A. Girvan, 46; G. MacRobbie, 36; G. Crichton, 27.—R. B. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

LEYTON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Annual dinner held at the Lion and Key Hotel, High Road, December 18th. About 40 members, wives, and friends partook of the very excellent fare provided by Mr. and Mrs. Elfick. Vice-President J. S. Clarke, Esq., occupied the chair, with his usual ability. Having disposed of the food, we settled down to enjoy the musical programme which had been arranged by Mr. J. A. Bartlett, who very ably carried out the duties of musical director. The following ladies and gentlemen kept up a continual melody: Miss Hargreaves, Miss Hellens, Messrs. Russell, Saunders, White, Stevens, Hellens, Hargreaves and Host Elfick. We were most fortunate in again getting Mr. Rich at the piano; he being a postmaster at this instrument, it goes without saying that the artistes were most ably accompanied. Mr. J. A. Bartlett proposed and Mr. B. F. Forse seconded a very hearty vote of thanks to the artistes, to which Mr. Russell suitably responded. Mr. J. A. Bartlett proposed and Mr. B. F. Forse seconded a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. J. S. Clarke. The evening was brought to a close by the singing of "God Save the King" and "Auld Lang Syne."—Forse and Son, Hon. Secs.

BANKFOOT C.B.S.

Prizes won at our members' shows will be presented at the supper and social, January 15th; all members desirous of attending should send in their names as soon as possible. Friends and fanciers are also invited. Mr. H. B. Wood provides a rabbit-pie supper at one shilling per head. It is intended to throw our February 17th show open to all within 5-mile radius of Bradford Town Hall (fee same as for members' show, prize money on sliding scale). Already nearly 30s. has been given for specials. The fixture does not clash with any of the Yorkshire Union shows. Specials will no doubt be allotted so as to induce entries in all classes. Mr. J. Taylor has kindly promised a cup for competition at our members' shows with unflighted birds. This cup is to be won outright the first year. All fanciers desirous of joining should do so before the first feather shows; by doing so they will be able to take full advantage and start counting for this special prize at the first show. I do not wish to brag about our society, but I can truthfully say that no society in the Bradford district has given more specials at its members' shows. I have had occasion in the past to draw the attention of members to the poorly attended meetings, and although the appeal was not in vain, there is still room for improvement, and they will only have themselves to blame when new members come along and take their places.—F. Gelder, Sec.

WALLSEND & MID-TYNE C.B.A.

Annual meeting held Station Hotel, December 13th, a good number of members present, Mr. J. Heslop in chair. Balance-sheet passed. The auditors' report stated that the accounts were in proper form and showed a balance of over £6. It was intimated that a large number of fanciers are wishing to join in the New Year. Six have already paid for ensuing year. Secretaries intimated that all arrangements were complete for the 21st, the evening of our annual supper. Tickets were sent to all members, and one only had been returned. The election of officers resulted as follows: The Mayor as President, and Mr. H. McColl, Chairman; Messrs. Macdonald and Evans, Hon. Secs.; Mr. J. Heslop, Vice-Chairman; Mr. F. Reeves, Treasurer; Messrs. J. Heslop and McColl, Auditors; and eighteen of the most active members as a working committee. Large number of vice-presidents were also added. The feeling of the members is that, seeing the great success of the show as a members' confined venture, next year's be on similar lines, so that we shall be pleased to enrol local fanciers. The supper and social were held in same place Dec. 21st, the club room being beautifully decorated with flags and flowers supplied from the Wallsend Shipyard, and arranged as only a handyman can. Forty members sat down, and in the unavoidable absence of the Mayor, the Deputy-Mayor (Ald. J. Allan, J.P.) was in the chair; Mr. J. Johnson the vice chair. The host and hostess (Mr. and Mrs. Heaton) had spared no trouble over the work, and although the supper was only 2s. 6d. per head, they determined that we should have the best of everything. After clearing the tables, the first thing was a rousing song by Mr. Holden, then Ald. Allan's remarks, after which the presentations were commenced. The Percy Hood cup was won by Mr. J. Johnston for most points. (In a count Mr. W. McGinn was first thought the winner; finally Mr. Johnston proved the victor. Mr. Allan made a choice speech in handing it over, and congratulated Mr. Johnston on his success not only in Wallsend, but all over the country, proving his ability as a fancier. The Secretary had to sing the next song; he has only one, but it fits in on all occasions and was well received. The next cup, the R. J. Dees, was presented to J. Heslop in the absence of Mr. Stark, who are joint holders for the year. Mr. Johnston replied in a neat pithy speech. Messrs. R. Allison, H. McColl, N. Hyman, F. Reeves, Matzen, and others, all added to the harmony in fine style. Then the President handed Mr. Macdonald a beautiful silver snuff-box, suitably engraved, as a small mark of esteem in which the members hold him for his many services. The Secretary thanked the Deputy-Mayor and the members for so reasonably remembering any little service; he assured each that his only aim was to see the W.C.B.A. in a flourishing condition. Votes of thanks all round ended a fully enjoyable and temperate evening.—John M. Macdonald, Hon. Sec.

EAST HAM C.B.S.

The members, winners and losers, turned up in goodly numbers at headquarters on December 14th, for the distribution of cups, prize money, diplomas, specials, etc., won at the annual show. Mr. W. Hammans in chair. Secretary read a telegram from the Vice-President (Mr. A. J. A. Marley) expressing regret for his absence. Throughout the year it has been the committee's intention to give ornamental prize cards at the annual show only, and all 1st, 2nd and 3rd prize winners were the recipients of them. By careful selection on the part of the show manager, Mr. B. C. Smith, all 1st prize cards, with few exceptions, depicted a bird of the species shown by the winner. The same remarks apply to the diplomas given by the society for most points throughout the year. Principal winners: Mr. F. Fox (Novice Canary Cup), Mr. T. Walker (British Bird Cup), Mr. G. King (diploma for most points in Canaries), Mr. T. Walker (ditto, British), Mr. W. South (ditto, Mules), and Mr. J. Reed (ditto, Foreign). All these have at all shows sent many entries. (N.B.— Our staging is well made, and can stand further pressure.—Show Manager). The original date for the annual general meeting being close upon the festive season, same has been altered to January 11th, 1912. Will all members please note? A copy of the balance-sheet, now in course of preparation, will be sent members in due time.

CITY OF GLASGOW O.A.

Annual meeting held in the Reception Rooms of the City Hall, 23 Dec. A little over one-sixth of the members were in attendance. The Scotch Fancy members were represented by about half-a-dozen, a change from what it used to be. The president, Mr. D. Black, occupied the chair. The balance-sheet was forward, with a surplus of £43 12s. 7d., as against £89 7s. 3d. for the corresponding period ended 31 December, 1910. The chairman stated that every member was aware of the cause of the decrease, and the air being now purified, it is to be hoped it will soon be made up. After some discussion the balance sheet was passed. A member rose and stated that another member who was present had said he had given his birds on loan at a certain show and judged them. On being pressed he admitted the statement, and tried to excuse himself. It was decided that the accused be expelled from membership. He thereupon rose and said "Good-bye." It was a relief when the scene was over, but it was followed by another in connection with the famous "mock test," which at law saddled the society with a loss of over £5. It was alleged that the executive were given to understand that the Association would not lose anything by the court case, the inference being that the judge would bear what loss was likely to be sustained, but this it was said he had failed to do. It was moved and seconded that he (the judge) was either to pay the amount or be debarred from membership. In answer to an inquiry it was admitted that a certain person who was present at the extraordinary meeting was not a member of the society (only members have the right to be present). Election of office-bearers: Mr. Black was re-elected president; he accepted with pleasure, and assured the members he would do his utmost for the Association. A letter was read from Mr. McDonald, the secretary, to the effect that he could not see his way to longer hold office. It was decided to have two secretaries, but no persons in the room would be induced to take up the duties. Mr. McDonald said he would conduct the business until June, when he must be relieved. For the trusteeship, Messrs. Black and Smith were appointed. For the Scotch Fancy section no one would act on the committee. It was left with the president to make a selection. A large committee was appointed from the other sections. A rule was introduced that "Only Fanciers who were members in the preceding year have a voice in the business of the Association." A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting.

MOULTING AND COLOUR-FEEDING.

A Lecture before the Bankfoot and Dis. C.B.S.

Meeting held Dec. 19th. Mr. J. Taylor (President) in the chair. After the business was exhausted, the President gave us his promised lecture on "Moulting and Colour Feeding," as follows:—

My method of mixing colour-food is as follows: Five pounds of tasteless pepper, 1lb. of hot Natal, 1lb. of linseed meal, and 1lb. of Demerara sugar. Mix all these together and keep in an airtight tin. I add nothing more. When preparing the food for the birds I take a thick slice of bread, which I soak in water. To this I add the colour food until it is of sufficient strength to suit me. I do not mix the food, like a lot of fanciers, that is, say, 5 parts of bread to 2 parts of pepper. I have been accustomed to use egg along with the feed, but I intend to use no more. I never move my birds during the time they are moulting. My idea is that the smaller the cage in which you moult the bird, the better, as I have found birds steadier when moulted in small cages. I always cover up my birds during the moulting season, because it keeps them quieter, and also keeps them clean. In my opinion hot-coloured birds are always coarse in feather, at least so I have found them.

I always mix a small quantity of castor oil along with the colour-feed once a week, as I think it is the finest thing you can give to a bird. I also give milk sop once a week, in a rather sticky condition. Should a bird be stuck in the moult, I change its position, but I never take a bird from, say, the top row of the rack to the bottom. I am sure that if a bird can have a good quick moult, it is a lot better both for show and breeding purposes. I never diminish the strength of the colour-feed when my birds are finishing the moult, but continue the full strength right through.

Question: Will the lecturer tell us how he makes his milk sops?—Answer: I cut off the crusts from a slice of bread, pour boiling milk over the latter, drain off the surplus milk and add a little cayenne pepper.

What objection has the lecturer to adding oil to colour food?—To my mind it contains enough oil when mixed as I advise.

Could you give us a remedy for "going light"?—I think it is owing to change of foods. The remedy I recommend is to mix a little egg-food and add a few drops of castor oil. If the bird will eat at all you will find that this will bring it round.

Why object to eggs in the mixing of colour food?—Ever since I gave up using them I have had a better colour.

There was further discussion amongst those present at this point, and several reasons were mentioned which are no doubt responsible for the ebb and flow of colour regardless of the use of eggs, such an absence of either green or cinnamon blood. The general opinion was that the use of eggs was necessary, not for their colour-feeding properties, but for the sustaining power derived from them and needed during the process of moulting.—F. Gelder, Sec.

SOUTH COUNTY DUBLIN C.B.A.

First general meeting, held in the Court House, Kingston (Town Hall), on December 20th. There was an excellent attendance of local fanciers. Mr. Sholedice, one of the leading fanciers in Ireland, presided. The rules were submitted and passed, and the officers elected for the year 1912. The committee meet on Thursday, December 21st, for the purpose of drawing up a schedule for an open show for fanciers in Ireland, to be held in January, 1912, under the patronage of the Yorkshire Canary Society of Ireland. After other important business was dealt with, a vote of thanks was unanimously accorded the chairman, who replied in a very befitting manner. As this is the first show to be held by this association, the committee would be glad if fanciers in general would give them every support in the matter, so as to get the association on a sound basis.—D. Smyth, Hon. Secretary.

EDINBURGH AND DIST C.B.S.

Meeting held Cairn's Memorial Hall, Gorgie Road, December 19th, the President (Mr. J. Charlton) presiding over a capital attendance. Secretary submitted the first balance sheet of the society; this showed an income of £16 19s. 0d.; expenditure, £13 8s. 11d., leaving a balance of £3 10s. 7d. The auditors (Messrs. Whitefield and Easter) gave their report. After a discussion regarding gratuities to several members and others who had devoted time and energy, and who had assisted in making our first annual the success it turned out to be, various sums were voted amounting in all to £1 12s., which still left a balance of £1 18s. 7d., which it was unanimously agreed to carry forward. On the motion of Messrs. Watson and Winter, the retiring office-bearers, were accorded a hearty vote of thanks. Thereafter the office-bearers who had been in office were unanimously re-elected, with Messrs. Ferguson and Russell additional members of committee. Also agreed to maintain the interest of the society members at the monthly meetings. Decided to draw up a syllabus for the year, same being left in the hands of the committee. A feeling was also expressed that some sort of social evening might be arranged in January so that all members could meet and new members be welcomed. Final arrangements of same were left in the hands of Messrs. Whitefield, Todd, Easter, President and Secretary.—J. I. Mackie, Sec.

Singing Contests.

Week-end contest held Prince Albert Inn; 14 entered. Our old friend, Mr. Harry Allen, and Mr. Ted Ward, judged to perfection. 1, Mr. J. Cuppendave; 2, A. Binns; 3, A. Turner.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Blackburn Quality Linnet S.A.: A special meeting will be held at Club headquarters, Old Red Lion, Snig Brook, Dec. 30th. All members and intending members requested to attend. Business of the delegates' meeting will be read over at 8 o'c.—Rd. Hayhurst, Sec.

SALFORD.

We are holding another open contest Dec. 30th for time at the Boat House Hotel. First pair up at 2. Under the new timing arrangement. Afterwards committee will meet to decide special business concerning club match January 6th; also the election of representatives for Wigan on January 13th re affiliation match, as we are compelled to send five birds from the club. Fanciers welcome to our contests every fortnight.—B. Wharton, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS.

Christmas Linnet singing contest for quality, held Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon Street, December 23rd, when 16 of the best birds in Leeds sang: 1, Turner; 2, Johnson; 3, Wigfield. Judges, Messrs. H. Hardcastle, and Walt. Naylor. Also December 24th, when 34 birds faced the judges, and some very good singing was heard: 1, T. Stead; 2, T. C. Summers; 3, Johnson; 4, Wigfield. Judges, Messrs S. Hardcastle, Jennings, and Walt. Naylor. Also Canary contest, December 24th, when 12 German Canaries sang: 1, W. Wroe; 2, Sinnister; 3, T. Chadwick. Judges, Messrs. S. Hardcastle and J. Thompson. On December 25th 37 of the best Linnets in Leeds sang for 4 good prizes: 1, H. Wigfield; 2, 3, T. Johnson; 4, Blophy. Judges, Messrs. Hardcastle, Naylor, and Thompson.—T. C. Summers, Hon. Sec.

LEIGH.

Open-to-all-England Linnet contest for quality and time, held at the Globe Inn, Bradshawgate, Dec. 23rd. We had an entry of 60 birds from all parts of Lancashire, and some good singing was done. Some of the novices were scoring for quality, and were only knocked out by some of the older contest birds, which had to sing extra well to beat them. Owing to the large entry we were compelled to use artificial light, but I am pleased to say the light seemed to make the birds sing more, as the prize winners all sang in the gas-light. We gave the usual eight prizes. Winners for quality: W. Barnes (Wigan), 1; H. Brown (Leigh), 2; T. Statham (Leigh), 3; J. Green (Salford), 4; for time, J. Lunn (Leigh), 90, 1; S. Woodward (Westhoughton), 60, 2nd; W. Perry (Southport), 56, 3; W. H. Topping (Blackburn), 53, 4. Judges for quality: Messrs. W. H. Topping, T. Gibbin, and J. W. Jones; for time, Messrs. J. Aldrid and E. Peel; timekeeper, Mr. R. Disley; birdman, Mr. B. Jones. Don't forget first club contest, Jan. 1st. When all members are expected to enter a bird.—J. McAllister, Sec.

Illustrated Ideas

No. 559.
For Making Wire Holes in Wooden Bars.

Sent by Mr. J. F Derry, Snape's Buildings, Ironstone Road, Chase Terrace, near Walsall, Staffs.

I enclose a sketch of a very useful idea for making the holes in wooden bars for cages. By it, too, you can make sure of getting them quite true. Get an ordinary punched bar, about a foot long, and drive a small nail through the end holes marked A and B. Then pass the awl or drill through the holes in the punched bar. When you have made as many as the bar contains, draw nail marked A and turn over to letter C.; and so on along the wooden bar. By this means you can make it any length you like without bothering with a rule. D is the wooden bar, and E the punched bar.—J. F. Derry.

No. 560.

Sent by Mr. H. Beadnall, 7, Albany Street, off Princes Road, Middlesbrough-on-Tees.

I send you a sketch of two deformed toes of my two Mules, the last of the season. When they came out of the nest I saw the hind claw bent under the others, and the birds could not grip the perch with one foot. I took a piece of rubber piping 5-16in. across and cut rings off. Placing the deformed toe back, I put the ring over the three toes, holding the deformed toe further back, as shown in my sketch. I left the rings on for about a fortnight. When I took them off the birds could use the claws in a proper manner. I pressed the rings flat and tied them in the middle, as shown in the sketch. No. 1 shows the deformed foot and No. 2 the foot under treatment tied in middle with cotton.—H. Beadnall.

The Young Naturalist.

*A Useful Robin.

A short time ago I saw a Robin fast between two pieces of wire netting. I caught the bird and took it in the kitchen and let it fly about while I got it some water to drink and some bread crumbs to eat. The bird came and fed immediately it saw the food. After feeding it I let it go in the open air. Soon after this one of my birds got loose from its cage. The Robin saw this and followed the bird. It then enticed the bird to its cage again, in which it is now.—Sent by Stanley S. Mottershead (age 13), 15, Old Hall Road, Sale, Cheshire.

*The Crow and the Dawn.

A Crow that lived on a tree by a great city in the East thought the day dawned because of his cawing. One day he said: "How important I am! But for my care I confess the world would get into a mess." He had a mind to see how the world would fare if he did not care. So toward day dawn he shut his eyes and slept without cawing. Then he awoke and found the sun shining as well and bright as ever on the great city. So he said, with a deal of ill-humour: "Some knave of my kind must have cawed to help the sun up." (Taken from "Indian Fables.").—G. Nixon (aged 12 years), 84, Common Side, Church Gresley.

Not to be Outdone.

An uncle of mine has a Thrush which is very tame. Sometimes he cuts an apple into two parts, and places one of the pieces in a salt cellar, and puts it in the cage at night, taking it out again next morning, not allowing it to have all of it at once. The Thrush seems very annoyed when he takes it out again. But one night, putting the apple in as usual, the Thrush, not to be outdone this time, stayed up all night, and ate it all up before he stopped. We could hear the bird knocking the salt cellar about whilst we were in bed. The bird is kept in the kitchen where it is quite dark at night.—Sent by George Harrison (aged 13 years), 7, Peel Street, Hyde.

Mr. W. Massey, hon. sec. of the Bolton and Dist. Roller Singing Contest, writes: In addition to the special mentioned in the schedule, there will be a small B.R.C.C. silver medal for best rung bird in amateur class.

Mr. J. W. Metcalf is not the Metcalf referred to in the list of visitors at the Anfield, Everton, and Dis. Society's night show, held Dec. 4, and he received no invitation from me, writes Mr. R. B. Wright, hon. sec.

Messrs. M. Craig, F. Taylor, and E. Barron will be in attendance at the close of the Scottish National Show to see that all birds entered for the Glasgow C.B.A. Show are forwarded correctly, writes Mr. Fred Bowman, sec. of the Glasgow C.B.A.

Fanciers and exhibitors in Yorkshire should not fail to pay a visit to the fourth annual show of the Guisbrough Priory C.B.S., which is being held on Jan. 6 in the Chaloner Hall, Guisbrough. A large entry has been received and everything points to a successful exhibition.

I write to thank you on behalf of the members of the Sheffield C.B.S. for the splendid report you gave us in CAGE BIRDS of our open show, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, the assistant sec. We desire further to thank the exhibitors who favoured us with their entries and helped to make such a grand show.

We are very glad to hear that Mr. J. E. Atkinson, the popular secretary of the Newcastle C.B.S., is well on the way to recovery from his recent serious illness. He writes: "I am now getting about, and recovering my strength, though I cannot start business until the New Year, which means that I have had ten weeks off."

The Bradford East O.S. are holding their fifth annual tea and concert in connection with the distribution of prizes on Jan. 9 in the Park Chapel Schools, New Cross Street, West Bowling. Tea will commence at six o'clock, and the concert at 7.30. A good programme of music, etc., will be provided. Mrs. E. Sudlards has promised to make the presentation.

Harrogate C.B.S. have selected Nov. 30, 1912, for their next annual show, with Mr. W. Mundell as judge, writes Mr. W. E. Fergusson, the sec. The society had such a loss, I am sorry to say, on their late show that they find it impossible to run an entire novice show this year, as was suggested; but we will no doubt give novices a good schedule at the next open show.

I should like to thank, through CAGE BIRNS, Mr. J. Kershaw, sec. of Llanrwst Show, for the careful way he returned my birds. I received them first train looking A1, the prize money a day after, and the cup and other specials I won within three days. This is the way to get support next year. I wish CAGE BIRNS continued success.—H. S. Davies (Llandilo).—Mr. W. A. Dyer, of Plymouth, also writes congratulating the officials of Llanrwst Show on their excellent management.—Ed. "C.B."

AT THE SCOTTISH NATIONAL SHOW.

Our Artist and Our Stall.

At the Scottish National Show, Edinburgh, this week-end (Dec. 30 and Jan. 1), Mr. H. Goodchild, one of CAGE BIRDS staff of artists, will be in attendance prepared to sketch any winning or other bird with a view to its portrayal in the pages of our journal. The terms (which include the original drawing for purposes of framing) may be obtained on enquiry of the attendant at our stall in the show room, to whom orders may be given. Our stall will hold a representative selection of our popular handbooks and coloured plates, and we hope our many friends North of the Border will pay it a visit. Bound volumes of our magnificently illustrated standard works, "Our Canaries," and "Cage Bird Hybrids," will be on view.

We have had the unique experience of not receiving a single complaint from any of our exhibitors this year, writes Mr. D. Shearer, hon. sec. of the Thurso O.S.

We have been notified of the following corrections to show reports:—Broxburn, 1st in pied etc. Scot. Fcy. class, Mr. J. S. Keltie (not Menzies); Frome, 2nd in Yorks hens, Mrs. Holliday (not Wines and Co.).

Under the auspices of the Edinburgh and Dist. C.B.S. a smoking concert has been arranged to take place on Jan. 27 in Morris's Haymarket Restaurant, Haymarket Terrace, Edinburgh, writes Mr. J. I. Mackie, sec. It is hoped members will rally round the members of the Committee and make it a great success. Tickets (only 6d. each) will be on sale from members of the committee, Messrs. Whitefield, Easter, Todd, Charleton, and the sec. The large room which has been engaged is an ideal one and can comfortably accommodate a hundred fanciers and friends.

We are giving two classes for the novice in the British bird section at our forthcoming show and specially printed diplomas for best champion novice, ditto Yorks, best novice Nor., ditto Yorks, best Border in open, best Mule or Hybrids, and best British, write Messrs. Meades and Smith, hon. secs. of the Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S. We are also giving four classes for novice Borders, and an electro-plated cup is given for the best bird in these four classes. So the novices will have a good chance of proving whether these classes are worth adding to our list.

The "forward young Minx" I wrote about in CAGE BIRNS correspondence columns recently has successfully hatched three young ones out of three eggs, and I will report further later, writes Mr. J. Robinson (Hebburn Colliery). I think I shall be first this season.

Everyone must admit the great strides our weekly journal, CAGE BIRNS, is making. It is absolutely full of interest. The novices of to-day do not have to spend a lifetime, or even years, to solve a problem; they get the best of advise free for their pets. The various books issued respecting birds are of great value; a little study, and the novice gets all the information desired, and does not require a judge to go with him to purchase a bird. One cannot speak too highly, either, of the value of CAGE BIRDS to the small advertiser. I wish CAGE BIRDS the success it so well deserves.—W. H. Watson (Coventry).

The December issue of "Bird Notes"—the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—is to hand. It contains a set of copious indexes, comprising separate lists of contributors, plates, and text illustrations, articles and correspondence, generic and specific names of the birds mentioned during the year, and their English names, all of which are of such a comprehensive nature that instantaneous reference to any matter published throughout the year is perfectly easy. The number contains also "Notes on the L.C.B.A. Show," by Mr. Wesley T. Page; "The Sonneberg Aviaries (U.S.A.)," by Mr. Lee S. Crandall; "The Loo-Choo Jay," by Mr. Hubert D. Astley; "Freely-imported Species," by Mr. Philip Gosse; "Breeding (in Captivity) of Goldfinches," by E. Sprankling; etc.—altogether a very interesting number.

A Migratory Hawfinch.

One would hardly look upon the Hawfinch as a migratory species; yet it is on record that one met its death by coming in contact with the lantern of the lighthouse near Beachy Head.

The Love-sick Greenfinch.

The common Greenfinch was mentioned by White of Selborne as behaving in a peculiar manner in the breeding season. He says: "The Doves hang about on the wing in a toying and playful manner, and the Greenfinch in particular exhibits such languishing and faltering gestures as to appear like a wounded and dying bird." This very aptly describes the manners of this bird in the early summer.

Slander Action Arises Out of Excited Glasgow Meeting.

Well-known judge alleges that fellow-member's statement is malicious and damaging to his reputation.

An action for slander of considerable interest to cage bird fanciers was heard at the Glasgow Small Debt Court on Dec. 21, and resulted in a verdict for 1s. damages and costs. The origin of the action is made clear in the following abstract of the "claim" laid by the pursuer, Mr. Marlin.

Claim for George Marlin, Hamilton, pursuer, against R. B. Jarvie, Shawlands, Glasgow, defender. To damages laid at £20 for slander uttered under the following circumstances:—The pursuer is vice-president of the Glasgow O.S., and defender a member of committee. The society held a show in Oct. 1910 at which Alexander MacFarlane was judge of various Canaries. In the class for variegated yellow cocks, judged by MacFarlane, the first prize was given an exhibitor called Duncan Graham for a bird supposed to be his own property. On or about May 20, 1911, it was rumoured that the bird was actually the property of the judge. In June an inquiry was held, and the finding was that the judge, MacFarlane, had lent the bird in question to the exhibitor Graham. The defender was a witness. Subsequently a special meeting of the society was held on July 29. There were about sixty present, including the chairman, David Black, and the secretary, Alexander Macdonald. The Committee of Inquiry's report was discussed, and afterwards the judge MacFarlane, and the exhibitor, Graham, were expelled the society.

The Words Complained of.

In the course of the discussion the pursuer, G. Marlin, asked the chairman if birds belonging to MacFarlane were actually washed and prepared for exhibition in the defender's (R. B. Jarvie's) premises or in his presence. The defender thereupon retorted in the following words or words to the same effect:—"Is it the case that Marlin used his influence with the judge to keep the best bird in the selling class back to fourth place with a view to purchasing the same?" The pursuer immediately denied the truth of this, and the defender thereupon remarked: "Well, MacFarlane said so in front of two or three witnesses." The words spoken by the defender were uttered with the object of suggesting and did suggest and were understood by the parties present to suggest that the pursuer had entered into a compact or endeavoured to enter into a compact with the judge to defraud the owner of the bird in question. Further, the suggestion was absolutely untrue, and was made maliciously. The pursuer is a noted exhibitor, and has been in the habit of acting as judge at various shows in Scotland and Ireland, for which he received remuneration. He is convinced that on account of the slander his reputation for uprightness and honesty has been seriously prejudiced and he has suffered financially and will suffer through the publicity of the slander.

In the Witness-box.

The case (as per above abstract of "claim") was decided before Sheriff Davidson, when a large number of fanciers were called for each side, and the hearing was a lengthy one.

Mr. George Marlin said that his reputation had suffered and that his chances of gaining appointments as judge had been prejudiced. This year he had only had two such engagements; in other years he had four or five.

Cross-examined by Mr. Strang, the witness admitted that at the annual general meeting he had first attacked Jarvie, who at that meeting had made no onslaught on him (Marlin). Further, he admitted that he had renewed the attack at the July meeting, and that it was after this second attack that Jarvie used the words as set forth in the claim. Before the annual meeting he and Jarvie had been on quite friendly terms. Jarvie had given him a bird as a present, but he thought he got it because it was no good for exhibition purposes. The bird (a hybrid) ultimately was able to win in good company.

Mr. John Roulston said the judge did not know what classes he was to judge before the morning of the show. He admitted washing birds belonging to MacFarlane in Jarvie's premises for this show at which MacFarlane officiated. It was a common practice, however, to wash in Jarvie's place, as he (Jarvie) had admirable facilities. Witness further said he was going to tell all, but his further examination ceased here.

Mr. Peter Pettigrew said the impression he gathered from the statement made against Marlin was that he was a blackguard. Cross-examined, witness said it was a lively meeting, and what Marlin had said against Jarvie was not injurious.

The Judge's Denial.

A MacFarlane said he never was asked by Marlin to keep the bird back in the prize-list.

Alexander Macdonald (secretary of the society) said Jarvie voluntarily gave the information to the committee of enquiry regarding the washing of the birds in his premises. He understood that it was a general thing for quite a lot of birds to be prepared at Jarvie's for shows throughout the season; he had a good place for this purpose. Jarvie had received provocation from Marlin and others before he put the question to Marlin regarding the selling class bird. To his mind there was no malice in the question. There had been a great many similar questions put at all the meetings, which were all put for the purpose of getting at the bottom of the incidents surrounding the October 1910 show.

David Black (chairman) said he had great difficulty in controlling the meeting. There were many questions put of a similar nature.

A. K. Chalmers said he was present when MacFarlane said about Marlin asking that the bird in question might be kept back in the tickets so that he (Marlin) might purchase it cheap at auction.

Mr. Jarvie (defender) said he had had great provocation at the meeting, and although he admitted asking the question he was prompted to do so that the society might be rid of all who were in any way connected with practices that were not proper. He bore no malice towards Marlin at the time, nor now. At the meeting discussion was invited on points connected with the recent show.

The agent for pursuer submitted that he had abundantly proved his case.

The agent for the defence said pursuer had failed to prove malice or that his feelings were hurt, and submitted that what had been said by his client had been said "in rixa," and therefore no case, he thought, was established at great length. He instanced several cases where actions had failed owing to malice being not proven.

The Sheriff's View.

The Sheriff said that no doubt great provocation had been received, but the law did not permit of a man saying (for instance): "Mr. A. is 'broke to the world' and in a bad way—at least, Mr. B. told me so, and I believe it." Had Jarvie, after Marlin denied the allegation, withdrawn what he had said, there could be no case, but this had not been done. He could not accept the plea of privilege, therefore he awarded damages of 1s. and costs.

We have been notified of the following corrections to show reports:—L.C.B.A., 1st and 3rd Crest-bred Unflig., Mr. R. S. Bewick (not Taylor); Bootle, class 9, 2nd, Mr. R. Algie (not Lobb), and class 11, 3rd, Mr. R. Algie (not Lobb); Blairgowrie, class 72 (foreign), 11 entries (not 9); and Mr. S. W. Pestell won gold medal, and Mr. Sykes spl for 2nd best foreign; Wallsend, the Percy Hood £10 10s. silver cup won by Mr. Jas. Johnston (not McGinn), also in the old Green Border Fcy. class, 1st, Mr. Jas. Johnston (not McQuillan).

NEW YEAR GIFTS.

They will Delight Fancier Friends.

What better New Year gift could you give to a bird-loving friend than either of the handsomely bound standard works, "Our Canaries" (post free, 15s.), and "Cage Bird Hybrids" (post free 7s. 6d.); or select your friend any of CAGE BIRNS books, particulars of which will be found on our back page. Then there are CAGE BIRDS watches, the best on the market at the price (5s., post free), high-class in appearance, and guaranteed splendid time keepers, sure to be appreciated. Or maybe you have friends just setting up house keeping; what better than our framed coloured plates to meet this case? All particulars can be obtained on application to the Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

All London will doubtless be flocking to Olympia during these next few weeks to see the widely-discussed spectacle of "The Miracle." The audience will find that the effectiveness of some of the scenes is due in a large measure to the introduction of highly trained horses and hounds. It is interesting to know that the horses are fed regularly on Molassine Meal, while the hounds much enjoy their Molassine Dog Cakes. These foods grow in popularity.

Hints which may Lift Your Birds in the Prize List.

The sketch shows a very simple and easily made drying cage, which I have had in use for a number of years, and have always found very effective. It only costs a few pence, and is just as useful as some of the elaborate affairs that one sees. A box from the grocer will suit—about 18in. by 10in.. by 8in. Take out the bottom, and turn the box on its side. Tack a piece of calico on the back, and on the front put two strips of wood with small grooves—narrow piece at the top and wider piece at bottom—and between these (in the grooves) slide the piece of glass as shown in sketch. Glass is much better than wire, as the birds cannot jump against it and get soiled as they might on wire, and it also keeps them away from draughts. One can make a small hole in each wooden end near the top for ventilation, or the ventilation can be regulated by not shutting the glasses too tightly together (if the glass is in two pieces, one can get at the birds much easier than if in one large piece, and this does away with the necessity of a door).

Place three perches low down from front rail to strip of wood at back. Place calico back towards fire and watch progress of birds through the glass. When a novice goes to some lectures and hears that we should use special appliances, special room, special soaps, water, etc., etc., he sometimes feels that it is too much for him, and perhaps the pocket is limited. But he will find that he can by this means prepare birds for show and win, at little or no expense or trouble. I have myself washed dozens of birds—Yorkshires, Norwich, Crests, Lancashires, Foreigners, etc.—in the following way, with every satisfaction—turning out winners in champion classes, cup winners, etc.

All the novice needs is: Some dry cloths (old linen is the best)—one or two fair-sized pieces for wiping the birds on, and several pieces about 15in. long by 5in. wide for rolling—these should be placed before the fire to get warm; three fair sized bowls, one for the first soaping, the others for rinsing, some good oil soap (I find William's shaving soap as good as anything), a small shaving brush, and a small sponge; also a sprayer is useful. Sometimes one hears Gossages, Hudson's soap-powder, soda and borax recommended by those who do not know any better. My advice to the novice is, take no notice, and use none of these—as they are far too strong, and although they will fetch all the dirt quickly out of the plumage, its texture is not improved.

Some Pointers to Success.

When washing your birds see that all these waters are nice and warm, but not too hot; and the last one should be the coolest. Some fanciers put a little spirits of wine in the rinsing water, which has a very good effect in straightening feathers, and getting the birds quickly into condition; but this is quite unnecessary if the birds are properly washed and well rinsed.

Take the bird in the hand and well wet all over, not too much on the head at first; then lather well in first bowl, doing the back first. To do the flights, open the wing slightly on the side of the hand, as if it is dirty it is not easily washed in a closed state. Always wash the way of the feather, from neck to the tail, and if the bird is held in the centre of hand the tail can be easily washed on the wrist. Then turn the bird over and do the breast in the same way. Always do the head last, and do not leave the soap on the bird's nostrils, but rinse off at once in second water; then finish in the third water, where every bit of the soap should be rinsed out. One will find the sponge very useful in rinsing. Wipe as much moisture as possible out of the feathers on one of the larger cloths. Then roll the bird in one of the small pieces, and place it with tail towards the fire, care being taken not to put it too close. After a few minutes place bird in drying cage, and when it is almost dry, put it in a show cage. It is also a good plan to spray just a little with warm water, and put the cage in a light, warm position, such as the mantelshelf, until it is quite dry.

A Bunting that Scores on the Show-Bench.

By J. B. CAUNT (Beeston, Notts.)

An Article Accompanying our Frontispiece of this week.

"Corn Buntings!" Doesn't the name conjure up the time British bird men have spent in steadying the species? All I can say is, to put it short, it requires a real British bird man and—patience.

Their only thought during the first weeks of captivity seems to be, "How soon can I smash myself up, and also the cage?"; and it doesn't take long I assure you. They absolutely refuse, when you approach the cage, to look at you; and, truth to tell, you do not want to look at them. I am dwelling on this point of steadiness, because when you come to stage one you win 50 points for steadiness out of the 100 allotted if your bird is right down steady. I myself have been rather successful on the show bench, which plainly shows the trouble I have had to take.

My first Corn Bunting I had as the result of seeing one a few years ago at that well-known Nottingham fancier's home, Mr. H. J. Chick. During several conversations on the bird I determined I would put a Corn Bunting on the show bench. Then my troubles began; but I am pleased to say I am well rewarded, for have I not in the space of three seasons had quite a number of highest honours placed to my credit, with quite half a dozen specimens?

Choosing a Winner.

It might be asked, "Where do you get your Corn Buntings from?" There is only one place, and that is from the catcher. You may visit all the catchers locally for months and never see one; then suddenly you may see quite a number. If you do see a number, buy the lot. Get them home, and run each into a show cage; then select them to the best of your ability from the following description: First, a good, big, wide skull or head, well pencilled and distinct; very short neck; well-rounded body—not long and thin—with the pencilling or markings extremely plentiful, and carried all the way down well underneath the belly and as far down the sides to the root of the tail. When the bird is in first-class show condition it must show almost a distinct cheek marking like the Yellow Bunting. This should be very noticeable when you come minutely to examine the bird. The body should be of a solid warm colour all over—what we fanciers term "a deep colour" or "depth of colour"—with the darker markings of the feathers very distinct and "pencilly," giving the specimen the appearance that it is one mass of markings all over on a solid, richly-tanned body colour. The throat must be chokeful of small ticking, coming right from the base of the beak, down into the breast markings, which should be larger as you come further down the body—after the style of an arrow; hence the term "good arrow markings on breast."

These markings and the body colour are really the show points of an exhibition Corn Bunting. Of course, to win outright the bird must be what we term "a stormer," or an exceptionally big bird. To attract the judge the specimen must have all the above named points, and must have a nice easy carriage—it should carry itself at an angle of 45 degrees or thereabouts; it must not crouch, or stand too high, as either fault detracts very considerably from the ideal specimen.

The Difficult Period.

When you think you have an ideal specimen in the rough, for the first few weeks of its cage life you must keep it in a stock cage, say, about two feet long, 1½ feet wide, and about 5 inches high; no perches; and a canvas cage-top. Keep the bird on the floor of your bird-room, and after a few weeks gradually raise the cage day by day until it is on a level with your face, so that you can look well into the cage. Next get a similar cage with a couple of perches, say, about two inches off the bottom of the cage, but instead of the cage being 5 inches high, let it be 7 or 8 inches—still with a canvas top, this to prevent the bird damaging any part of the head. Now commence to offer the bird titbits, such as mealworms, spiders, insects of all kinds, and wire-worms, talking to it the while. Every time you visit the bird offer it a mealworm, and get it to take them from your hand. In the course of time your bird will soon recognise you and put confidence in you; and it will not bang itself about so unmercifully.

Now that you are getting the bird steady the greatest help is to allow the bird to have a bath as often as he likes; the more often the better; and you will soon see coming that lovely sheen which is very necessary in a show specimen, making the bird to appear in the height of condition, glistening all over with health.

Staging and Feeding.

To stage your bird well is considered essential. The cage should be well made; in size, 12 inches long, 6 or 7 inches wide, and 10 inches high, painted or enamelled a light holly-green inside, the wires and the outer parts black; also there should be clean snow-white perches.

For diet give best Spanish canary seed, a little mixed seed weekly, together with some good insectivorous food and mealworms occasionally as you wish. The nesting site of the species is usually well hidden amongst a thick tangled hedge bottom bordering a grass field, with plenty of clear fresh water running in the vicinity. They lay four or five eggs, and the young should be taken for hand-rearing purposes about 8 or 10 days old. The locality of the birds is generally from the Midlands up to the North; in Scotland they are very rarely found south of the River Trent, the Cirl Buntings seeming to take their place further south.

During the moult I find that a little colour-food given two or three times a week greatly enhances the colour of the bird, besides helping to give a nice "bloom" to the feather.

In conclusion, I will repeat that the man who can moult a fresh-caught Corn Bunting, steady it, and put it down on the bench in perfect show condition is a real British bird man.

THROUGH A BIRD-ROOM WINDOW.

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

For weeks and weeks I used to watch my Poës in the hopes of seeing some sign of house-keeping. I often wish I had the receipt for fern-seed to walk invisible and see how things are getting on—but watch as I could, in this case, I could see nothing. I used to see them making love, chasing each other at lightning speed in and out of one bush and into another, but I could never see any solid nest building.

I used to see angry disputes sometimes, which made me think that perhaps things were going right; but I am afraid I did not then know the difference between talk and conversation. A little boy once asked his father this. "All the difference in the world," my lad, he replied. "Your mother converses with other people, but she talks to me." As I look back over the years, I can only regretfully conclude that Mrs. Poë was talking only.

As the days began to draw in, I was afraid to leave the Poës out, so I caught them up and transferred them to a cold room aviary. Here they spent their first and only winter. They became wonderfully tame and familiar, and when I went into the bird-room they showed no more interest in me than Diogenes showed in Alexander. It was a very severe winter, and though I suffered keenly in attending to their wants they appeared not at all inconvenienced by the cold. When spring returned, I flattered myself that my troubles were over. Alas! they were only beginning.

One morning I entered the birdroom and I could only see one Poë hopping about. The next moment I saw why; the other was lying dead on the floor with its toes in the air; and my only consolation was to believe, as an old Sussex shepherd once said to me of one of his old mates, that it had just died a nat'ral death. There was no sign of pain or suffering, no disarrangement of plumage, he had died as he had lived—spick and span to the last. Marius amid the ruins of Carthage could not have worn a more tragic air than I did that morning when I picked up my poor departed friend.

No Tears Shed She!

I wired off to Mr. Abrahams for a replica of my favourite, but alas! he had sold all his Poë birds some months before; and all I could do was to have my poor friend "set up." I never seriously believed that I should get another live Poë, and I was not mistaken. From that day to this I have never so much as heard of one. My survivor, I regret to say, did not seem to mourn unduly for her dead mate, and I believe that in this respect she was not unlike some members of the human family. So far as I could see, she thoroughly enjoyed life, if I may judge by her appetite, which never seemed to languish. I don't like to calumniate any one, but I verily believe that her inordinate fondness for good living was the cause of her end; for about a year later I found her dead, still as fat as a mole; and as the result, I fear, of an apoplectic seizure. That was the end of my Poë experience. I sorrowfully picked her up, put her decently into a cardboard box and sent her to the setter-up for a few weeks. She came back, looking very life like; but alas! incapable of ever moving again; and now, side by side they will sit.

I often repeat over them the words of David's song over Saul and Jonathan. "They were lonely in their lives, and in death they were not divided"; and I look back on the days when my Poës were with me as some of the brightest and happiest in my avian experiences. I sometimes think that if ever I grow rich enough to take a long holiday, I will go to Australia and see if I can't find a pair of Poë birds to replace my favourites of long ago. I even dream that perhaps someone who reads these words will be moved with compassion and send me a pair as a present. It is hard to say after how many days and in what manner bread cast upon the waters may be found.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

About a Roller.

Pakeha.—Why do you make a point of saying the bird's eyes seems fairly bright? Is it because you suspect something may be wrong with them which causes its silence? Really, any healthy bird should seem to have quite bright, or, indeed, very bright eyes. You had better catch the bird and look closely at its eyes in a good light. If you find they have a kind of milky white spot in the centre, then the bird is doubtless blind with cataract, and this would account for its temporary loss of song. In this case you can do nothing whatever to relieve it, though it will get about well enough and keep healthy. You should get the "Nutshell" booklet on the Roller, which our Manager will send you for 2½d. post free. Meantime treat as follows for a fortnight, but in the first place make yourself sure that the bird is not in a draughty position, nor where the fluctuations of temperature are excessive. As a staple diet give a mixture of two parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge, sprinkled with a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure, and twice each week on the intervening days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle, and on each of the remaining alternating days a morsel of banana or apple, or a tiny spray of watercress if obtainable, and quite free from frost. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts daily for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

Questions About Breeding.

W. F. Darby.—Yes, we are always pleased to help any reader out of a difficulty when possible, and there is no fee required for information given here—thanks, all the same. To make CAGE BIRDS known to your birdy friends is a sufficient recompense. As regards breeding and rearing young with only a supply of seeds and green food is far too experimental a matter for me to recommend you to attempt. There are some hens which will rear their young quite well on seeds and green food alone, even when the best of soft foods are supplied regularly, but they are quite in the minority—may almost be termed rarities—and you can never tell which hens may or may not adopt this line of contrariness, as most fanciers would consider it. A far better plan, and one you might easily succeed with, is to keep a ready prepared substitute for egg-food, of which you would only need to take the required quantity for a meal, put it in a saucer, sprinkle a very few drops of water over it, stir up with a fork into a crumbly moist mass, and give to the birds. To do this is simply a matter of a few moments. A very good food of this description is to well mix a pound of crushed maizena wafer biscuits and half a pound of pure desiccated yolk of egg. If you get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," or the early parts of "Our Canaries," you would find a number of such substitutes dealt with, and you would also doubtless realise how trivial is the time in reality which need be taken up in preparing proper fresh egg-food. You might keep one cock and three hens in the aviary, but not more, as this is the limit to stand a tolerable chance of success in breeding, and you would also need to remove each brood of young as soon as they were able to do for themselves. Put in five resting sites at least, and do not place any one considerably higher than the rest, or the hens will all quarrel over it. If there is anything else you wish to know do not hesitate to ask a question.

Asthma and Broken Wing.

C. B. M.—(1) I am sorry to disappoint you, but from your description of the symptoms I do not think anything you can do will prove of any material benefit to the bird. It is probably quite beyond help. If anything at all will relieve it, the following treatment for a few weeks will do so. Keep in a comfortable place, not overheated, and quite free from draughts and the fumes of burning light. Feed the same as advised to "E. L. D.," but omit the seed mixture. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and afterwards 20 drops of the following mixture, which any chemist will mix for you, every second day for a fortnight, then omit it for a week, and repeat for another fortnight. Mixture: Two drachms each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one drachm each of ipecacuanha wine and chlorodyne, and eight grains of iodide of potassium. The remedy you name is very good for ordinary cases, but where the above fails, given a fair trial under proper conditions, the case is generally hopeless. (2) Amateur attempts to "set" a broken wing are extremely inadvisable and often give rise to unintentional, though not the less deplorable, cruelty. The proper treatment is of quite a negative character. Put the bird at once into a small and quite low-roofed cage with a perch about an inch or inch and a-half from the floor, and food and water vessels quite easily get-at-able, and keep the bird as quiet as possible, never fluttering it about until it begins to move about and plume its wings voluntarily. The object is to encourage the bird to give its wing absolute rest, and leave the cure to Nature. I have seen such excellent results from this method that I consider any interference wholly inexcusable.

Canary-Keeping in India.

Indian.—The mosquito trouble which you are concerned about is, I find, rather troublesome to Canary breeders in several tropical countries where this pest is common. The safest remedy is to arrange the cages conveniently all together, and then cover them in the evening with mosquito net, just as you might protect the sleeping place of humans. Another useful protection which prevails in the West Indies is to give the birds thick, or wide and flat-topped perches, so that the bird literally stands on its perch when at roost, and the toes are completely covered and hidden among the plumage as the bird sits at rest. The toes being, so I am told, the usual point of attack, on account of being the most vulnerable when gripping an ordinary sized perch, the method of protection seems a very useful one. I presume you can get summer rape in India. Anyway, a correspondent recently sent me a very nice sample from there. Great Scot! What would English fanciers think of paying 6s. per lb. for canary seed? Surely this cannot be the ordinary price regularly. I should think it would come much cheaper than that if you had it sent out from England. You would find crushed plain dry biscuit a useful item of diet, but must not overdo it to cause fatness to be a trouble. It is interesting to note that you colour-feed your birds with nasturtium ("estertion," as you call them) flowers, and are very pleased with the result. Of course, I ought to say it is very wrong to give birds such unnatural (?) stuff, and make them an unnatural (?) and fraudulent (?) colour. These flowers are not now used in England for colour-feeding unless it is for such as Border Fancies, which are not allowed to be colour-fed for show. They have been quite superseded by the so-called tasteless pepper. Yes, a number of copies of "Cage Birds" are sent to India. A short note to our correspondence column, with address attached, which the Editor might insert, would be the best means of getting into touch with other Indian fanciers, and perhaps forming a society. If you wish for this write the Editor.

Disinfecting Cages (Starter).—Whether you have reason to suspect infection in your cages or not, it is a most wise policy to thoroughly wash them out with a good disinfectant, and generally treat them as "suspected," when overhauling them preparatory to the commencement of the breeding season. To do so need not really add a vast amount of labour whilst the job is in hand. Get the Nutshell booklet on "Disinfection," which will give you full details about the matter, too lengthy to be given here.

Roller Hoarse (Spero).—See that it is not exposed to draughts or extremes of heat and cold. Feed as directed in the Nutshell booklet on "The Roller," or you would do well to read a chapter on Rollers in House's "Manual," 1s. 2d., post free. Get a teaspoonful of pure honey, a similar quantity of cod liver oil emulsion, and as much powdered grain of paradise as will cover a sixpence, mix well together in a warm cup or glass, and add sufficient finely pounded biscuit to reduce it to a fairly stiff dough. A sprinkling of maw may be added whilst mixing. When the vessel has cooled the paste will be solid enough to cut like cheese. Keep a small cube of this stuck in the wires, or in the egg drawer, until the hoarseness disappears.

Birds Moulting (E. L. D.).—The change from the living room, where the temperature doubtless was often quite warm, to the attic which is only about eight degrees above "freezing point," is the cause of the sudden moulting. Such a violent change should have been postponed until the weather became milder in spring. It will be far better now to let the moult follow its normal course, only taking precaution that the birds are quite protected from draughts and damp, and, as far as possible, from severe fluctuations of temperature. In addition to the usual staple of canary seed, give a pinch of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give a similar quantity of a mixture of hemp, inga, teazle, and millet in equal parts. Continue this for two or three weeks; add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water three times a week during the same time.

Owing to the Xmas Holidays, a number of queries have necessarily to wait an answer until next week. – Editor.

Hens Getting Forward (J. M. T.).—If your room is heated you must use discretion to keep it reasonably low, say, not higher than fifty degrees or lower than forty-five, during the mild, open weather such as we have at time of writing. It will require very little artificial aid indeed to do this on many days, but at night a little extra will always be required even during the mildest spells to maintain the temperature fairly equable during the night. In addition to avoiding too high a temperature feed any hens that appear to be getting very fresh quite plainly, cutting off all extras if need be, save only just a small pinch of inga twice a week, and a scrap of crushed plain biscuit, or sponge cage, or egg food, not more than once a week. If this is not sufficient add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the drinking water twice a week, and, if convenient, keep the hens out of sight and hearing of the cocks.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

A Thrush Ailing (A. Holman).—In my opinion the trouble is the result of wrong feeding, which has extended over a long period—bread and hemp seed is wretched fare for any bird, and the addition of cheese does not make it any better. Unless you feed it rationally, your Thrush will never get over the weak state of health into which it has lapsed, and the occasional fits will no doubt become constant and end in the dissolution of the bird. Get the "Nutshell" booklet on the Song Thrush (only 2½d. post free from CAGE BIRDS office) and manage the bird on the lines laid down therein, when it should gradually recover. Buy a small bottle of extract of malt and hypophosphites (combined) from a chemist, and well mix a small teaspoonful every day amongst the bird's soft food.

A Goldfinch-Greenfinch Hybrid (A. G.).—It is interesting to hear that you caught the Goldie-Greenie Hybrid whilst out bird-catching. Probably it had escaped from some fanciers' room or aviary. With regard to the constipation, get one ounce of syrup of buckthorn from a chemist and stir half-a-teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Give for two days (fresh daily, of course). Then if necessary give a further dose after a day's interval on plain water. This will remove the constipation and effectively cleanse the bird's system. Give canary seed, by all means, but not niger; let him have a little cracked sunflower now and again.

Two Items (L.W.E.).—(1) There is little to do during the winter beyond feeding the Greenfinch correctly and well; and you are doing this if, as you say, you are following the advice given in the "Nutshell" booklet. I always recommend the two-compartment breeding cage for a beginner at mules; in it the birds are so well under control. Most of my own are 36in. long; some are 40 inches. Height about 16in., width not less than 11in. (some of mine extend to 18 inches for Hybrid couples). There is a movable partition in the centre. In this cage the pair can be run throughout the winter, the hen Canary in one half and the Greenfinch in the other, with the wired slide (partition) between. They thus have an opportunity of getting well acquainted by the time the breeding season comes round (a very helpful factor towards success). (2) Judging by your description I should say that there is not much hope of this Linnet from the Mule-breeding point of view. There is nothing more annoying than a wild bird in a breeding cage, dashing about and upsetting everything. Of course, the bird may be worth keeping for another year, as after a house moult he may be quite a reformed character so far as wildness goes. It is easy to mule with Linnets which are not house-moulted so long as they are "kind" birds; and it is easy to pick out a "kind" young Linnet in almost any birdshop for from 5d. to a 1s.—a bird that will settle down and be singing in anything from a fortnight to a month. By the way, you will find "Secrets of Mule-breeding" (only 1s. 1d. post free from CAGE BIRDS) interesting and full of hints.

Young Mule Not Moulting (Ferry Hill).—If you wait until we have a spell of cold weather, then shift this Mule from your cold-room into a heated living-room, I think you will find him begin to get rid of his feathers six or seven days later and go successfully through with his moult. Of course, you will need to keep him in the heated room, not move him back to the cold one. It is impossible to explain these vagaries; I have a Siskin Mule only about half through its moult, although its nest-brothers completed theirs close upon two months ago.

Mealworms and a Flight (No Name).—Most certainly the mealworms sold by dealers are alive. What an odd question! They thrive best if kept in a warm place and fed on a mixture of equal parts bran and barley meal. See "Nutshell" booklet No. 26. You say your flight is "4ft. 6 by 1ft. 6"; but do you mean 1ft. 6in. high or wide? Unless one knows both height and width it is not possible to say how many birds a flight will hold—the width, in fact, is quite as important as the length, as it is the floor space which determines the holding capacity.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Ring-necks, Cardinals, etc.

J. R. B. (1).—First, have you a true pair? The hen Ring-neck has no neck ring! Again, Parrakeets do not always breed their second year, and if yours are young birds and a true pair they should ultimately settle down—with many species it is quite uncertain at present at what age they commence to breed. Parrakeets of all species usually take a season at least to settle down, so leave them together for another week. Again, a young male has no neck ring, and an adult male with ring and a young one without a ring would not fraternise, but keep at a distance from each other. (2). Pope, Green, Virginian, and Red-crested Cardinals have all been bred in captivity. The Pope and Red-crested have crossed with each other, and both the Pope and Red-crested have crossed with the Green. (3) If in an aviary you might get either the Red-crested or the Green, but the latter are the freest breeders. (4) They will not use a husk, but either build a cup-shaped nest in a branch or some available box. (5) The plumage of the sexes of the Pope and Red-crested are alike, but if near of an age, the hen, in either case, is infinitesimally smaller and duller. The sexes of Virginian and Green Cardinals are distinct in plumage.

Procuring birds in bulk (Constant).—I am quite unable to reply to you, as your query contains neither a stamped addressed envelope nor any address on query! Am keeping query by me.

A Long Budgerigar (M. Mitchell).—Of course, there was possibly some latent infection left behind from its dead mate, but hardly probable after this period. I am assuming you have it caged indoors, and you must see, both that it is not in a draughty situation nor yet the vitiated corner of the room. Give it daily one dron of Dinneford's Magnesia direct from a quill to its beak, till the bowels have been freely relieved. Also put half-a-dozen drops of sherry into the daily supply of drinking water (only about one tablespoonful in a small glass or china vessel) daily for a week or fortnight, when you had better report progress. In addition to canary, white spray millet, supply a few crushed oats, small leaf of lettuce or green food, and one or two small pieces of plain biscuit. Mix a pinch of grit (not sand) among the daily supply of seed. I should keep the new bird quite apart till the ailing bird is not again.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post: it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

The Easiest in the World.

Sir,—In reply to "Yorkshire," the catching of Robins is about the easiest thing in the world. The most difficult problem to most amateur and professional bird catchers (who are in quest of other specimens) is how not to catch Robins, as these most often hop on to one's limed twigs and spring traps just in front of the very birds one is in quest of. The simple recipe for taking a Robin is to get the following: The good old-fashioned cinder sieve, a wooden peg five inches long, a length of string about ten yards long, attached to peg; the edge of sieve to rest on peg standing upright; also a few crumbs and scraps from table, or, better still, a few mealworms; a sudden jerk, when Robin gets underneath the sieve—and there you are!

Views Upon Breeding the Norwich Plainhead.

Sir,—In breeding prize birds, when buying the stock birds, get as large a marked yellow cock as possible. It does not matter if a little rough and long if he has these good points: a big head, broad shoulders, and full back. To match this cock, get a chubby buff hen, with full chest. If small it does not matter if the cock is large. Sometimes you will have to introduce the Crestbred cock to get size, as it is the large birds that are winning in the shows. From the pair I have been speaking about you are likely to get a prize bird. To get your birds into breeding form, give a little egg food and maw seed twice a week. Before starting to breed, do out the cages with sanitary distemper, also the nest pans, as it helps to keep away the red mite. Allow plenty of light, keep the cages out of draughts, and trouble the birds as little as possible. Cut the hen's nails. Keep cuttle-bone in the wires, as it keeps the beak in order, and so helps the hen to feed young birds. When the hen is sitting on eggs give no egg food. The eggs will take thirteen or fourteen days to hatch. When young come, give no green food for three days. After that give green food along with egg food, which should consist of tea biscuits and egg (sometimes oatmeal and egg), and a little scalded rape seed. After the young birds leave their mother, put into a nursery cage hung on the breeding cage, and the cock will feed the young birds through the wires. After a week or so, put them in a flight cage about 4ft. long, and crush the seed for three weeks. Give no green food, but a little scalded rape seed. Watch they do not get slipped claws. If necessary, take them out and put them in a cage with very broad spars, and they will soon come right. If a young bird gets soft, give scalded milk and bread. When young are going through the moult, give some saffron in the drinking water, also a little egg food. To get the young ready for show, take out of flight and frequently put into show cage, for about a month before the show. Handle the cage and look at the bird often, so that it will get steady.

What Causes Short Entries?

A Believer in the 1s. Fee.

Sir,—Permit me to reply to Mr. E. A. Stickland, the secretary of Royal Windsor Show. I am quite prepared to accept his statement that he did not receive an application for a schedule from me. But when he concludes that the postcard bearing the postmark of Godalming comes from me, it is time to set his mind at rest, as I live between 160 and 180 miles north-east of that place (the Editor knows my address). The particular postcards I sent to Mr. Stickland, and also to the Derby secretary, were sufficiently striking to the eye as to almost demand attention, and I am absolutely certain I did not send those cards out without my signature on them. I need no comforting, Mr. Stickland, and I am quite ready to admit I am not the only one who makes mistakes, for it is very evident that if you did not receive my card someone else has made a mistake as to its delivery. I do not agree with Mr. Morgan's suggestion that four entries should be charged as 3s., as that, I believe, would be too low a figure; but my firm belief is that if entries were kept at 1s. per class, secretaries would receive on an average twenty per class, and more, especially so if the classification included two limit classes (or more), say one 50s. and one £5. Such classes, I am convinced, would over and above cover the cost of prize-money. Looking over the balance sheets of some cage bird societies might convince me that their shows were not a financial success, but it would not convince me that the 1s. entry fee would increase the loss. I am prepared to back up my faith in the 1s. fee to the extent of £1 towards the cost of hiring a suitable hall, centrally situated, if other fanciers could be found to do likewise. A good classification could be issued, 15s. per class prize money given, and 1s. entry fee charged If there are any sporting fanciers willing to take this matter up I shall be pleased to take my share of the above loss should any result, and should there be a balance to good of, say, £4 or £5, I would suggest that a cup be purchased and presented to the Crystal Palace Show committee on condition that it be put up for annual competition in a £3 limit class for any variety of Canary, but open only to those who have never won a prize in open champion classes.

Arthur J. Dazeley.

Sir,—I have visited a good number of open bird shows now, having been in the Fancy for years. It was always my hobby to attend as many as I could. At some of the shows we had to walk single file down the passages; and each entry was 2s. Had the entry money been 1s., there would not have been any passages to walk down! I hope secretaries will not reduce their usual entry fee to 1s., or, if they do, they will get large-sized Borders in the Norwich Plainhead classes, and perhaps Sparrows in the Linnet classes, and instead of engaging one hall, we should need two or three "picture-dromes" to hold the rest of the exhibits. What an expense!

Geo. Smith.

A Carrion Crow on a Window Sill.

Sir,—I thought readers might be interested in this photo of a Carrion Crow, or, as they are locally called in my native county of Bucks, Gaw Crows. It was shot and only winged on the farm adjoining my house, so I saw it alive and can testify to the truthfulness of this photo of the bird on the window-sill of the house. It shows the grey very plainly on the back and underneath. Strange to say, I was walking over this same farm about a fortnight ago and saw two of these birds chasing a hawk off their beat, upon which no doubt he had intruded. They appeared very determined to be rid of him, for first one and then the other made a dive at him, and apparently he seemed well pleased to be quit of their company.

A Fancier Chum Wanted in Vancouver, Canada.

Sir,—Having been a constant reader of your valuable paper, Cage Birds, I take the liberty to ask if you will publish me the following inquiry. Being interested in birds as a hobby, I am sorry to say I have not been fortunate enough to meet anyone interested in this kind of pleasure since I came to British Columbia. But I shall be greatly pleased to hear from anyone out here who is taken up with this instructive hobby of ours. If they will call or send a postcard, I shall be most heartily pleased to make their acquaintance. I am not particular whether they reside a few miles away, as I shall be glad to take the journey. I wish Cage Birds all the prosperity it so well deserves.

Where Does Scotland Come In?

A Roller Canary Club Suggested.

Sir,—As an old-time fancier of the Roller, and one of the few who had the honour of forming the British Roller Canary Club, I was much interested to read in your issue of to-day's date Mr. Forrest's notes of his interview with Mr. J. Thompson, the Roller breeder, of Stevenston. Sundry causes have combined to prevent my breeding Rollers for a long time. As I have been living in Glasgow for the last few years, I have lost even the opportunity I might have had in London of attending an occasional Roller contest in connection with some cage bird show. This has been a matter of sincere regret to me, all the more as I understand that during these last few years the contest Roller's song has been improved in point of variety. This news has been like adding fuel to the fire of my more or less ever-present curiosity in regard to Rollers and their doings. The last paragraph of Mr. Forrest's article raises a very appropriate question. I see that Roller Canary clubs are growing and flourishing and holding contests in all directions South of the Border, and I may be excused if I ask "Where does Scotland come in?" When it is noted that these said contests—even in the country towns—attract such a company of feathered competitors as 201 in five classes at Wolverhampton and 152 in five classes at Leeds, it would seem that Scotland is not taking her fair share in the development of this absorbing fancy. Is Auld Scotia going going to remain content to lag behind such districts as South Wales, etc.? To form a club, one of the first essentials is obviously members. To get members you must find persons interested. To arouse interest, some good Rollers must be heard. This is where our cage bird associations and show committees come in. It is clearly their duty and privilege to see to it that all bird lovers have the opportunity of hearing what can be done by the musician of the bird world. Given that opportunity, interest in our songsters may be left to take care of itself. To a person possessing as much as half an ear, the beauty of song of a first-rate Roller is nothing less than a revelation. Are there no breeders of high-class Rollers in Glasgow. If there are any such, and they have in their possession specimens of the modern type such as are now winning the contest prizes in all parts of the country (except Scotland), the undersigned would much prize an opportunity of hearing them. If any fanciers in Glasgow are sufficiently interested to discuss the pros and cons of the formation of a Roller club, or any local cage bird association would like to be informed of the few essentials connected with a Roller contest, I venture to put myself at their service.

A Powerful Plea for Novice Classes.

Would They Help Societies Financially?

Sir,—I believe the novices have at last got a move on them in various centres to obtain better terms all round, and will continue to gently but firmly insist upon a levelling-up with regard to classification at shows, etc. Then we shall not only see a largely increased entry at the shows, but encouragement to those who are entitled to it, not forgetting that with the increased classification there would soon be numbers of novices going up into the open classes, as it would then be much easier to get three first prizes and go up with honour. With regard to novice British classes, the shows are so few in number that give the novice a chance, that I would appeal to societies to take up this question seriously. If nothing better can be done, pass a resolution that the novices be allowed to show their British in the open classes without it affecting their standing in the Canary section (they can do with them in that section). Their inclusion would help to stop that short entry cry. What branch of the Fancy would suffer if this were allowed? Why, none. The whole Fancy would benefit, and very largely. Even members' shows would experience its beneficial influence. A case in point: Our society (the Ardwick and Dist. C.B.S.) in October altered its novice rule so that the novices can show their British in the open all over the kingdom if they desire. What has been the result? There were nearly 300 birds in the show, including 61 British—a remarkable result in so short a time. At our two previous annual shows the number of British were: 1909, 16; and 1910, 9. That is what I call satisfactory to the society and encouragement to its members. I also know other members who are on the look-out for likely field-moulted specimens to try and mule with, and also "have a flutter" in the open classes. One class only in the open British section for novices is a snare and a delusion to any novice who only keeps the popular varieties of Hardbill. What chance have they of coming out on top against the rarer and bigger birds? I am just now looking at a schedule which reads: "Open British Bird Section, 10 classes. Open Novice, one class (any variety)." One class, and that class useless to 90 per cent. of the novices. It is not common sense, and certainly not sport; but a certain kill-sport. What we want is a live hobby, enjoyment, and fair play all round. Let us reason the thing out and if we find the business side of our hobby is out of date, then let us begin to put our house in order. Remember the result with our own society!

The Chortle of an Anti-colourfoodite.

What are "Natural" Colouring Agents.

Sir,—It was unnecessary for your correspondent to sign himself "Another Madman"—that was obvious. He puts my opinions down to prejudice. I may inform him that it is not prejudice, but practical experience that has given me my views. During the last few years I have kept all three varieties—Canaries, British, and foreign—and as I believe in keeping them as healthy and comfortable as possible, I do, as he says, give them privet and blackberries, and, in fact, every wild seed and berry I can obtain. Does he suggest that this is foreign to the birds? If so, I am afraid that his knowledge is very limited. My objection to colour food is that, although the birds will greedily eat, and with evident enjoyment, all the things mentioned above, I have never yet found a bird that would eat colour food unless forced to. Of course, in saying that, I except Canaries which are reared from the nest on it. They, poor things, know no better. When visiting my fellow-fanciers I have repeatedly remarked about the colour, and asked how it was done, as I could not get my birds to eat colour food. The answer is always the same—take the seed away from them, and they will soon be glad of it. This, to my mind, is a polite way of saying "starve them into it." My experience is that—with British, anyway—this is the only means of forcing them to eat it. After you have succeeded, what is the result? You have turned a bird which is naturally beautiful into an unnatural impostor which represents anything but the variety to which it belongs. Your correspondent says I am not bound to use it. But I am, or I must refrain from showing against those who do. If he understands anything about birds, let him tell me what chance I should stand in an open show if I exhibited without feeding. He knows that it would be quite useless. In his last "tip" he gives the show away. He suggests that I should go to some exhibitor who produces those "balls of fire" and get some red mite. Well, that is exactly where I should expect to get red mite. When a man ruins his birds' constitutions by forcing them to eat unnatural food he must expect it to spoil their health—and ill-health, I believe, is one of the chief causes of red mite. Personally, I devote my time to keeping my birds clean, and therefore cannot try the suggestion; but when I do I will apply to your correspondent for the red mite, as I have no doubt that he has plenty.

Was He Killed in Fair Fight?

A Charming Goldie's Sudden End.

Sir,—I wonder if any of your readers could suggest the probable cause of my Goldfinch's death? He was an almost perfect specimen of the British Goldfinch, purchased by me as a Greypate in 1905, and from the day he came into my possession until his death on Dec .8 last never ailed an hour. I kept him in a cage until the spring of 1910, when I put him into a large, well-constructed, sheltered outdoor aviary, and he wintered successfully out of doors last winter, bathing daily right through the coldest weather. He was a free breeder, father of dozens of beautiful Mules, and every egg laid by hens with him was fertile. He was fed according to the recognised views of experts, and was, the day before he died, apparently in perfect health. He was the only Goldfinch I possessed until four days before he went, when I introduced another nice cock into the aviary. Could it possibly be jealousy that killed him? He was, I know, a very jealous bird, as, when I first paired him with a hen Canary, after having been kept for four years in a cage as an only pet, he showed some extraordinary signs of this. He was, when I was out of sight, on most affectionate terms with his mate, but when I came near the cage he would dash at the Canary, peck her violently, and nearly frighten her out of her senses. He would come to the cage door and attack my hand. Sometimes I let him out when he was in one of his passions, and he would fly on to my head, tearing my hair with his beak and pecking my face. Now he is where all the pets we specially love go so soon, and I feel as if I had lost a favourite child or a true pal. They say it is cruel to cage birds, but this bird, I am sure, enjoyed every day of his life, and was a source of daily joy to his now sorrowing owner.

E. Allison.

[It is not at all improbable that the bird lost his life during a dispute with the newly-introduced Finch. Some Goldfinches, especially those which have been used to solitary existence, will viciously fight any strange bird if given the opportunity. I have one now which would never allow another Finch a second's peace until he had been either "laid out" himself or had laid out his would-be companion. The only cock bird I have ever found him tolerate was, strange to say, a Lapland Bunting.—Editor.]

Teaching Rollers the "Water Bubble."

Sir,—Can any of your readers give me information as to where I can get an instrument to teach my Rollers the water bubble? Or how I can make one, not expensive, but fit for my purpose?

Back to the Old Home.

Sir,—In support of Mr. E. Cockram's interesting letter, let me tell you the following: I had had a Thrush in my aviary about two months. I gave him to my neighbour's boys. Because the boys were not attentive to it their father gave it its liberty. For about a week it kept visiting the aviary several times daily. I could not open the door to let the bird go in, because I had only a single compartment then, and he would not allow me to catch him. At length he became so weak that I had no difficulty in catching him, when I put him amongst his old friends, where he soon recovered, and was happy. I rarely hear a wild Thrush singing these days, and mine are in full song, which, I think, goes to show that they are happy in captivity.

Pity the Poor Show Secretaries

Sir,—Mr. A. J. Dazeley was quite correct when he said he made application to the secretary of Derby Show for a schedule, but he omits to say that he forgot to give his address. I enclose a pretty picture postcard he sent me for your inspection. The postmark is Norwich, 9.30 p.m., Nov. 14, 1911. "Dear Sir,—Please send me schedule of your show, to be held on Dec. 2 and 4, and oblige, yours faithfully, Arthur Dazeley." I was a bit puzzled how to send one, so addressed one to Mr. A. Dazeley, Bird Fancier, Norwich. I thought he was so well known he did not require any further address. If he applies at the Norwich Post Office, he will perhaps find it there, as it has not come back here. It would have been better if he had written to see why he did not receive one before he wrote to the Press to complain of his "grievance." I think an apology is due from Mr. Dazeley; perhaps he owes one to the secretary of Royal Windsor also. I had four entries from another exhibitor with the form made out correctly, but he forgot to put his name and address. I entered his birds up and called him "No name." He sent his birds with a note inside saying I had not sent him any cage labels, would I please put them on?—a great deal the better way than writing to the Press. I thank you for your splendid report of our show.

W. Stevens.

The Alleged Stained Mule at Grantham Show.

Sir,—Just a few lines in reply to Messrs. Vardy and Lockwood re the above, and then, as far as I am concerned, this correspondence is ended. Mr. Vardy states that in the presence of certain show officials he distinctly removed stain from Mr. Mackender's bird's head. But he does not say what the stain was constituted of; he says it was stain, not dirt. One hardly expects to remove dirt from a bird's head when he has been recently washed, but that he removed "something," I am quite willing to accept, as I do not doubt either him or the gentlemen who were with him, or their veracity. But I do emphatically deny that it was a "stain." It may have been a little soap left on from the wash; if the stain removed had been dye, a handkerchief moistened with the lips would not have been enough to remove it. Now, as regards Mr. F. Lockwood's assertion that he does not wish to cast any reflection on the character of Mr. Mackender, saying that he may have recently purchased the bird, and be entirely unaware of it being faked, I can enlighten him on that score. This bird has been in Mr. Mackender's possession two years, for I was with him when he claimed it on Nov. 21, 1909, from the show of the Newark F.A., where it stood second to a stable companion (bred by a Mr. Smithson of Newark), and the winner was also claimed by Mr. T. Sampson, of Worksop, and has since won for him many prizes. Since that time the bird exhibited at Grantham has only been to one show, and that was when he won at Newark, the week previous to Grantham Show. If either of the gentlemen named above care to reply, I should be pleased to hear what manner of stain they removed, and then let the matter drop, as correspondence of this sort has a tendency to make enemies rather than friends, and that is not what is wanted in the Fancy. Allow me to thank Cage Birds for opening its columns to correspondence of all kinds relating not only to show business, but all birdy matters, and to wish it the success it so well deserves.

Our First Annual Meeting.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. C. H. RAYNOR, Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London. Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. CUSHNY, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

To-day being my last opportunity during the current year of addressing my fellow members, I should have liked to enlarge somewhat upon the work and progress of Cage Birds League, but exigencies of space prevent this, and I will content myself with making the announcement that it is intended to hold, at the forthcoming Crystal Palace Show, a meeting of our members, and that at that meeting a full account of our doings will be submitted. Up to the time of writing the League has been in existence for somewhat less than eight months, and our roll of membership is an exceedingly gratifying one. I have reason to believe that very many readers of our organ, Cage Birds, are waiting for the New Year for their joining the League, and it should be quite easy to multiply several times our membership list, so that the projected meeting at the Palace should be a memorable one. Among other things, arrangements will be made for a photograph to be taken of all the League members present, and in years to come this photograph will stand as pourtraying the pioneers of a great movement.

Our Certificate Has Caught On.

I have received a large number of letters from bird-shop keepers expressing pleasure at the prospect of obtaining a certificate of Cage Birds League, and not a single dissentient voice has been raised. Many letters come from towns in which the League is not yet represented by an honorary secretary, and I should be very pleased to hear from any gentleman who would act in this capacity, and as a voluntary visitor to those of the bird-dealers in his town who have a wish for our certificate. Names should be sent me without delay, not only in order that I may complete the arrangements which are pending, but so that they may be in time for inclusion in the list of honorary secretaries to Cage Birds League which will be published in Cage Birds Annual for 1912. I hope that members will make a point of introducing our certificate scheme to the notice of any bird-shop keepers they may know. The more of the certificates that are displayed the greater will be the proof of the injustice of the wholesale condemnations indulged in by the extremists, whose one object is to abolish entirely the keeping of a pet bird in a cage.

Notepaper for League Members.

It has been suggested that members of Cage Birds League would be pleased to have for use notepaper which conveyed the information that they were members of the League, and arrangements have been made by which members may be supplied with notepaper bearing the badge and motto of Cage Birds League, and printed with any address. The price of the paper is set forth in the particulars of membership, etc., at the end of these notes.

A New Year's Wish.

In wishing all members, present or prospective, of Cage Birds League a bright and prosperous New Year, I think I cannot do better than call their attention to the last paragraph of my notes of last week, which is here reproduced.

A Word for the League.

It must be obvious that Cage Birds League must have substantial support afforded it in its efforts to carry out the objects for which it was instituted, and this support it is in the power of each individual reader to give simply by becoming a member. I hope, therefore, that one of the New Year's resolutions of every one who may read these notes will be to join the League if he or she is not already a member, and to bring the work of the League to the notice of those of their friends who are interested in the proper and humane keeping of our feathered pets. The subscription for ordinary members is only one shilling a year, but those who would like to subscribe a larger amount may become Vice-Presidents or Patrons on the terms mentioned below.

SUBSCRIPTIONS AND BADGES.

PATRONS.—A donation in one sum, or an annual subscription of one guinea or more.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.—Half-a-guinea, or more, annually.

ORDINARY MEMBERS.—One shilling annually.

In all cases one-half of the subscription may be especially allotted by the subscriber either to the Literature Fund or the Defence Fund, or towards the purchase of special prizes to be awarded at any show nominated by the subscriber. Failing any such special allocation, the subscription will be devoted to the development and progressive work of the LEAGUE, to advertising its objects and promating its ideals.

BADGES mounted in Rolled Gold: (1) as a brooch for ladies or for coat lapel or cycling cap, (2) as a pendant for watch-chain; one shilling each.

ORDINARY BADGES. (1) as a button for coat lapel, (2) as a brooch for ladies, or for cycling cap, (3) as a pendant for watch-chain, sixpence each.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

A copy of CAGE BIRDS, the official organ of the LEAGUE, is forwarded to patrons weekly, post free.

SEALS.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in fascimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to notepaper, postcards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

HEADED NOTEPAPER.

Notepaper, with the badge and motto of the LEAGUE in the top left-hand corner, and the address of any member at the top right-hand, may be had at the following prices:

100 Sheets, Three shillings and sixpence.
250 Sheets, Four shillings.
500 Sheets, Five shillings and sixpence.
1,000 Sheets, Eight shillings and sixpence.
All post free.

FREE BOOKLETS.

Members are entitled, if application is made at the time of joining, to a free copy of a sixpenny pamphlet on British Bird Culture, or a similar treatise on Canary and Hybrid Culture.

A Cup Winner at Edinburgh Open Show.

Sir,—Edinburgh Open Show was considered by those privileged to visit it as a splendid gathering of exhibits. One incident, however, gave rise to comment and dissatisfaction. I refer to the winning of one of the cups with a Scotch Fancy which, it is alleged, was not hatched and reared by the winner. I am not clear about the hatching, but it is common talk that this bird was reared by another fancier. The rule bearing on this reads: "Must have been bred this season by, and belong to, the exhibitor." I believe that eleven-twelfths of the members of this association are under the impression that all competing birds must be bred, hatched, and reared by their owners. I know that certain birds reared outside the breeder's house were not entered in this cup competition because this fact has been regarded as a likely disqualification. In fairness to all concerned, I think an explanation should be given as to how the executive arrived at the decision that the bird was eligible.

A Scotch Fancier.

The Mishap at Stoke-on-Trent Show.

Sir,—I was pleased to see the explanation from Mr. Wellings, and I have no doubt that my committee and the exhibitors at our show will accept the same, and also Mr. Wellings' expression of regret at the occurrence. I think it would have been better for all concerned if Mr. Wellings' explanation had not been so long delayed. Mr. Wellings says he would have explained sooner had I not said we could not accept Miss Bibby's trap accident statement without further proof. May I just point out that Miss Bibby's letter contained two statements, one informing us of the accident, the other that Mr. Wellings would be with us on Friday. In the absence of any further communication we could not well accept one statement without the other. Mr. Wellings now explains the second statement was a mistake. Again, my letter was not published until nine days after the show. I don't think there is any necessity to further discuss this affair, my object in writing to you having been accomplished. I would just like to thank those fanciers who have written expressing their sympathy at the position in which we were placed, and to assure them that we will try to deserve their confidence on a future occasion.

J. Pitchforn.

[This correspondence is now closed.—Editor.]

Kindly thank all enquirers for my Cinnamons advertised in "CAGE BIRDS." I could have sold them many times over, which speaks well for "CAGE BIRDS" circulation.—A. H. Fletcher (Sedgefield).

I had so many applications in reply to my advertisement in "CAGE BIRDS" that really I could not answer them all through the post. I had 36, which goes to show the real worth of your valuable paper, of which I have been a constant reader for the last 10 years, and hope to be for a good number of years to come. I sold the birds to a gentleman at Sunderland.—Alfred Foster (Old Shildon).

"CAGE BIRDS" ANNUAL FOR 1912

Is now in preparation, and with the co-operation of our readers will be a greater success than any of its predecessors. Any suggestions for new features, or for the improvement of present features will be welcomed by us.

TO SECRETARIES OF SOCIETIES.

Free.—The Insertion of full particulars (name of society, latest list of officials, place, time, and nights of meetings) in the Alphabetical List of Cage-bird Clubs. Remember, no society should be missing, for this feature of "Cage-Birds Annual" is the only Directory of its kind in existence. Secretaries who have moved please let us know your new address.

TO JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

Free.—The insertion of their names and addresses, and the varieties in which they specialise, in the List of Judges. The only condition is that judges must have officiated at one of the recognised shows. Remember, this list is the only complete one published, and is universally consulted by show officials.

TO OUR TRADING FRIENDS.

Free.—The insertion of names, addresses, and specialities in the Bird Trade Directory. No matter what you sell, so long as it has to do with the Fancy, particulars are inserted free. This directory is of exceptional value and fanciers the world over find it indispensable. For one shilling names can be thrown up in heavy black type.

Breeders, Exhibitors, Judges, and Advertisers generally: Do you want something that will bring you orders throughout next year for a "mere song"? If so, just try an advertisement in the "Annual."

AT A VERY LOW COST IT WILL BRING YOU BUSINESS FOR A WHOLE YEAR.

FOR RATES SEE PAGE 572.

All particulars can be obtained from THE MANAGER, "CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL," 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON, E.C.

Wild-Bird Life.

Among the Marsh Birds.

On the Continent all birds are looked upon as food for man when captured, no matter how small they are, nor how handsome and interesting. Here in Great Britain we do not go to the same length, but many of our larger birds are keenly sought for by sportsmen during the winter months for the double purpose of affording sport and food. One of the most interesting sports is undoubtedly that of wild fowl shooting. During a hard winter the birds are driven south, and flock inland over the marshes and mudflats on the tidal rivers, and edge of the sea. Some of the common waders and sea birds can be found at almost any time, but the larger species, such as Duck, Curlew, Geese, etc., are more plentiful in very severe weather, and require even then a lot of careful stalking if one is to get anywhere within a reasonable distance of them either for shooting or for observation through a field-glass. The birds seldom alight on good firm soil, but prefer the mud flats and treacherous sands, where it is most difficult to follow them. The ground is flat and open, and the only cover is occasionally a low sea wall or the bed of a creek when the tide is out. These mud flats are dangerous places to the careless. The water fills the gullies so insidiously that one can easily be cut off, unless the greatest precautions are taken. But with all its dangers and disagreeable exposure the marshes and sea shores have many charms to both sportsman and bird-lover. So freely are these open spaces inhabited by feathered life that one is sure to see something, no matter what the weather conditions. Flocks of Plovers will be feeding in the open; the hinder birds flying from time to time over the foremost, so that each in turn feeds upon fresh ground. A whisp of ox birds get up almost under one's nose, being so well hidden in a gripway that one might have passed them had they remained quiet. They go twittering down the water as though they would never stop, but after they have travelled for some distance they drop as suddenly as they rose. A couple of Widgeons come up with the wind at a great pace, but catching sight of a head exposed above the wall they sheer off to the right and are gone in a flash. Then a Heron goes over the water to some fishy pool he is acquainted with, his neck folded back, and his long legs trailing behind. And so one may note birds of all kinds, and spend hours among them, upon ground which apparently is deserted and desolate

ELGIN.

Elgin C.B.A. 2nd annual show held Dec. 25, in the Academy Hall. The hall is of good size, well lighted, and free from draughts. Entries numbered 206, a large increase, and the quality was well ahead of last year's. The exhibits were well staged and ably looked after. Some grand specimens were on show in all sections. The juveniles' class was well patronised, and we hope they will be encouraged again next season. A good number of visitors and exhibitors attended. Mr. A. W. Douglas, the energetic, courteous, and obliging secretary, had all arrangements well in hand, and must be complimented on the success of his labours. He was ably assisted by a band of willing workers, and everything went off well. Mr. D. Craigen won the silver cup for for best Canary; Mr. R. Garden the silver rosebowl for best Norwich shown by a member, also silver medal for best colour-fed Norwich, and silver medal for best natural coloured Norwich hen shown by a member; Mr. J. Fraser, silver centre piece for best unflighted Norwich, also Hyde's special; Mr. W. Blackie, silver medal for best Border Fancy; Mr. J. D. Hird silver cup for best British or Hybrid; Mr. G. G. Henderson, silver medal for second best; Mr. J. Main, silver medal for best Bullfinch. The awards were made by Mr. A. Miller.

"CAGE BIRDS"
WATCH COUPON
Dec. 30th, 1911.

Manager, "CAGE BIRDS,"
154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

DENBIGH.

First show held Dec. 12th, Assembly Room. The management was all that could be desired, the reins being in the very capable hands of Mr. James Williams, who is very courteous and obliging. He was ably assisted by a few good stewards. The show proved very successful, and all prize money and specials, we understand, were paid on the show day. The exhibits numbered well and some good birds were shown. Special for best bird was won by Mr. H. S. Davies with a grand Greenfinch-Canary Hybrid, in superb form; best Yorks. cl. yell., Mr. J. O. Williams, also A.O.V. Can. with a typical cl. buff Nor.; Yorks A.O.V., Sergeant Evans; Light or Dark Mules or Hybrids, Mr. H. S. Davies, two well-known winners; British Goldfinch, Messrs. Evans and Roberts; Greypate, Mr. Williams. A.O.S. British, Evans and Roberts, good, steady Bramble hen; Local Canary, Mr. P. A. Lloyd; Mule, Mr. R. Roberts; Brit., Mr. J. Davies. Mr. J. Kershaw (Llanrwst) judged and gave general satisfaction.

Thomson; 4, Smith; 5, 6, Hector; 7, Bryson. A great feature of this successful show was the exhibit of white Canaries, two white Blackbirds, and a white Wood Pigeon, exhibited by that well-known fancier, Dr. Galloway. Messrs. P. Lyon and Son (bird and seed specialists) had also on view a large and well decorated stand, on which were exhibited all the different seeds and appliances in connection with the Fancy. CAGE BIRDS posters were tastefully displayed all round.

HIGH WYCOMBE.

High Wycombe and Dis. F.S. show, held in the Oakley Memorial Hall, Dec. 27th. The competition was confined to a 20-mile radius, which, of course, precluded many well-known exhibitors in and around London from competing. As it was, however, there was a splendid array of quality, notwithstanding the numbers were not large. Mr. S. C. Pearce again held the secretarial reins, ably assisted by Mr. C. Stevens. With a promptitude keeping pace with the judge, the awards were up, so that in a very short space of time after judging was finished all prize cards were ready and on the cages. Catalogues were out promptly. Special for best bird was awarded to Messrs. Hawes Bros.' beautiful buff Yorks. This bird also annexed another special, and amongst the other special winners were Messrs. F. Bowler (3), and H. Spring (2). The Rev. C. P. S. Clarke staged a very smart Magpie, which, we understood, enjoyed its freedom around the rev. gentleman's residence, and "came home to roost." Mr. Geo. Gardner judged.

YORKS (5): 1, two spls, 2, vhc, Hawes Bros., special winning buff already noted, followed by a smart yellow, scarcely so beautifully tapered, but full of nerve and quality, and showing plenty of leg; 3, hc, Alford, former smart bird, loses a little in length. NOR. (7): 1, 2, 3, hc, Lovegrove and Lovegrove, really fine team, a bonny chested grand headed yellow leading, closely followed by a lovely buff of fine shape; 3rd, also yellow, not quite so stout as winner, yet lovely feather and col.; vhc, Rayner; c, Bowler. MULE, ETC. (5): 1, vhc, Alford, leader smart variegated yell. Goldie-Can.; 2, Bowler, fine faced dark buff of the same cross; 3, Wood, buff variegd. Goldie-Can., good size; hc, Gregory. GOLDIE (5): 1, two spls, Bowler, nice clear blaze, good cutting and tanning; 2, Alford, fails to leader only a little in face, a nobby Finch; 3, Gregory, again nice, just a little irregular in blaze at throat; vhc, Wood; hc, Spring. A.O.S. HARDBILL (4): 1, Bowler, very smart Hawfinch, nice bib; 2, 3, Spring, ditto, and a nice conditioned Crossbill; vhc, Fountaine. SOFTBILLS (6): 1, two spls, vhc, hc, Spring, leader very fine Bearded Tit; 2, Rev. C. P. S. Clarke, grand Magpie, only needs a little more size to be a nailer; 3, Bowler, rattling fine Jay, wild at judging time, a beautiful plumaged bird; c, Carter. GIFT (4): 1/, Spring; 2, Spriggs.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER CANARY CLUB.

A novice contest was held at the club-house, Swan Hotel, Fountain-street, Manchester, on Dec. 16th. There was a splendid entry for the two classes. Mr. Massey (Bolton) judged, and his decision pleased everyone. There was a spirited contest between two of the youngest novices—Mr. Christie (Wigan) and Mr. Hughes (Hollingwood)—this being their first time of showing. The older members will have to look to their laurels or they will be taken away from them by the younger novices. More will be seen of these new members later. It was pleasing to see the members and their wives coming to the show. At times the room was crowded. Mr. Percival was all smiles, and handled the show with his usual tact and skill. He was ably assisted by Messrs. Robinson and Turner. All birds were cleared away early.

CLASS I, OLD BIRDS: 1, vhc, c, Christie; 2, 4, Turner; 3, Hughes; hc, Robinson. CLASS 2, Y.B. BRED BY MEMBERS: 1, Hughes; 2, Christie; 3, Tomlinson; 4, E. Lord; vhc, Robinson; hc, Whittle; c, Hughes.—Tom Routledge.

WATFORD.

Watford F.A. show, held Dec. 12th, in the Clarendon Hall, a splendidly spacious building. The arrangements were nicely carried out, thanks to the assistance rendered to the old and tried hon. sec., (Mr. C. A. Edwards), by the steward (Mr. C. Battison). The entry was much below last year's total, but the quality was excellent. There are a large body of fanciers in and around Watford, and one and all seem ready to assist in helping. In spite of this the entry was not satisfactory in point of numbers. Mr. Chas. Challands, the well-known fancier and friend of fanciers, is the assistant hon. secretary. Canaries were few but good, especially the Nor., but Brit. were A1. A beautiful Goldie, said to be the Luton winner, won for Mr. W. Buckingham four specials, including that for best bird in show. It is really a lovely Finch. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and his awards gave satisfaction.

NOR. CK. (10): 1, 4, r, Battison, leader smart yell., good body, head and neck, full of col., rare quality, 4th topping feathered buff, sitting very thick at judging time, but rare fine shape, head and neck; 2, Ginnell, soft silky feathered yell., stout body, rich col.; 3, Hills, yell., close, silky feather, nice body; vhc, Giddings; hc, Fox; c, Buckingham. HEN (7): 1, 2, Battison, leader thick-set, silky feathered buff Nor., nice short wings and tail, good undercolour; 2, equally fine yell., not quite so compact; 3, Wombwell, yell. Nor., not quite so full of quality as leaders; 4, vhc, hc, Buckingham, neat Yorks., stands well; r, Fox. GOLDIE, BULLIE, BRAMBLING, CHAFFIE, OR GREENIE (Amalgamated) (10): A grand lot, not a bad bird amongst them: 1, four spls., 3, Buckingham, sweet Goldie, rich lustrous blaze, very wide and clean cut, nice whites, chestnut, bars, and buttons, 3rd superb Brambling, lustrous, rich col., grand spangling; 2, 4, r, Gunnell, 2nd another fine Goldie, good enough for the majority of shows, 4th topping Greenie, hard lines to meet such a lot; vhc, Bowler; hc, Gregory; c, May. LINNET, ETC. (10): 1, 2, Gunnell, rattling fine Linnet, rich col., well marked, steady, beautifully polished, 2nd very pretty Siskin, well marked, close, and steady; 3, 4, Gunton, former fine Mealy Redpoll, A1 for markings, and 4th good Linnet; r, vhc, Buckingham; hc, Bowler; c, Gregory.

Kindly thank all who answer my advert. in "Cage Birds." I find it impossible to reply to all. I wish "Cage Birds" every success.—J. Cuthbertson (Stonehouse).

I wish to thank those who replied to my advert. in "Cage Birds" of Dec. 16th. I had so many answers I am unable to reply to all.—A. L. Norris (Romford).

Kindly thank all who applied for my cages, advertised in "Cage Birds," as I cannot answer all personally.—F. G. Andrews (Derby).

Allow me through your valuable paper, "CAGE BIRDS," to thank all who answered my advert. re Exchange in Dec. 16 number of "CAGE BIRDS." I could not answer all—quite 24 applied for same. I have made a very good exchange. This speaks well for your paper, which I wish success.—Chas. Hy. Hill (Wivelscomb).

ARDWICK & DIS. C.B.S.

Third annual show for members held in the Providence Onward Hall, Ashton Old Road, on Dec. 9th. A fine lot of special prizes were offered in addition to 4 cash prizes on sliding scale. There was a grand entry of close upon 300 exhibits. The quality throughout would do good justice to any open show, and it speaks volumes for the enterprise and enthusiasm which spur this splendid set of fanciers onward. The exhibition was a great success. Well-known fanciers in this district visited the show and marvelled at the grand birds. Mr. Boothman, Sec. of M. and N.C.O.S., was about the show rendering valuable service, and though not quite up to proper health standard yet, he is looking much better. Mr. A. G. Davis popped in and was much interested in the fine display. The Hon. Sec. (Mr. Spencer) gave of his best, and had matters well in hand. A good set of stewards did their work well. Mr. A. Royle judged Norwich and other Canaries except Yorks.; Mr. Chas. Houlton judged Yorks, Hybrids and British, and their awards were very well received.

Mr. Royle's Classes.

NOR. CK. YELL. (6): 1, he, Henson, ticked left wing, very robust type, fine head, good col. and quality; 2, A. G. WINCHBURGH.

Winchburgh and Dis. Society's annual show held in the Public School on Nov. 28th. The room was a grand one for a show of the kind, being well lighted by large windows facing the west. Entries showed a decrease on last year's, but quality was much better. The event was well manaaged by Mr. T. Woodcock (secretary), and a very energetic lot of stewards. Judges, Mr. R. Menzies for Scotch Fancy and British birds, and Mr. H. Moreland for Norwich and Borders.

BOOTLE C.B.S.

Annual show held Dec. 9, St. Mathew's Schools. Entries numbered 220, which is not equal to previous years, and yet is not bad for a members' show. Owing to the late arrival of some of the birds, judging did not commence very early, but once started everything went off very briskly. The secretary (Mr. F. E. Hawkes), assisted by a willing committee, had cards up as fast as the judges' slips came in. A lively contest betwixt Messrs. McNulty and Cobb kept the visitors on the qui vive, as to who should be the holder of the cup, almost every class changing the state of the poll, the final result being a tie on points. Mr. J. Thornton (Egremont) judged, and his awards were generally well received.

WALKDEN & DIS. C.B.S.

Second annual members' show held in the Institute, Manchester-road, Dec. 2nd. The room was very cosy, with plenty of light and freedom from draughts—an ideal room for a members' show. Entries were small compared with those of last year, and visitors were few. Mr. T. Tootill won special for best Can. with a very neat yell. Yorks., and Messrs. Gaskell Bros. won special for best British with a charming Goldie of grand colour and markings. Other special winners: Messrs. C. Mann, H. Moss, and H. Howard. Mr. A. Donelly judged.

WOOLWICH.

The amalgamated show of the Plumstead and Woolwich Soc. and the New Cross Soc. was held Dec. 2nd, in the Sussex Hall, Woolwich. There was a nice collection of birds, although the New Cross Society's members did not respond very freely to the invitation of the secretaries, Messrs. Meadee and Smith. Of the varieties on view, the Nor. were undoubtedly the pick of the show. Many of these both in champion and novice sections, were of real merit, and quite fit for open competition; in fact, we heard that several of the winners had already aquitted themselves well in some of the Kent exhibitions. Mr. Meades took special for best Norwich with a grand yell. of fine size, shape, and quality; he also staged the reserve bird. A nice lengthy yell. Yorks. of good type secured special for best novice; this bird was hardly pressed hy a very short, thickly-built Nor. staged by Mr. E. Hartland. Mr. G. Barton is the fortunate owner of the yell. Yorks. There were two or three grand Mules on show, Mrs. T. W. Pope securing 1st and 3rd with two high class Linnet-Canaries, Mr. C. King splitting these two with a stylish bird, beautifully laced, of the same cross. If properly fed and staged this bird should give the best of them trouble. A few good British birds completed the collection. In this section Mr. Meades won special with a tight feathered Reed Bunting shown in grand condition. The secretaries, Messrs. Meades and Smith, managed everything splendidly, and had valuable assistance from Messrs. Pawley, Maclellan, W. Hall, junr. Mr. H. Norman judged.

PELTON FELL (Co. Durham).

Second annual open show held December 23rd, Old Institute Hall. Entries came up well, totalling 320, this being a slight increase upon last year's entry. The Norwich were undoubtedly the pick in the Canary section. The British section was exceptionally good, the Linnet class in particular being a grand one; in fact, one of the best we have seen for some time, with not a bad one amongst them. The show hall is a really grand place for the purpose; it is large and lofty and has any amount of light, both natural and artificial, and a heating apparatus by which the temperature of the hall can be regulated. The management is really excellent, and we compliment the popular secretary, Mr. Wm. Forster, upon the excellent manner in which he gets through his duties, the whole of the arrangements being carried out in first-class style, while we found him always courteous and most obliging. He was ably backed up by a splendid body of workers, headed by that well-known fancier, Mr. J. Stanger (the chairman). Special mention should be made of the fanciers who supported the chairman so well, viz., Messrs. W. H. Butler, R. S. Bewick, Lance Hall, J. Macdonald, W. Davidson, E. Atkinson, R. Boyd, R. Peart, W. Catchpole, R. Fletcher, J. Skeen, and J. H. Elliot. Prize money here is guaranteed, and winners who were present at the show received theirs during the afternoon. Fine weather favoured the show, and the attendance was very satisfactory, many well-known fanciers being present from the surrounding districts. The judges were Mr. J. Riseborough (Canaries), and Mr. F. Marwood (British).

Mr. Riseborough's Classes.

NOR. CL., ETC., YELL. (6): 1, Wm. ANNAN.

Third annual exhibition of the Annandale C.B.A., held December 16th, at Good Templar Hall, Annan, when nearly 200 birds were staged, the quality throughout being excellent. The main feature of the show was the especially fine collection of Border Fancies, these mustering over 90 in the eleven classes provided. The Norwich also made a good show. Some capital birds were seen among the 50 birds staged in the seven classes. The judges were Messrs. D. Holden (Muirkirk) and J. H. Adam (Glasgow), who got through their task expeditiously and well. The arrangements were in the hands of a hardworking committee, comprising Messrs. Hinds, Urquhart, Lees and Nicholson, who, with the capable and courteous secretary, Mr. J. Campbell, saw that everything worked with exceeding smoothness.

LLANELLY.

Llanelly and Dis. P.P. and C.B.S. show held Boxing Day at the Market Hall, a large, roomy, and well ventilated place, admirably adapted for a show. The sec., Mr. D. Griffiths, is an old and tried hand, and worked hard for the success of the show. It would be well if the classification were extended next year. Mr. Sam Jones judged.

YORKS (14): 1, Phillips, cl. yellow, long racy upstanding bird, perfect flights and position, good round head, wins; 2, c, Webster, cl. buff, feathered like boxwood, grand position, hot one for col.; 3, 4, vhc, E. H. Williams, variegated buff, a wee shade smaller than the above, but feathered like a Java, grand compact tail; 4, cl. yell., soft when judging, but a good bird; hc, Portman. NOR. (9): 1, 2, D. R. Jones, 1, cl. buff, an easy win, short and thick, with a good rounded chest, typical Nor.; 2, bigger, but longer in flights and tail, which makes it long in comparison with 1st; 3, W. P. Jones, a whopper for size, but does not take perches so good as above, a grand bird; 4, H. S. Davies, marked buff, not quite so cobby as winners, but good quality feather; vhc, E. H. Williams; hc, Portman; c, Holbrow. BORD. (7): 1, 2, 3, 4, vhc, hc, c, Harry, grand team from this now well-known exhibitor, 1st cl. buff, takes perches in a delightful style, 2nd cl. yell., not quite so tight in feather as winner, but very typical, grand col.; 3rd, marked buff, as tight as a Java in feather, but does not move so gracefully as the two above. MEMBERS' A.V. (3): 1, 2, 3, Morris, all Norwich.

LLANDOVERY.

Annual Christmas show held Dec. 22, including a very fine cage bird show, which has improved immensely since the first start about four years ago. The exhibits were excellent for number and quality, some very good Canaries, British and Foreign being staged. Mr. J. E. Jeffreys (Swansea) judged, and his awards were well received. The show was well attended by the large number of visitors who visited the show.

The Critique.

PETERHEAD.

Fourth annual open show of the Peterhead C.B.A., held in the Music Hall, December 22nd and 23rd. There was an increased entry in almost every class, and the display of Norwich, Hybrids, British and Foreign birds has seldom been equalled in the district. Entries were received from breeders all over the country, and the committee found it necessary to engage a larger hall than formerly to accommodate the exhibits. Mr. P. Jack, the energetic secretary and treasurer, had everything in perfect order, and he is to be congratulated on his efforts to make the show a success. The light was not of the best, and the judges must have had a trying time to get the best ones picked out. Some bad mistakes were made in the catalogue, which made things somewhat difficult to follow. Special for best bird in show went to Mr. Park, with a good Crest; some, however, seemed to think it should have gone to a Norwich, these being superior to the Crests. Mr. Menuie (Elgin) judged. From the opening of the show to the close there was a constant stream of visitors, and they were delighted with the birds.

The Critique.

YELL. CK. (COL. FED.) UTRECHT (Holland).

The 18th International Exhibition of the Utrecht O.S. was held Dec. 15 to 17. The cage bird section made a very pretty display, and attracted quite a large number of visitors. The exhibits were staged in a cosy part of the hall, which was kept at a nice temperature, and the comfort of the birds was well looked after. The judges were Messrs. C. L. W. Noorduyn and A. A. Polvliet.

DUTCH CAN. (19): Several good typical birds exhibited by Messrs. J. Borden, F. Schuurman, and W. van Leeuwen. LANCS. (8): 1, 2, Leeuwen, nice feather and shape. NOR. INSECTIV.: 1, 2, J. van Elmpt. CARDINALS: A smart bird shown by A. Sutherland winning. In the Parrot and other foreign bird classes the principal prizes were won by birds exhibited by Mr. A. Sutherland, who is to be congratulated on their colour and condition.

WICK.

Annual show held in the Temperance Hall, Dec. 13th and 14th. A good entry was forward, and while some of the classes showed a slight falling off, others fully made up for the shortage. Scotch fanciers seem to have vanished from the east end of the county; only a week previous at Thurso (the west end) there were 16 grand specimens shown in two classes. Plainheads and Crests were very strong classes all through, and many good specimens in the Plainheads were left out of the tickets. Mr. D. Shearer (Thurso) judged, and his awards were well received. Mr. Corner, the secretary, along with a willing working committee, had everything done to make the show a success.

BANSTEAD.

Second annual show of the Banstead and Burgh Heath F. and F.A. held Dec. 13th and 14th, in the Riding School, Nork Park. The arrangements were ably made by Mr. R. Rolls, the hon. sec., assisted by a rare number of hard workers. Mr. M. Crust made the awards in the cage bird section, where some grand specimens were staged.

YORKS. (9): 1, 2, vhc (2), Harris; 3, Stroud. NOR.: 1, 2, vbc, Saunders; 3, Wade; vhc, bc, Kilby. BRIT. (14): 1, 3, Gunnell; 2, Kilby; vhc, Wade Watford; hc, Wade. FOR. (5): 1, 2, Wade; vhc, Hutchings; vhc, Mansfield.

HUCKNALL TORKARD,

Some excellent specimens were staged at the annual 'Xmas show. Mr. C. Twine gained the honour of most points in Norwich and Crests; Messrs. Marshall, Mason and Gilbert next most points. Two local fanciers in Mr. F. Hayward and E. Severns judged, and gave the greatest satisfaction.

NOR. UNFLIG. YELL.: 1, 2, Marshall, 1st monster yell. ticked; 2nd, cl. yell. BUFF: 1, Twine, cl. buff, a wee gem, shone like silk; 2, Marshall, ticked head and wings. CL. YELL.: 1, 2, Twine, two lovely birds, a credit to their owner. BUFF: 1, Twine, grand type and quality. YELL. TKD.: 1, Twine, red hot in grand col., some thought the best Nor. in show. YELL. "CAGE BIRDS" BOOKS.

Brief particulars, with post free prices below.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 113 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 250 2/-, 500 2/6, carriage paid.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Published in 8 Monthly Parts at 6d. each, post free 7d. Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge: (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid. The practical and comprehensive work for which all Hybrid breeders have been waiting.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

LOOK AT YOUR BACK

numbers of CAGE BIRDS and see if any other man has ever published anything like the number of testimonials that I have. This should prove to you that no man supplies such good birds as I do. I make no exaggerated claims or false statements, so that people sending to me always know what they are going to receive, and always receive what they expect. When a person sends me 2/6 for a bird he gets one worth 2/6, not one that he could have bought in his own streets for 6d., and this is why I always send on approval and guarantee to instantly return every penny of your money if you are not in every way satisfied. I now have, without doubt, the finest collection of English cock Goldfinches in United Kingdom, every bird guaranteed in pink of health and condition and thoroughly on hard seed, at 2/- each; three, 5/-; six, 9/-; specially selected large cocks for muling and guaranteed now in free song, 3/- and 4/- each. Few real exhibition specimens, with full complements of show points, 5/- and 7/6 each. Grand lot of genuine white legged cock Goldfinches that really have bred mules, 6/-, 7/6, and 10/- each. Splendid lot of cock brown Linnets, every one perfectly on seed, 9d. each; three, 2/-; six, 3/-; twelve, 5/-. Specially picked cocks for muling and contest singing and now in good song, 1/- and 1/6 each; twelve 7/-. Real exhibition specimens, of right type, colour and markings, 2/6 each. Please note, week before Christmas I sent 83 dozen of cock Linnets into Yorkshire alone, and not one of them trained under the old dead and gone champion; this will prove where the Yorkshire contest winners get their birds from. Cock Bullfinches, 2/- and 3/- each; exhibition specimens, 5/- each. Hen Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each. Few genuine picked aviary-moulted hens, 3/- each. Genuine hand-reared finger tame German hen Bullfinches, ideal birds for hybrid breeding, 5/- each; cock Greenfinches, 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6; real exhibition specimens 2/6 each; singing cock Skylarks, warranted steady and now in song, 1/- and 1/6 each; cock Snow Buntings, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-; cock Yellowhammers, 1/- each; exhibition specimens, 2/6 each; pairs 1/6. Exhibitors please note, I handle more real English birds than any man alive, and therefore have a better chance of picking out exhibition specimens. Those described by me as exhibition specimens in this advt. are birds capable of winning well when used to show cage, and purchasers may always rely upon getting good specimens at top price, but please don't ask for Palace winners at bottom price, because you won't get them. Following letters will give an idea of quality I send out: "3, Burnett Place, Aberdeen, Dec. 27th; Sir,—Snow Bunting duly came to hand. Many thanks for such a good one. You can be certain of all my orders in future.—Yours., W. Allison." "2, Kingsland, Cummock, Dec. 22nd; Sir,—I received Goldie and Bullie all right, and am highly satisfied with them.—Yours, J. Brodie." "Hawthorn Place, Pity Mee, Co. Durham, Dec. 19th; Sir,—I received bird all right. It is a lot better one than I got from Leeds, and I am highly satisfied. You are the best man for business I ever bought off yet.— Yours., E. Hall." "3, Dore Bank, Little Lever, Bolton, December 17th; Sir,—Received birds Saturday. Thanks for prompt attention. I find them everything as advertised, being fine healthy birds in song.—Yours, A. Stubbs." "Fairfield, Bothwell, Glasgow, Dec. 16th; Sir,—Received birds in fine condition. Goldfinch is a beauty, and should do some winning.—Yours, D. Cullen." "15, Ladysmith Street, West Hartlepool, Dec. 14th: Sir,—Received birds on Tuesday. My father-in-law has been a catcher in the North for nearly 30 years, and says he has never seen the equal of the ten Linnets for size and colour.—Yours, M. Dervine." "Tanshelf Drive, Pontefract, Dec. 13th: Sir,—Received Linnets safe; am highly satisfied with them. Many thanks for prompt dispatch.—Yours, H. Dickinson." "120, Sidney Street, Brightlingsea, Dec. 10th: Sir,—Received bird, and am quite satisfied, and also satisfied that you act up to your advt.—Yours, G. Trubshoe." Do not forget all on approval, and your money refunded in full if every satisfaction not given. See Roller Canary column for further advt.

PRIDE OF PLACE

In the Roller world is rightly taken by the Leipzig Rollers as imported by me. You might be able to get a Roller as good at double the price, but why should you pay more than you need? When you've read the remarkable number of testimonials I have published (of which a few are given below), you will know why I so emphatically say that no Roller on the market at anything like the price can equal a Leipzig Roller. I have an enormous stock of thoroughly acclimatised Leipzig Rollers on hand; all cocks are guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet, silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft, roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp and gong notes, and jug-jug of Nightingale, etc.; warranted entirely free from any harsh or objectionable notes whatever; price 7s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. each. Special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed same strain, 2/3 each, 4/- couple. I also have a magnificent stock of real contest Rollers, fit for immediate contesting, price 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are of purest race extant, and song is exceptionally soft and mellow. Roller cabinet cages with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. To those who like a loud, merry, short songster, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song, real ceiling lifters, price 5/6 each. See following few letters: "Little Longstone, Bakewell, Jan. 2, 1912. Sir,—I have spent 'Xmas with a friend who has recently purchased one of your Leipzig Rollers, and after hearing it I must have one. I have been a breeder of Rollers for some time, and have a good strain, but nothing like that. I particularly admire the bass rolls. Please send me one on. Yours, J. Barnes."—"25 Enbrook Street, Queen's Park Estate, London; Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is still a good healthy bird and in good song; please send another. Yours, J. Fletcher."—"Moor Place, Hayle, Cornwall, Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller received last week is singing well and gives satisfaction. Yours, T. Jordan."—"5, Davison's Yard, Kirkby-in-Ashfield; Dec. 27. Sir,—The Leipzig Roller you sent is a beauty; he sings well and has many changes, and very cheap at price. Yours, R. Hooton."—"5, Greyfriars Place, Edinburgh; Dec. 12. Sir,—I had one of your renowned Rollers over 4 years, and it sang constantly; its notes were long and sweet, with many variations, as you describe. Please send another. Yours, D. Dawson."—"Steilston School House, Holywood by Dumfries; Dec. 18. Sir,—Leipzig Roller you sent has come up to expectations; he is everything you advertise. Please send following. Yours, A. Kennedy."—"Merthyr Tydvil, Dec. 15. Sir,—I have decided to keep Roller you sent. Thanking you for such a beautiful songster, and also for way he was packed. Yours, G. Arnold."—"New North Road, Honiton; Dec. 15. Sir,—Birds arrived in splendid condition. The cock is a beauty, sings incessantly day and night. They are both very strong and healthy, and I am more than pleased with such a beautiful pair of birds. Yours, J. Hussey."—"17, Holmes Street, Bristol; Dec. 15. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is a champion. He sang as soon as unpacked, but glad to say he sings even better now. Yours, B. Brooks."—"70, Radnor Street, Kilbowie, Scotland. Dec. 16. Sir,—Please send Leipzig Roller cock. Thanking you for the two I had last year, which gave entire satisfaction. Many people who have heard them have been delighted with their tours in melody, and are marvels at price paid. Yours, J. McLean."—"48, Normacott Road, Longton; Dec. 6. Sir,—Thanks for prompt dispatch and safe arrival of Leipzig Roller. Thanking you again for such a splendid songster and straightforward dealing with strangers. Yours, A. Tudor." Please note, I am the only importer of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and all genuine cocks are stamped on wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig." All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages and sent on full week's trial entirely at my own risk immediately on receipt of cash, or if same is deposited with Editor; and money instantly refunded in full if entire satisfaction not given. Try a Leipzig Roller against one of any other breed, you will then know why I can always fill a column with letters written specially about them.

MESSRS. AMBLERS,
The Yorkshire Specialists.

Oldest, purest, and most reliable strain of Yorkshires in the fancy. For these last 30 years our birds have won thousands of first prizes, cups, medals, and championships at leading shows, three times winning special for best in show Crystal Palace. Owing to illness we are not exhibiting, but this season we have sold some of the biggest champions out, which are unbeatable. We have now a few real gems for disposal, winners that can win Palace, also some clinking stock birds, wonderful lengthy type, and teeming with quality. Pairs from 15/- to 60/-; cocks 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/-; hens 7/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/- each; honestly worth double to breed from, as they are bred from the best Yorkshires living; approval cash or deposit; please note our new address: Langton Lodge, Scotton, Knaresboro', Yorkshire.

The Winning Strain.

Read following testimonials, and judge for yourself who can give you the best value for your money. From Havelock St., Lancaster, Jan. 1, 1912:—The stock birds I bought of you last year have bred my winners at our annual show, Lancaster and District, and are the best birds I ever got for the money. Shall recommend you to all I know.—R. Mason to L. Dykes. Another from Pickering Rd., Sheffield, 31/12/11.—Just a few lines to thank you for the pair of Yorks. which I am very well satisfied with. In fact, the more I see them the better I like them, and feel sure they will breed me some good youngsters.—R. Hatton to L. Dykes. Another from 13, Violet St., Londonderry, 29/12/11.—Received birds safe, and well pleased with them. They are a credit to you at so small a price, and worth four times as much as others I got elsewhere, though costing more money than yours.—T. Falconer to L. Dykes.

Champion, long, stylish, yellow or buff Yorkshire Cocks, on full song, at 5/6, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each; unrelated, properly matched pairs, at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- per pair; fine racy hens, feathered like wax, any colour, at 3/6, 4/6, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each. A few good exhibition cocks and hens, can soon win their own cost on the show bench, at 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-, 40/- each; colour-fed to perfection, and in best of health. All on seven days' approval at my risk. Travelling cages, 3d. extra.

Choice lot of large cobby Norwich, Cocks, Yellows or Buffs, at 6/-, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/- each; Hens, 4/-, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each. Easy payments to reliable fanciers and birds sent off at once. Illustrated price list post free. Place your orders with the old reliable breeder and exhibitor, who breeds his own winners, that have won thousands of prizes, cups, bowls, gold and silver medals, at all leading shows during the past 20 years, and has won more first prizes this season than any other exhibitor. Another Scottish National Success.

The Last Show in the Corn Exchange: Over 17,00 Birds and the Usual Magnificent Attendance.

The last show likely to be held by the Scottish National C.B.S. in the fine hall of the Corn Exchange, Edinburgh, proved a worthy wind-up to the lengthy list of successes they have achieved at this popular venue. The New Year (Dec. 31 and Jan. 1) saw upwards of 1,700 birds, representing all that is best in the exhibition world to-day, gathered together in competition within its walls. We never remember to have visited any fixture where the quality was so consistently high throughout every section, and the visitors were not slow to voice their appreciation of this state of affairs. The crowds that throng to this popular show need to be seen to be realised, especially on New Year's Day. We thought there seemed as many people in the hall as ever, and were surprised to hear that the gate receipts were a few pounds down on last year. The sales, however, once again realised a highly satisfactory total, and that the venture will be a thorough success financially there can be no question.

At the Opening Ceremony.

At the opening ceremony, performed by Councillor John M'Gibbon, a number of local notabilities were present, including Sir J. P. Gibson, Bart., M.P., and Lady Gibson, and gave the show a fine send-off. Mr. M'Gibbon said that the Society was fostering one of the most interesting and fascinating pastimes, and one that was largely engaged in by working men. He held that every man should have a pastime or hobby of some sort, and it would be well for the moral and physical condition of the community and for the happiness of the homes if the people in their leisure hours took up some healthy and profitable pastime, such as bird culture. That Society had made steady and creditable progress.

The management was in the same hands, practically, as the show of last year, and nothing could have been better than the way in which everything worked—without a hitch from the beginning to the end. The show manager, Mr. R. Craig, is about the hardest worker we ever met, and needless to say he was always finding something that required his attention and kept him running about from morning until night. But he knows his work and is a firm believer in the policy to "keep smiling," his genial disposition, in fact, being a great factor in the success attending his work. The president, Mr. Jas. Winter, is also another most enthusiastic worker in the cause of the society, and in geniality of manner and popularity with his fellow fanciers he would be difficult to surpass. He "takes his corner" in anything that is going, and the society owes a great deal to his efforts. He is well-supported by the vice-president, Mr. S. Buglass, a young and unassuming fancier, very keen on the business at hand, and ready to assist in every possible way.

The committee of management comprises Messrs. T. Tod, W. F. Arrighi, D. Kinlayside, W. R. Finnie, W. Carson, J. Hutchison, R. S. Spence, J. Gourlay, W. B. Smart, A. Rodger, D. Morris, C. Sykes, A. Hoyle, S. May, J. Easter, J. Mackie, J. Allan, J. Baxter, J. Cooper, J. Nelson, A. Boyle, W. Turnbull, J. Holmes, and G. Brown, and all these excellent fanciers found plenty to do, and did it right well, Messrs. Sykes and Hoyle being especially busy in the "feeding dept." In this connection Miss Peddie Waddell calls for special mention, for she attended to the foreign section with all the skill of a practical bird-keeper. Mr. Holmes looked well after the award board, the much-appreciated idea of veteran Kinlayside, who, in his turn, saw to the staging and its erection in the thorough manner for which he is noted.

The secretarial work was again in the hands of Mr. A. W. Watson, and once again he proved his great fitness to hold the reins, the manner in which he made and carried out the arrangements reflecting the highest credit upon his ability. It is a trying task to organise an exhibition of this magnitude, but Mr. Watson can always be depended upon to come out of it with "flying colours." The next (1913) show has already been fixed to take place about New Year, and we have no doubt a good hall will be found in due course.

International Bouts.

The Norwich made a very fine section, and were carefully handled by the judges. They were a little down in numbers compared with some previous shows, but we doubt whether better quality birds have ever been on view at the National. The non-fed classes, as is usual here, were particularly good as regards the type of the birds, while the Green classes were also excellent. The cup for best Nor. was won by a grand bird staged by Mr. W. Grewar, of Farfar. Many leading English exhibitors entered the lists, and they managed to secure a fair share of the spoils.

Yorks. were a grand collection, such an exhibition of the birds of position being seldom brought together at a Scottish show. All the cream of the Fancy were present, and in many of the classes the winners were separated by but a small margin. The clears were good, while the greens were extra grand in col., combined with all the shape and finish of the ideal specimen. Lizards were a nice collection, although they were a shade smaller in numbers. These classes were judged by Mr. J. Robson. The Crests and Crest-breds were a magnificent lot, some gems being out. The young Crest classes were especially strong. After carefully weighing up their respective points Mr. J. F. Dewar's selections were well received.

The Scotch Fancy section was rather a disappointing one, except in respect of quality, some birds of superior merit being on view. The birds were handled by a host of breeders, who visited the show in large numbers. There seems to be some petty jealousy in this section, and in the interest of the Fancy in general we hope to see a better feeling before another show comes round. Only two open classes were in the schedule, and some hardly thought the executive had cause for such a drastic reduction, though no doubt this section never has been a paying one. On the other hand, it cannot be a "National" show without a few more classes, and we should like to see both breeders and executive try and come to some agreement so this graceful bird may still hold the same position as formerly. The Patterson cup was won by a nice buff pied cock, shown by Mr. W. Allan. We noticed a clear buff hen "on the shelf," which in our opinion looked like one of the best in section. The Belgian section was well up to all former years, the winners in each class being birds of superior merit and well up in size; still, nothing like the days of long ago. Then we had something to charm our eyes, true in type and in general outline. Now many birds show the cross both in wings and tail.

The Border Section was scarcely up to previous shows in numbers, but some grand ones were shown in every class. We admired the third prize yellow cock, and in our opinion (as well as in that of many others) he is the finest yellow cock ever shown at the National, and that says something for his breeder. Evenly-marks were good in every point, and Greens came out strong in numbers and quality; some charmers were here. Cinnamons were also strong in numbers, and are getting more ideal in shape, although some just show a shade dark in colour for the standard chosen. We were sorry to hear adverse criticism in this section, and in some places there seemed just cause. No doubt no one can please every exhibitor, but some grand birds were left out entirely, where some only moderate ones got places in the prize list.

The Foreign section was well handled by our old friend, Mr. Dewar, and proved highly interesting and attractive, the visitors expressing great delight at the many very charming exhibits on view, notably the winning Sugar Bird, belonging to Mrs. T. Taylor, and the Tanagers, etc., owned by Mr. J. M. Walsh. The latter secured the F.B.C. medal with a lovely Australian Wood Swallow. The Goldies and Bullies were a wee bit disappointing, the absence of any "new faces" of superlative merit being very noticeable—house-moulted birds had quite a field day, and well deserved their honours. An English exhibitor, Mr. F. Price, scored a good win in the Goldie class, a difficult feat to perform against the pride of Bonny Scotland. The leading bird in the Parrakeet class seems to be a bit of a puzzle. It was entered as an "Adelaide," but it is not this species; we think that those who held it to be a hybrid are perfectly correct.

The judges were:—Messrs. A. Hirst and J. Sandison (Nor. Plainheads), J. Smillie and H. Bennet (Borders), J. F. Dewar (Crests, For., and part Belg. and Scots.), J. Robson (Cinn., Yorks., Liz., and part Belg. and Scots), J. Maddison (Hybrids, and part British); and P. McQuiston (part British). They got through their duties in good time, aided by an excellent light and very efficient stewarding, and taken on the whole, we did not hear a deal of adverse comment upon their awards.

The Norwich Plainheads.

Judges, Messrs. J. Ssndison and A. Hirst.

The Lizards.

Judge, Mr. Robson.

GOLD. LIZ. (6): 1, 2, Rukin ("the Lizard Prince"), a real beauty, a gem for Spangle, grand even rowing and dense col. throughout, lovely shape, in grand trim, 2 another good one, close up, grand shape and quality; 3, Barnes, good one, rare shape, grand feather, not quite so pure in col. as winner; 4, 5, vhc, Risehorough, good one, cl. cap, well cut, large good bold back spangle, good quality, 5 sweet shape, beaten only in col. SILVER (6): 1, 3, Rukin, again to the fore with a topper, lovely clear cap, a blaze of spangle, fine level col. throughout, splendid shape, in full bloom, 3 broken in cap, but good back work, and in very fine order, real good all-round bird; 2, Barnes, grand shape, hot one for col., lovely spangle on top, good ground col.; 4, vhc, Ross, very neat fine shape, slightly run in spangle, but grand ground col.; 5, Riseborough, good stamp, rare body col.

The Foreign Birds.

Judge, Mr. J. F. Dewar.

GOLDIE (23): 1, Price, fine, well-built bird, with a grand square-ent blaze, very clean in colour, good deep tanning, well marked everywhere, rich colour all over, house-moulted, a worthy winner; 2, Mrs. McLennan, the noted bird, better shape than winner, noble head and chest, grand style and carriage, splendid markings and tan, just beaten in colour and cut of blaze, needs its beak trimming; 3, J. Henderson, bonny, stylish bird, excellent shape, rich in colour, extra nice blaze, fine conditio, also house-moulted, well worth its place; 4, John Henderson, loses a shade to blaze properties, but good enough at all points to win at most shows, well put down; 5, Russell, trifle smaller, but well built, good square face, fine colour and polish; vhc, Pringle; hc, Craig; c, Cadman Bros. BULLIE (8): A singularly poor class for this show; 1, Finnie, real good bird for size and shape, great head and chest, well-cut cap, very solid and rich in breast colour, and finely polished; 2, Turner, not quite equal in build and carriage, but fine size and shape, rich breast, deep lustrous cap, good bars and back, mayhe loses a shade on finish; 3, 5, hc, Craig, lovely trio, the right type and colour, leader exceptionally nice quality, fine breast and cap, house-moulted; 4, Minnitt, bonny bird, very close up, fine size and style, full head and chest, trifle down in colour only; vhc, Jones; c, Lester. HEN BULLIE (8): 1, Ferguson, field plumage, big, rich coloured, beautifully shaped bird, rare good quality and markings; 2, Laidlaw, house-moulted, beaten the merest shade only, lovely hen for colour and type, finely marked, in great form; 3, Jones, bonny and stylish, sound-coloured, fine cap, carried a lovely polish, trifle thinner; 4, Cannon, in good form, fails a little in head, but all there for type, colour and markings, promising hird; 5, Mrs. McLennan, sweet hen, excellent size and shape; very close run, we liked well; vhc, Hayter; hc, Watson. PARRAKEETS (11): 1, Reeks, entered as an "Adelaide," but is not this species, looks like a hybrid (probably Rosella-Barnard), in which case ought it not to have been marked "wrong class"? in splendid condition and well staged; 2, hc, Miss Waddell, beautiful pair Rock Peplars Reading, in charming condition; 3, Mackenzie, exceptionally fine pair Black-checked Lovebirds, lovely colour and feather; 4, Davies, the noted King, real good specimen, gem for depth of colour and condition, hard luck to be so low down; 5, c, Baxby, hand-

The Mules and Hybrids.

Judge, J. Maddison.

CL., ETC. (3 and 5 pointed) CAN MULE (4): 1, 3, Martin and Archer, two noted birds, the clear Jonque Linnet, "Perfection," leading the way once again, in grand form; 2, Shellam, the equally well-known clear Greenfinch, splendid bird, in rare order; 4, Lavery, another excellent exhibit, can win at most shows. VARIEG. (17): 1, Martin and Archer, lightly-mkd. Greenfinch, bonny bird, in fine trim; 2, M'Nicol, magnificent variegated Jonque Goldie, immense size, lovely shape, col. and condition, pressed very hard; 3, Tams and Son, mkd. Greenfinch, bonny size and shape, nice exhibit; 4, 5, Gilbert, two clinking good Goldie Mules, excel in col. and condition; 6, M'Vittie; 7, Clapperton. GOLDIE-CAN., DARK (10): 1, Shellam, Jonque Goldie, an out-and-out champion, red-hot col., lovely polish and condition; 2, Gilchrist, another marvellous coloured Jonque, splendid size and shape; 3, 6, Martin and Archer, loses a bit in colour, but equal to any for size and shape; 4, Roy, bonny big Mule, excellent quality and style; 5, Grewar; 7, M'Vittie. LINNET-CAN., DARK (18): 1, Shellam, Jonque, great exhibit for colour and condition, beautiful size and shape, well mkd., wins well; 2, Aitken, even better shape than winner, grand head and chest, full of colour, close up; 3, Bell, also a beauty at all points, excellent size and shape; 4, G. Brown, grand quality, good sound col.; 5, Turner; 6, Martin and Archer; 7, D. Brown. GREENIE-CAN., DARK (13): 1, Brunskill, exceptionally rich col. Jonque, perfect condition and bloom, very nice shape; 2, Craig, trifle small, but simply lovely col. and condition, staged "in the pink"; 3, Somerfield, rather low down, we thought, grand bird at all points, noted winner; 4, Davies, bonny size and style, correct, sound col., well polished; 5, Bald; 6, Carr; 7, Edwards.. A.O.V. CAN. MULE (except Can. Bullie): 1, Heard; 2, Allan; 3, Johnston; 4, Macdougall; 5, Davidson; 7, Fraser. BULLIE HYB. (including Can. Bullie) (19): 1, Shellam, marvellous Canary-Bullie for colour, size, and shape, the best out without any doubt; 2, Mrs. M'Lennan, highly promising young Goldie-Bullie, immense size, fine colour, will be a champion later; 3, Lamb, lovely coloured Linnet-Bullie, beautiful build and carriage, one of the best out this season; 4, Walsh, another very good Goldie-Bullie; 5, J. H. C. Watson; 6, Dunn; 7, Buchanan. A.O.V. HYB. (15): 1, Martin and Archer, the celebrated Greenie-Chaffinch, looking very fit, wins the Dewar shield for best bird in show; 2, Ovenstone, exceptionally fine Goldie-Greenie, rare shape, grand blaze; 3, Lamb, noted Goldie-Redpoll, little gem for colour and shape; 4, Gilbert, very nice Bramble-Chaffie, shows the cross well; 5, Somerville; 6, Williams; 7, Marlin.

British Birds.

Judges, P. McQuiston and J. Maddison.

BRIT. GOLDIE (31): 1, Hurst, noted winner, very big, bold Finch, with a magnificent blaze, superb col. and condition; 2, 7, Richards, leader the noted Welsh winner, a grand bird, also in lovely condition, good blaze, but we thought rather lucky to score over; 3, Weston, the biggest and best cut blaze in class, beautiful, shapely bird, very pure in col., loses a trifle to winner in forwardness of condition and colour; 4, Lavery, bonny Finch, good type, blaze and col.; 5, Pitchford and Stocker, another real beauty; 6, Nicholson.

BULLIE (18): 1, Holbrow, house moulted bird, fine sound col., rich and clean, grand body and head, in lovely order; 2, Palmer, another cobby, typical bird, grand col. and polish; 3, Craig, we liked as well as any, very even, rich breast, lovely head, A1 condition; 4, Anderson Bros., good shapely bird, full of col., well-cut cap; 5, 7, Woods, two clippers, close up; 6, Cranne. LINNET (23): 1, Heal, gem for shape, size and soundness of col., lovely nutty tone, full of pencilling all over, wins well; 2, 3, Marley, two beauties for condition, leader a trifle small though, both splendid col., 3 exceptionally well marked; 4, Weston, very big, sound coloured bird, splendid condition, nicely pencilled; 5, Tucker, good stamp, well marked; 6, Storrie; 7, Martin and Archer. LINNET, F.M. (28): 1, Bald, very fine bird for condition and size, bonny shape and style, good sound col., fairly well pencilled; 2, Sykes, another big, shapely bird, excellent col. and markings, steady and neat; 3, Hodge, our choice, beautifully pencilled all over, finely polished plumage, steady and showy, lovely sound col.; 4, Heal, good at all points, well built, good carriage and col.; 5, Marley; 6, Ewen and Anderson; 7, Duff. BRAMBLEFINCH (8): 1, Sykes, gem for condition, beautiful col. and markings, lovely head and breast; 2, Weston, few feathers gone at throat, very big and shapely, deep, rich col., grandly mkd.; 3, W. Reid, good size and style, trifle slimmer in build, all there for col. and markings; 4, Patterson, good one for polish and markings, nice size; 5, Bancroft, fine bird; 6, Marley; 7, Mason. CHAFFIE (23): 1, Hurst, the noted winner, wonderful size, col. and markings, romps home; 2, Marley, also well-known, not quite the size of leader, but equal at all other points; 3, Nicholson and Son, beauty for condition, splendidly marked, nice sound col.; 4, Milne, very stylish, good wings and cap, nice col.; 5, McVay; 6, Jeffreys; 7, Bancroft. GREENIE (15): 1, McLean, lovely bird, sound and rich in col., carried a nice meal, splendid wings, big and stylish; 2, Stuart and Dalling, very close up, hot col., full of bloom, magnificent size and shape; 3, Walsh, also a beauty at all points, grand size and build, rare tone of col.; 4, Elder, bit small, gem for col. and quality; 5, Craig; 6, McVay, good one; 7, Tams and Sons; No. 1, Harris, we thought a grand bird. NON-FED GREENIE (26): 1, Waters, extra good in size and shape, very cobby and neat, rare col. and bloom; 2, Hurst, also a beauty, excels in polish and col., great size; 3, Marley, not far behind at any point, lovely head and chest, splendid size; 4, 7, Bald, both good, leader lovely col. and size; 5, Weston; 6, Messer. SISKIN (11): 1, Bell, marvel for bib, about the biggest we have seen, good col., fine size and shape; 2, Bald, very fine bird, not the big bib of winner, or quite the col., but better size and shape, lovely lacing; 3, Morton, also very nice, has size and style, finished off by the best of col.; 4, W. C. Smith, good head and lacing, good one; 5, Hoyle; 6, Sadler; 7, Harris. SISKIN NON-FED: (15): 1, Minnitt, wins well, bonny size and shape, very pure, attractive col., well marked all over; 2, Milne, excellent col. and style, nice cap and wings, fine condition, well laced; 3, Bruce, shade small, but good bib and markings generally, very promising bird; 4, Mason, good one, nice head and markings; 5, Connachie; 6, S. DUNFERMLINE.

Annual exhibition of the Dunfermline and West of Fife O.S. held in the Drill Hall, Bruce Street, Jan. 2nd and 3rd. An excellent lot of birds were got together. The hall makes a capital venue, the light, heat and accommodation being all that could be desired. The management of the show was in the hands of the Secretary (Mr. Alexander Hynd). He is a splendid official and "knows the ropes" right well. Great credit is due to him and to Mr. Thos. Harrower (Vice-President) and Mr. Harry Mowbray (Treasurer) for the success of the show. The judges, whose awards, taken on the whole, pleased everyone, were Messrs. J. Patterson (Scot., Fcy., Bord and Common), J. Young (Nor. and Crests), and G. Marlin (Mules, British and Foreign).

OBITUARY.

Mr. ALEX. D. YOUNG (Maryhill).

Maryhill O.C. has very suddenly lost a most promising young member by the death of Mr. Alexander D. Young, writes Mr. Robert A. G. McKissock, sec. Our young friend, after being released from his duty on Dec. 23 about nine o'clock, returned home, and after partaking of a hearty supper, and spending the remainder of the evening very happily with his wife and little son, and a friend, at his own fireside, retired to rest. In the morning his wife found he had passed away quietly, and that he had spent his last happy evening with her on earth. Much sympathy is felt for his young wife and little son, and for his aged, highly respected parents who are left to mourn the loss of a faithful son. His father, who has been in ill-health for fourteen years, is one of the oldest fanciers in the West of Scotland, and has been a member of the Maryhill Club since its inception thirty-five years ago. Our young member was only twenty-nine years of age, and bore an excellent character. He has seen much foreign service with the Army, and was a general favourite with everybody, more particularly so with his fellow-workers, who looked upon him as their strong man in all their athletic and aquatic contests.

Marshall, and J. Penman. Next meeting, 27th January.—W. Clarkson, Sec.

HANLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Albion Hotel, Dec. 20th. There was a good attendance. Mr. C. J. Robinson in chair. A considerable amount of business was gone through, after which a very interesting discussion took place regarding a cup, to be competed for by the Yorkshiremen. We also heard a good report from the show sec., Mr. B. Peake, re balance-sheet of late annual open show, which will put the society on a sound footing. At next meeting the balance-sheet will be presented, hoping all members will be able to attend.—G. Lawton, Sec.

STONEHOUSE C.B. & R.H. S.

Meeting held Cross Keys for the election of officials for the coming year. Mr. J. Cuthbertson presided. Agreed, that Mr. J. Cuthbertson again be president; Mr. J. Buchanan, vice-president; Mr. T. Mather, treasurer; Mr. T. Sorbie, racing homer secretary; and W. Melvin, secretary for the cage bird section. Meetings are to be held on second Saturday every month in the ante room of the public hall, at 7 p.m. We have a few new members, and are again in a very flourishing condition with a good fund to start with. Any fancier desiring to be a member can have full information by applying to me. Next meeting 13th Jan., 7 p.m., when we hope to see a few more new members.—W. Melvin, Sec., 45, Camsethan-st., Stonehouse, N.B.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

At last meeting classification for 24th annual show (members), Jan. 10th, was drawn up. Show to be held at headquarters, the Workman's Hall, Romford-road, Stratford, E. Several good specials were promised, and the society's 10 challenge cups will be competed for by exhibits bred by members. The Mayor of West Ham (Alderman J. R. Hurry) has kindly consented publicly to open the show at 6 p.m.; visitors to be admitted from 2 to 10 p.m., adults to be charged 4d. and children 1d. Mr. J. Robson will judge cage birds. Members are requested to send entries in early, and not give the poor secretary unnecessary work. The committee hope all who can possibly do so will call at hall before show and give a hand with pens. A little help, remember, is worth more than a lot of pity. Fanciers who join now can compete for cups at annual show. New members proposed: Messrs. W. E. Checkfield (Bromley), G. Hart (Leytonstone), G. Scales (Plaistow), H. Graves (Stepney), Wellum (Walthamstow), and A. Lovejoy (London, N.).—W. Maxey, Hon. Sec.

CLYDEBANK AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting, held Higgins' Hall, 28th Dec., presided over by Mr. Robb. Moved, that we go on with nomination and election of office bearers for ensuing year. Following elected: President, Mr. J. Robb; treasurer, Mr. D. Chambers. Show dates were fixed as follows: Pair show, 10th Feb.; F.F. show, 29th June, and annual show, 2nd November. On the following evening, Dec. 29th, the first annual supper was held, in Co-operative Hall, Dalmuir, when a goodly company of members and friends were present. After partaking of the good things on table, an excellent programme was gone through. Miss Robb, pianist, gave some excellent selections as an introduction, and it says much for the ability of this lady that she so ably adapted accompaniment to the various vocalists with or without music. Mr. W. Greer, who by the way is no novice at the piano, gave us one of his favourite comic songs, which fairly brought down the house with applause. Messrs. Kane, Flannigan, Miller, Bratten, and Robb all contributed largely to the success of the evening. In the interval selections on the gramophone were given by a friend. Special mention might be made of a beautiful descriptive rendering by the little Misses Walker, of "Dolly-Mine"; for their age it was excellent. Our chairman made a few well-chosen remarks, which, after the usual votes of thanks, and the singing of Auld Lang Syne brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.—J. Hart, Sec.

Some good singing was heard for the time of year. After the contest each member gave a song, and we had a very merry evening. If there are any Linnet fanciers in or around the district of Boldon, will they please join.—F. Unwin, Sec.

LEIGH.

Globe Inn Linnet Club first club contest, held January 1st, when we had an entry of 20 birds, and some very good singing was done. For time singing we adopted the new system of tappers, and right well did it work, considering it was our first time. All went off well. We gave the usual eight prizes—four for quality and 4 for time. Winners: For quality, T. Statham and J. Statham tie for 1st and 2nd, W. Barnes 3rd; J. W. Jones 4th. For time, J. McAllister, 296, 1st; J. Pool, 188, 2nd; J. Parkinson, 77, 3rd; Mrs. Brown, 63, 4th. Judges, quality, Messrs. W. H. Topping and J. W. Jones; for time, Messrs. R. Disley and J. Statham; tappers, Messrs. W. Amison, and another; timekeeper, Mr. B. Jones. Will all secretaries kindly note that they must get their owa bills printed with the Lancashire Affiliated Societies printed on top of bills?—J. McAllister, Sec.

LEEDS.

Quality singing contest, held Skinner's Arms, Buslingthorpe, Dec. 30th, when 16 birds faced the judges, 1st and 2nd, shared by Ward and Sellars; 3, shared by Hullen and Sellars. Judges: Messrs. Lorriman and Clayton. Also Dec. 31, when 19 birds sang for good prizes. 1, Chippindale; 2, Sellars; 3, Ward. Also Canary contest, when 3 good prizes were added to entrance money. 1st, Chippindale; 2, Wood; 3, shared by Binns and Blackburn. Judges, Messrs. Biss and Sissons.—C. Clayton, Hon. Sec.

Conclusion of our Christmas holiday Linnet contests, held at Old Bird House, King's Head, Shannon Street, Boxing Day, when 27 birds competed. 1st, T. Johnson; 2nd, T. Stead; 3rd, Butler; 4th, Chadwick. Judges, Messrs. Hardcastle and Naylor. Also Dec. 30, when 19 birds faced the judges. 1st, T. Johnson; 2nd, Wigfield; 3rd, Brophy. Judges, Messrs. Hardcastle and Naylor. Also Dec. 31, when 18 of the best birds in Leeds sang. 1st and 2nd, shared between Farrar and Wigfield; 3rd, T. Johnson. Judges, Messrs. Naylor and Hayes.—T. C. Summers, Hon. Sec.

WALKLEY & DIS. C.B.S.

Fifth annual show held St. Philp's Mission Room, Westmorland Street, which is in every way suitable for a bird show, being large and well lighted. As in previous years, it was confined to members. The birds were tastefully arranged all round the room, the staging being covered with green sateen. The society has a membership of 32, and the total number of birds shown was 207. Yorks. were the feature of the show, many winners in open competition being exhibited. Novices came up very well. What the Norwich lost in quantity they made up for in quality. Special winners: Best Can., Mr. Woolhouse; best novice Yorks., Mr. Daniels; best Hardbill, Messrs. J. and C. Scott; best Softbill, Mr. J. Ritson; points special over year, Messrs. C. Tomlinson, C. W. Marshall, J. Woolhouse, and A. Lawton. Judge, Mr. G. Browning, whose awards gave satisfaction.

Twitterings.

I have posted 1,200 schedules; any fancier omitted may have one on receipt of a postcard by me, writes Mr. A. Nicol, sec. of the Bathgate Show.

Will you kindly announce that Mr. E. H. Atkin is no longer representing me, writes Mr. Edwin Parr, the well-known maker of nest pans, etc., of Cobridge, Stoke-on-Trent.

The 1911 balance sheet of the Cowdenbeath C.B.A. shows a balance to the good of £13 15s. 7½d., which reflects every credit on the sec., Mr. J. R. Reid, and his fellow-officials.

Allow me on behalf of the members to thank you for your excellent report of our annual show given in last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. J. Spencer, hon. sec. of the Ardwick and Dis. C.B.S.

We had the pleasure of enrolling thirty new members at our show on Dec. 26 and 27, writes Mr. R. P. Fox, hon. sec. of the North Shields C.B.S. Among these were some of the most noted fanciers of the Mid-Tyne district.

I have sold my well-known winner (the clear buff Norwich cock) at a good figure to a well-known fancier, writes Mr. L. F. Harding (Wellingborough). I may add that I am also disposing of my winning strain of Greens.

We have been notified of the following corrections to show reports:—Blackburn, 3rd in the yellow Border cock class, Mr. G. Greenwell (not Davies); Frome, 1st prize Mrs. Leslie Bousfield and vhc Miss Bousfield (not vice versa).

The Rochdale Good Intent C.B.S. are having a mating competition on Jan. 10 at 7.30, at the Temperance Club, writes Mr. E. Hartley, the hon. sec. Fanciers and friends, don't forget to come; a hearty welcome is extended to all.

Will novice Border exhibitors kindly note error in schedule relating to cup? It should read for most points in the four classes, and not as printed for best bird, write Messrs. Meades and Smith, hon. secs., Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S.

Thanks for the splendid report you gave in CAGE BIRDS of our show, writes Mr. A. W. Douglas, sec., Elgin C.B.A. I hope again to report a balance on the right side, which will encourage the committee to do even better next year.

The Christmas holidays have rather delayed me in getting prize-money off, but all is now paid, writes Mr. J. Cook, sec., Blackburn C.B.S. Will all members holding money or tickets please return early, so that I can get balauce sheet made up?

The members of the Blyth and Dis. C.B.S., at the annual meeting in December, again elected, for the third year in succession, Mr. A. Hay (Berwick) to judge Norwich and Borders and British at their annual show on Nov. 9, 1912, writes Mr. W. Rowell, the sec.

Clubs and advertisers requiring spaces in the Year Book of the Brighton C.B.A. are requested to communicate with me, writes Mr. W. H. Gibb, the hon. sec. (19, Bond Street, Brighton). Membership now numbers over 60. Fanciers are invited; sub., 2s. 6d.; entrance fee, 1s.; ladies, 2s. 6d. inclusive.

The Sheffield O.S. balance sheet for the year ended Dec. 31 shows the very satisfactory balance to the good of £23 3s. 3d. This is the more creditable in view of the fact that 1911 is the first year of the society's existence. It reflects great praise on the sec., Mr. T. Bishop, and his fellow-officials.

Will fanciers kindly note that we are having open Linnet classes for house-moulted and field-moulted Linnets—a class for each—on Jan. 24, writes Mr. J. Hall, hon. sec. of the Eccles and Dis. C.B.S., 199, Liverpool Road, Patricroft, Manchester, who will be glad to send particulars to would-be exhibitors.

We shall be glad if, for the purpose of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, Messrs. W. J. Ferguson (Lancaster), A. E. Cheney (Plymouth), W. Bell (Hawick), W. Griffiths (Glasgow), W. Cullen (Crieff), G. Wheatley (Leicester), G. E. Russell (Birmingham), Parker Robinson (Furuess Abbey), will communicate to us their prescut addresses.

Owing to the shortage of entries, we are compelled to extend entries to Jan. 9, midday post, write Messrs. Meades and Smith, joint hon. secs. of the Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S. This is a genuine appeal for help, we having only thirty entries in all the open classes. Will exhibitors kindly support us? We have only three entries in all the novice classes.

Crystal Palace Cage Bird Show, Feb. 2 to 6.—Schedules will be posted to usual names on Jan. 10. Advertisements received for catalogue at 30s. per page Breeders' or trade cards inserted, 2s. 6d. each. Two stall spaces left, £3 3s. each.—J. W. Ramsden, Show Manager, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London, S.W.—Advt.

The 11th annual report and balance sheet for 1912) of the Reading and Dis. C.B.S. show a balance in hand of £16 3s. 7d.—a little more than £3 better than the amount brought forward from the previous year's accounts. This result is a satisfactory one in every way, and the sec., Mr. W. H. Pyke, and his fellow-officials are to be congratulated upon it.

Mr. H. Peverill, 49, Mendora Road, Fulham, is sending this week, per the White Star liner "Laurentic," a consignment of Canaries, consisting of several pairs of Norwich and Yorkshires, to Mr. F. Carpenter, of New York City, who is seeking to create a greater interest in the hobby there, and to form a society. The deal, we are pleased to hear, was effected through the advertisement columns of CAGE BIRDS.

Changes of Address.

Secs. and others are asked to note the following changes of address:—Mr. Jas. Wilson (sec., Malton F.S.), from Wold Street to 31, Sutton Street, Norton, Malton, Yorks; Mr. Geo. Thomson, from Roath Park to 106, Malefont Street, Cathays, Cardiff; Mr. Geo. Baker from Oscott Road to 79, Aston Lane, Perry Barr, Birmingham; Messrs. R. and W. Fox from Penzance to Nanceddon, Ludgvan; Mr. W. H. Pyke (sec. of the Reading and Dis. C.B.S.) from The Grove to "Hydrangea," 102, Radstock Road, Reading.

Our Literary Competition.

We regret to have to say that articles for our literary competition are coming in very slowly indeed, the entry to date in all sections being exceedingly disappointing. The closing date, remember, is Monday, Jan. 15; also that £6 6s. in cash prizes and a lovely £4 4s. original painting of birds look like "going a-begging." The conditions are very simple, and will be found repeated on page 592 this week. Now, readers, utilise your spare time at once by making an effort to secure one or other of our prizes.

NEXT WEEK WILL APPEAR

The Most Memorable Birthday Number of 'Cage Birds'

we have yet had the pleasure of placing before our readers

TWO MAGNIFICENT COLOURED PLATES

a charming Calendar in colours, an exceptionally interesting and lavishly illustrated art supplement, some entertaining competitions, a fine list of articles by well-known writers.

The above are some of the attractions of this great issue, which is being produced regardless of expense.

There is certain to be a great demand for this, our tenth, Birthday Number, and we ask all our readers to avoid risk of disappointment by ordering their copies at once from their newsagent.

Advertisements will close finally on Tuesday, January 9th, and as a unique opportunity for appealing to the widest possible collection of purchasers our Birthday Number holds the field.

May we earnestly beg our friends, not only to make certain of securing this number for themselves, but to tell all their bird-loving friends about it, and advise them to secure a copy also.

Finally, remember all communications must reach us, at the very latest, first post Tuesday morning next, Jan 9th, and as the great amout of "copy" to be got through will entail a very heavy strain upon all departments, including our printers, we shall appreciate the early receipt of advertisements, and all other communications intended for this special Birthday Issue.

We shall be glad to know, for the purposes of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, the names and addresses of the secretaries of the following societies:—Leith Jubilee O.S.; Milnathort O.S.; Marazion and Western Dis. B.F.A.; Bangor (Co. Down) and Dis. C.B.S.; Tamworth and Dis. C.B.S.; Lochcraig F. and F.A.; City of Norwich C.B.S.; Blackburn National Quality Linnet S.A.; North Shields C.B.C.; Long Eaton C.B.S.; Whittington Moor C.B.S.; Saxmundham C.B.A.. If this catches the eye of any members of these societies, we shall be glad if they will communicate the required information to us.

An Asthma Cure.

If Mr. C. K. Eaton will supply me with his address, I shall be pleased to send him a bottle of asthma mixture which I think will meet the case he mentions, writes Mr. W. Tatman (111, Midland Road, Wellingborough).

The Saucy Caterpillar.

The caterpillar of the puss-moth, which was rather sensational in appearance, also had the faculty of making "faces" at birds which came to eat them, and this was sufficient to frighten any young and inexperienced bird, said Dr. Chalmers Mitchell (secretary of the Zoological Gardens), when lecturing to children at the Royal Institution recently.

A Spirited Race.

The following is the position of the leaders in the competitions promoted by the Yorkshire C.C.:—The Bailey Trophy and Sandiford Cup Competition: Ogden Bros., 104 points; L. Dykes, 95; Thornton and Bower, 80; F. Alleu, 80; H. H. Towers, 76; J. Bailey, 73; C. Morrison, 72; and W. Broughtou and W. H. Shackleton, 66 each. Ramsden Cup and Money Specials: Ogden Bros., 129 points; L. Dykes, 111; J. Bailey, 75; H. H. Towers, 74; W. H. Shackleton, 55; and J. Thomas, 43. Open Novice Competition: Brown and Son, 69 points; C. Morrison, 59; Burdekin Bros., 27; A. Radley, 22; and T. Elsegood, 19. Junior Novice Competition: S. B. Grayshon, 98 points; A. Sutcliffe, 60; H. Simonett, 56; J. H. Fowle, 50; S. Tyas, 48; S. Midgley, 43; T. Tidswell, 42; and W. B. Atkinson, 41. The remaining shows are: Bradford City (all competitions), Skelmauthorpe (the Bailey Trophy), and Crystal Palace (all competitions except Junior Novice).—John Greaves, secretary.

A Silver Wedding.

Our readers will be interested to learn that Mr. and Mrs. John Frostick, of Balham, well-known as enthusiasts in all that concerns British and Foreign birds, celebrated their silver wedding on Dec. 28 last, and were the recipients of numerous congratulations upon the happy event, in which we cordially join. It will be the wish of all that they may be with us when their golden wedding-day arrives in the lap of Father Time.

Fanciers' Service at Bradford.

The members of the Bradford East O.S. will participate in the third annual fanciers' service on Sunday next, Jan. 7, at Park Chapel, West Bowling, Bradford, writes Mr. H. Hill, the secretary, and on behalf of the members I desire to extend to everybody who would like to attend this service a very hearty welcome. The two previous services have been of a very bright and helpful nature, and I would like to make this one the best attended of them all for, owing to the Pastor, the Rev. G. Hall Wallis, removing to the South of England during the present year, this will in all probability be his last address to Bradford fanciers. Therefore I make a special appeal to all interested in this movement to give him a really encouraging send-off, to make him feel that the deep interest he has personally taken in the welfare and all that appertains to the success of our society has been appreciated. The service starts at six o'clock. Members of the society will take part in the service, and the collection will also be taken up by the members; and may this be a record also! The services of a good soloist have been obtained. The Bradford East O.S. will be pleased to meet members of other societies, too, at the annual tea, concert, and prize distribution on Jan. 9 at Park Chapel Schools.

Owing to the numerous offers for my First Prize Linnet (Thurso winner) advertised in "CAGE BIRDS," it is impossible for me to answer all enquiries. This speaks volumes for your widely-read paper, "CAGE BIRDS." It is nourishing food for all bird-lovers.—J. Duncan (Inverness).

I thank very much your valuable paper, "Cage Birds," for I have had very good results from advertising in it—never had better in all the 30 years I have been in the trade. I wish "Cage Birds" every success in the coming year.—Mrs. E. Bruce (Salford).

WISHAW (Clydesdale).

Wishaw, Clydesdale, C.B.S. held their first annual open show in Watson's Hall, Young Street, Dec. 30. President, A. Allardice, jun., Vice-pres. Wright, Sec. and Treas. J. Watson, committee, Messrs. A. Allardice, sen., R. Wyper, R. Gemmell, H. McKenna, R. Richmond, W. Cringles, A. Rae, T. Dickson, C. Pollock, D. McAllister, W. Watson, etc. The members and friends have reason to be delighted with their first show. A few of the old members have joined the new society, and Saturday's turn-out of exhibits, which numbered 400, and the crowds of fanciers and visitors, speak volumes for their future success. Secretary Watson and his band of willing workers, each and all of them true fanciers, by their combined efforts did much to make the show the success it proved to be. Mr. Watson had everything well arranged, and is a most obliging secretary in every way. Goldfinches were a large turnout—25 in the class, and of most even quality all through—and were quite a show in themselves. A handsome gold medal, presented by W. J. Summerhill, Esq., for best young bird bred by exhibitor, was won by Secretary Watson. The hall is suited for show purposes, being well lighted, completely free from draught, and kept at nice temperature. Judges: Mr. C. Campbell (Glasgow) and Mr. R. Lambie (Whitburn), whose awards pleased all.

CARDIGAN.

The cage bird section in conjunction with the 32nd annual show was held December 14th. The numbers were not many, but the quality, especially in the British, was very good. The feature of the show was the Waxwing shown by Mr. Ray. Mr. Jones (Town Clerk) was the secretary, and right well did he fill the position; he is most obliging and courteous to all. The show was held in a spacious and well lighted hall, and the exhibits looked well amongst a display of chrysanthemums and decorative plants. Mr. O. E. Hodge judged.

NOR. (4): 1, Price, big bird, nice quality feather; 2, Muscott, some preferred, nicely fed, beautiful cobby shape and quality of feather; 3, Portman, not quite so big as leaders, but still a good one; 4, Price. YORKS (6): 1, Spurry, nice length of leg, good position; 2, Price, crosses wings at times, otherwise good; 3, 4, Portman: 3rd, nice size, well filled in back and neck, good quality feather; 4th, nice Yorks., not looking well when we were taking notes. A.O.V. (1): 2, Muscott, good varieg. Crest, beautiful radiation of crest. DARK CAN. MULE (9): 1, 2, 3, vhc, Portman, leader Jonque, beautifully fed, nice exhibit; 2nd, big stashing Greenie Mule; 3rd, buff Goldie, good size and feather; 4, Davies, Jonque Goldie, nicely fed, not quite the size of leaders; hc, Thomas. BRIT. GOLDFINCH (7): 1, Thomas, nice size and shape, beautiful blaze, good bars and tans, AI condition; 2, 3, Ray, big one, good blaze and bars, very pure in whites, not quite the condition of leader; 3rd, nice size and tans; 4, Davies, fine conditioned Finch; vhc, Davies; hc, Portman. BULLIE, ETC. (13): A fine lot; 1, 4, Davies, leader Bullie, nice breast, beautiful back, nice cap and bars; 4th, another charming lady, nice cap and condition; 2, Portman, Greenfinch (fed), nice quality feather; 3, vhc, Thomas, field moulted hen, cobby shape, beautiful texture of feather; hc, Portman. A.O.S. (7): 1, 2, Ray, leader charming Waxwing, excellent condition and feather, nice tippings to wings; 2nd, Hawfinch, an old face, in good condition, nicely fed, good bib and bars; 3, hc, Thomas, Yellow Bunting, nice V and head properties, rich col. back, in nice condition; 4, Price, Hawfinch, bigger than 2nd, but not quite so defined in markings; vhc, Spurry; c, Jones.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

CARNARVON.

North Wales C.B.S. first annual open show held Boxing-day, Assembly Rooms, Market Street, Carnarvon. The hall, for splendid light and everything essential for a cage bird show, is all that could be desired. The cage birds were nicely staged at a nice height, and there was no crushing to get to the winners. The manager, Mr. R. E. Griffiths, is a practical hand. The room was well lighted and free from draughts. There was a large entry. The birds numbered 383 in the 25 classes. The quality was of a high order, and condition had to turn the scales in the cases of many exhibits, especially in the Yorkshires, which were the pride of the show in numbers and quality. There was a good class of natural coloured birds; a few more of these classes would improve our shows, especially for novices. The challenge cups were well won. We congratulate the committee on their selections. Mr. J. W. Bancroft (Sale) had a very hard task, but got through his work of judging very satisfactorily. Mr. J. W. Jones is the capable secretary, and he was ably supported by Mr. W. Griffith (the assistant sec.), C. A. Jones, Esq. (president), Mr. Ed. Jones (treas.), Mr. R. E. Griffith (chairman), and Mr. Dd. Roberts (vice-chairman), who shared the work during the day; also by Messrs. James Jones, I. L. Sweeney, W. Roberts, W. R. Roberts, O. Griffith, R. Angel, O. Davies, O. Griffith. Specials for most points were given in every class. We would venture to advise the management to have two judges for future shows, as there are several birds entered in several classes. Challenge cup for Can. Mr. W. Nolan (a grand buff and a yell. Yorks.), British Mr. W. H. Williams (his well-known Britishers), Mule or Hybrid Mr. R. Jackson. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE leaflets were well distributed here, and it is hoped it will be the means of spreading the usefulness of the League to North Wales for next year.

DOUGLAS (I.O.M.).

Annual exhibition of the Manx Canine, etc., Association, held on St. Stephen's Day (December 26th). This year the venue was changed from Derby Castle to the Palace, which was voted on all hands a far better place. The exhibits were splendidly staged on the tier system in the Skating Rink, which provided plenty of light, and was nicely heated. Entries in our section were grand, being about sixty more than last year, and a record for the society; consequently competition in some of the classes was very keen. The judging of the Yorks. proved rather troublesome owing to the barking of the dogs, which were benched in rather close proximity to them. The British bird section made an interesting display, and some very fine Linnets were to be seen. The winner in the A.O.V. Mule class, a fine positioned buff Goldie-Can., was a good example of the cross, being of lovely quality and shown in magnificent condition; it secured the cup for best bird in show after a good race with the winning Grey Parrot, a really grand bird in splendid plumage. The attendance was good. His Excellency Lord Raglan (Lieut.-Governor) was present during judging, and was very interested in the exhibits. Mr. Geo. Robertson filled the role of secretary, and a right 'un he is for the post, being a hard-working and methodical official. Judging was over in good time, thanks to the smart set of stewards, and cards were promptly affixed. Mr. A. C. Brotherhood (Newport) judged, and his awards were well received.

The Pleasure of Rearing Feathered Pets.

By Miss L. PARKYN (Dursley).

The Experiences of a Happy Possessor of some pairs of Canaries.

Perhaps only those who are the happy possessors of one or more pairs of Canaries can fully realise the absorbing pleasure the rearing of these feathered pets affords. From experience I know how fascinating the hobby can become to those who from delicate health or other causes cannot get far abroad, and may perhaps have to spend weary weeks in the house. The interest in these lovely little songsters with their sweet ways strengthens as time goes on; and every step from the building of the nest to the appearance on the perch of the beautiful little young Canaries, is anticipated with great eagerness.

The Room in Order.

Let me speak first of my birdroom. It faces almost South. There is no fireplace in the room, so to ensure ventilation when the weather is not fit for open windows I insert a board at the bottom, and close the window on to it; this allows the air to go up between the two sashes in the middle, draught being thereby prevented. The walls of the room are painted twice a year; at least, everything is turned out of the room, and the walls, woodwork, and floor are washed with a solution of disinfectant. After this the walls and woodwork are rubbed with paraffin. The room is thus set in order just before the breeding season.

The hen Canaries are then placed in clean and newly enamelled breeding cages. I like, if possible, to have the cages cleaned and rubbed with paraffin after each nest of birds is out of the way; for with all the precaution one takes it is not an easy matter to keep down the red mite. I find that the best way to clean the cages is, after scrubbing them, to hold them down in a copper of boiling water and disinfectant; failing that to pour a strong, boiling solution through the cages and in every corner. At odd times I use the camphor and methylated spirit mixtures with which to paint all cracks and ends of perches, etc. It is wise to keep one or two extra cages ready cleaned to hand.

The Start with Songsters.

Three years ago I started with one pair of ordinary singing Canaries. The cock I had had for at least ten years, and he was probably eleven or twelve years of age. He was a rare singer with very sweet notes. The result of that union was three cocks and one hen the first season; two cocks and two hens (besides the first nest of five chicks unfortunately "sweated" by the hen) the second season. The hen was two years old the first season. All the offspring were strong and healthy birds.

In my second year I added two other pairs of birds, buying a nice pair of Yorkshires, also a Hartz hen to mate with a young bird reared the previous season. From the latter pair I reared nine birds in three nests. The Yorkshires were only one-year-old birds. Unfortunately our removal to another house upset their housekeeping arrangements. Through an accident the first nest was tipped over in the removal, and the eggs smashed just as they were due to hatch. There were chicks in two of them, and these were killed. The birds after this sad check to their hopes, I am sorry to say, refused to settle down again to the serious side of matrimony; so the result for them that season was nil.

The Fatal Third Season.

The other Canaries, however, had done well, and encouraged me to look forward to the next season with hope. Alas! my hopes were doomed, for the last of three seasons proved for me one long disaster. But from the reports in CAGE BIRDS I am led to believe that I was not alone that year in my experience. This was my consolation. One bird which I brought up entirely by hand, was so tame I could do what I liked with it. It fed from my hand and would walk around on the table and help itself to what it fancied from the various plates.

Time after time I took the starving nestlings in hand myself, feeding them every two hours from 4 o'clock a.m. with food moistened in my mouth. They took the food eagerly from the end of a pointed stick; but it differed, of course, in variety from that given by the parent bird, and I found the nestlings flagged at the end of the week. The survival of the one young Yorkshire was due mainly to my hand feeding; and to show that my effort was not all in vain this bird was "Very Highly Commended" in a novice class at the Gloucester Cage Bird Show held that season. This was my first exhibit.

My management has been regulated entirely by my perusal of CAGE BIRDS, CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, "The Yorkshire Canary," by Mr. H. W. Battye, "House's Canary Manual," and "Canary Breeding for Beginners," by Mr. C. St. John. During the winter I feed my birds on Spanish Canary seed as a staple. Three times a week I give each bird a half teaspoonful of rape and a pinch of hemp seed (substituting niger for hemp in the case of the hens) a slice of boiled carrot once a week and a spray of green food once or twice a week when procurable. If the last-named is not procurable a slice of apple may be given. In March I commence giving a little egg food. Young dandelion leaves I give to the cocks. But a "sweating" hen to which I had been giving this green food makes me now careful in giving it to hens.

When the Young Arrive.

I do not mate my birds before April 1st. I use nest pans lined with felt and give the birds dry moss with which to make their nest. When the hens are likely to lay I put a little treacle in the water. I substitute dummy eggs for the first three laid; replacing these and setting the hen on the third evening. On the evening of the thirteenth day of sitting I give the hen a little hard-boiled yolk of egg. On the second day after the chicks are hatched I supply yolk of egg and biscuit mixed, and one meal a day of milk sop. Chickweed I give after two or three days, hemp seed on the fourth or fifth day, and rape at the end of the week. I give a clean nest when the chicks are a fortnight old.

When the chicks leave the nest I immediately put them into a nursery cage and hang on to the breeding cage. I then gradually coax them to eat a little egg food, milk sop and crushed seed, and when they are a month old they are usually able to look after themselves. I do not give them water for a day or two, but a little milk sop instead.

At the age of five weeks they are, I find, able to crack seed, when I gradually diminish the soft food. They then have frequent use of the bath. If they live over six weeks I have not then much trouble until they start to moult.

For colour-feeding I have used the tins of ready prepared colour food according to the directions given. I feed the birds a little more generously during the moult, using a little maw seed; and towards the end of the moult I give linseed.

A Budget of Delight.

One of our Prettiest British Birds.

How a Jay may be kept in Captivity.

By "Nimrod."

Handsome and Daring, and a Bird that will Talk.

The Jay is one of our prettiest British birds; it is fairly common in wooded districts and would be more so, if the keepers would only leave them alone. It is quite true, that they are fond of eggs, and play havoc in some districts, both with the Pheasants' and Partridges' eggs, and small birds as well, and at times they are not particular in the matter of taking the young Pheasants or Partridges.

I have found out that they like a variety of food; they are very fond of nuts of most kinds, especially so of acorns, besides worms and various insects. A cock bird of about 3 years of age in full plumage is a treat to see, and I am glad that at some shows Jays stand in the money. I am in hopes yet of seeing classes provided for these birds; as they are very attractive. Why should not they be shown as much as the Chough? They are much more beautiful in plumage, and are very hardly and easy to keep, especially so if they have a roomy cage. But I must confess they are more dirty in their habits if they have not plenty of room. The greatest drawback is—they must have a large show cage; consequently, the expense of sending these large cages to shows is often an item to be considered, and this, no doubt, is the reason why many more do not keep these nice birds. I do think at our leading shows a class might be given them, so that they might compete amongst themselves. It would also encourage many a one to go in for keeping one of the largest of our British birds.

By The Dozen!

In my time I have kept some dozens of Jays. I used some years ago to raise a nest or two of them each year. This was long before our Fancy Press came out, and we had to feed them on what we thought best, or practically any food we could get. I am now speaking of my boyhood days; I used then to feed them on barley meal and scraped meat, worms, beetles, and what I could get hold of; also on bread and milk sop, oatmeal and crumbled biscuits made into a paste.

I was always successful in raising them; in fact I never had one to die. Thanks to their large mouths they were quite easy to feed, as they could take a larger supply at one time; and did not want so much attention as our smaller birds. I have had them so tame that they would follow me about the place and fly on my shoulders; in fact, they make nice pets, and can, with patience, trouble and time be taught to talk, without the tongue-cutting business. In those days this brutal practice was very common; but I think it has now quite died out in regard to these birds. But in the case of Magpies it is different, some still believing in this fallacy.

In this district (Ramsey) Jays are not nearly so numerous as they used to be. It is very rarely that a nest is found, unless one goes to the woods and wooded districts where there are not too many keepers.

If one desires to go in for these pets, it is most advisable to get a nest and hand-rear the young birds so as to get them steady and used to captivity. If kept scrupulously clean and in a large cage they are a real treat to see. A bird of this species in a small cage, with its feathers plastered up with filth, is a disgrace to its owner, and will, of course, give rise to comments to the effect that it is cruel to keep such birds in cages; and so it is in such unsanitary surroundings.

Sawdust is the best material to use on the bottoms of the cages, as it absorbs all the moisture of the excrement, and can quite easily be cleaned out.

To Rear a Good Bird.

After the young can pick up, they will eat nearly anything; they are particularly fond of all kinds of nuts and acorns, beetles, worms, spiders, etc. Any good soft food mixture as a staple food would do—small dog biscuit ground up and moistened or broken up and soaked in water; while some could also be given in a dry state. The birds are also very fond of cooked potatoes, also cooked greens, or other cooked vegetables. The greater the variety of food, the better their condition. They must have plenty of water, for they love a bath; also grit in their cages. If a bath could be arranged on the outside of the cage so much the better. In their nest feather it is difficult to tell the cocks from hens, but as a rule the largest birds and those at the top of the nest generally turn out cocks. There is so little difference in their plumage that both can be shown when adult. They attain their best plumage when about three years of age, although I had one for over ten years, and he seemed to get better each year. I was very sorry when I lost him, as he was a very fluent speaker, and could say quite a number of words and short sentences.

It is always advisable to keep Jays in separate cages; if you do not, at meal times there is bound to be fighting. I once had five in a large bacon-box wired in front; these I kept for some six months, until the noise they made and the fights which occurred compelled me to part with four of them, or I should not have been able to keep any, and I did not like losing all of them.

I can strongly recommend these birds, both as pets and exhibition birds to any young Fancier just starting in the hobby. They are quite hardy, and easily kept, but should certainly be kept out of doors, in large roomy cages.

The Young Naturalist.

*Happy to be at Home.

One Sunday a little while ago, as we were having tea, we heard a commotion outside where our birds were hanging. On going outside to see the cause of it we found our cage on the ground and the Greenfinch gone. A cat had knocked it off the window sill. We hunted everywhere for the bird, but could see nothing of it. Next morning our attention was called to a bird on our Bullies' cage, and to our delight it was our bird returned. We put its own cage out, and it flew down to it, and hopped in, and now it is quite as bright as ever, and seems happy to be at home again. —Sent by Albert Brown (age 15 years), 16, Glover's Road, Reigate.

A Lark's Trustfulness.

A gamekeeper not long since was going along a path in Elgin when he observed a Hawk in pursuit of a Lark. The Lark circled round and manœuvred frantically for a time, but the Hawk was gradually getting nearer, and just as they were right above the man the Lark suddenly dived downwards and alighted right on the man's hand, where it nestled and shivered in fear. The Hawk came to within a few yards, but seeing itself baffled sailed away in wrath. The Lark, after the danger was over, the man very properly released, and it soared up into the sky singing its beautiful song, perhaps in gratitude to its deliverer. It was a strange instance of the fear of man being overcome by a greater fear for a more relentless enemy.—Taken from the "School Monthly," and sent by Marie Smith (aged 14), 99, Richmond Villas, Penkhull, Stoke-on-Trent.

Correspondence.

A Cure for Colds and Asthma Wanted.

Sir,—In your issue of Dec. 16 I wrote asking fanciers with a large experience to kindly give recipe for severe cases of asthma, and so help many who would welcome such information. I notice, however, in your two subsequent issues not a single "tip" from your many readers. May I appeal once more through your columns? Must I put it down to fanciers' unwillingness to help? Possibly it is the busy season that accounts for no replies. C. K. E.

Sir,—I have always found the following recipe act first-rate in all cases of colds:—1oz. syrup of squills, 2 drachms tincture of aconite, and 2 drachms tincture of lobelia. Shake well to mix together. Dose: ten drops in drinking water daily, or one drop in bird's beak from the end of a darning needle, night and morning. J. BROXUP.

The Secret Revealed.

Sir,—Kindly allow me space to thank the gentlemen who have written me personally and through CAGE BIRDS for their kind remarks re the management of Llanrwst Show. I can assure everyone that I am at home when I have my hands full in anything that appertains to our hobby. It may be interesting to other secretaries to know how the birds were so promptly despatched home, and also of their early arrival at their destination. If secretaries want courtesy from the railway company they must give it. I personally went to the station and asked the officials to be good enough to see that they were properly put into the van. As I am well-known amongst the officials, they at once did me the favour of telephoning to the next junction asking for plenty of hands to put the boxes on the main line. The same was done until the birds reached Chester. It is quite simple, and the secret is: Be courteous.

J. KERSHAW.

Sec., Llanrwst C.B.S.

P.S.—I have to thank the committee for their hard work.

Pity the Poor Show Secretaries!

Sir,—I was very pleased to see the letter from Mr. Stevens, the Derby show secretary, as so far as he is concerned it clears the matter up absolutely, and I have no one but myself to blame for not receiving a schedule from him. I see by his letter that Mr. Stevens thinks an apology is due to him from me, and as I like, if possible, to keep away from the law courts, I most humbly apologise to Mr. Stevens, and I sincerely trust that he has not had many sleepless nights through my sending to the Fancy Press. What a terrible mistake I made! I must never let such a thing occur again. Had the postcard been stamped at the place where it was posted—viz., Aylsham—the address, "Mr. A. Dazeley, Bird Fancier, Aylsham," would have been quite sufficient, as everyone here knows me as "the bird fancier." The reason the card bore the Norwich postmark was because I was too late for the last clearance at our post office, and the card was put in with the letters collected at our railway station, and was, I expect, stamped on the night mail train at Norwich. Now, Mr. Stevens, kindly accept my humble apology, and if you have any out-of-pocket expenses over the matter, send in your account, together with solicitor's fees, and I will forward cheque at once. I owe no apology to Mr. Stickland, the Windsor secretary, as he did not receive a card from me.

ARTHUR J. DAZELEY.

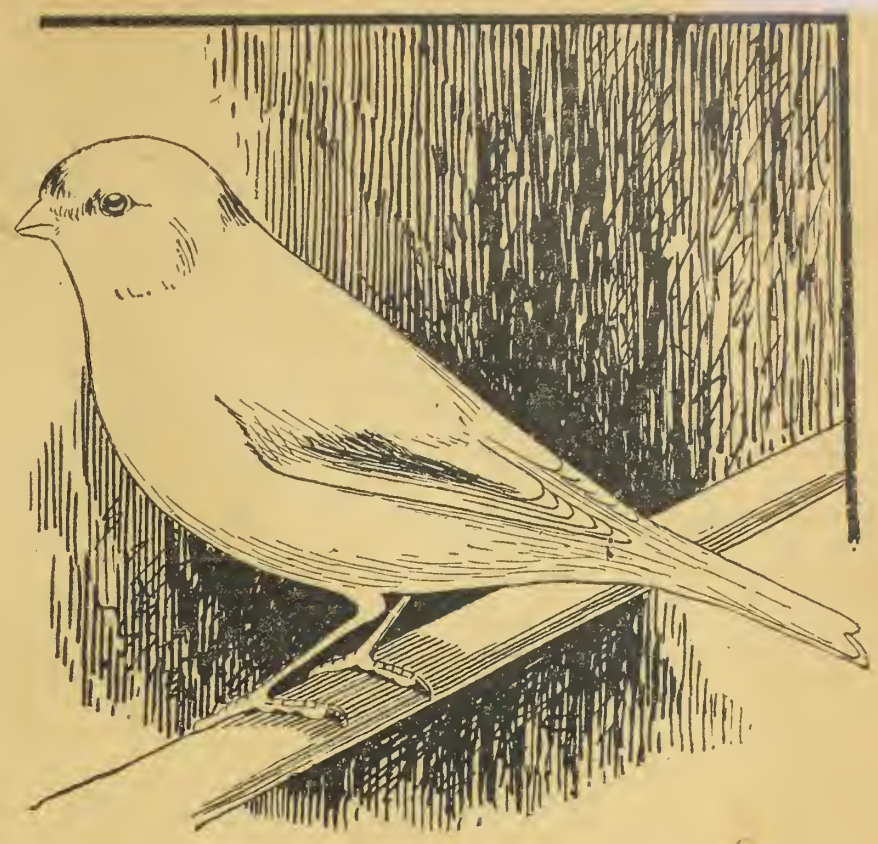
A Plea for Novice Classes.

Sir,—I was pleased to read in your last issue Mr. Downing's powerful plea for novices, and I can truthfully say I agree with him in all his points, as I do not think the novices are catered for as they should be. Take for instance an open show held a few weeks ago not many miles from Manchester. Some of the classes read thus: Open Norwich (7 classes), cancelled; Novice Norwich (four classes), 35 entries; and one novice class reads: Clear, Ticked, or Unevenly Marked Yellow or Buff cock or hen unflighted. Now, I should like to know what judge is there living who could pride himself on having for certain found the winner and also done justice to the other birds in the class? I, myself, think there is no judge who could honestly say he had placed the birds in such a class as they should be. The Yorks classes did better, but still the novice was ahead. These classes were: Open Yorkshire (seven classes), 34 entries; Novice Yorkshire (three classes), 34 entries. The British bird classes did not contain a single novice class, yet there were ten open classes, in which were 59 entries; and, mind you, 24 of these were shown by one man. Yet at our society's (Ardwick) show (and we have passed the new novice rule) we had nine classes with 61 entries, and almost all of these were shown by novices. These few facts, I think, ought to convince fanciers generally who lays the golden egg. While I am on the matter of the British bird classes, I should just like to state that the Premier Society of Manchester expect to pass this new rule at their next meeting; so, you see, things are beginning to go with a swing here. This is only giving three sections, but all the others run the same; and who can deny that if the novices had been given more scope there would have been more entries? These are facts, and I should advise other fanciers to study their CAGE BIRDS, and they will find that nearly all other shows put the novice to the front. In conclusion, I would advise all novices to wake up and fight for their cause and the bettering of their classes, and I feel confident it will do away once and for all with that often-asked question: "What Causes Short Entries?" and it would also benefit societies financially by extra entries.

R. BOOTH.

Sir,—With your permission, I should like to reply to friend Downing re the above. In the first place I should think it is about time Mr. Downing "got a move on" and got out of the novice section, so as to give the younger end of the novice section a chance. As regard his pet fad of making a difference between the British bird section and the Canary section, can Mr. Downing tell us how this encourages entries in members' shows? As a member of Ardwick and Dis. C.B.S., I think it quite possible to account for the large entry in British bird section at the past members' show without giving all the credit to Mr. Downing's "pet fad." Of course, no one would suggest that Mr. Downing wants some of the novices to go out into the open so as to leave less competition for himself. We know him too well for that. Still, it looks suspicious to those who do not know him so well as we do. In conclusion, I shall be glad if Mr. Downing will answer the following questions for the benefit of those of the members of the Ardwick Society who do not see eye to eye with him:—(a) How many members of Ardwick C.B.S. showed in the novice section with Canaries who were entitled to show in the open with their British? (b) How many members of A.C.B.S. have taken advantage of the new rule to go out into the open with British birds? (c) How long will it be before someone proposes to allow a member to show his Yorkshires in the open without its affecting his standing with Norwich? (d) Why was not the foreign bird section included with the British in the new rule? (e) What is the difference between motion and progress? I am writing this against my inclination, so enclose my card and sign myself "WHISKERS."

A Roller Canary Club for Scotland.



Sir,—I was very pleased to see Mr. Bradfield's letter in CAGE BIRDS on the above subject. I am a breeder of Roller Canaries, and reside about thirty miles out of Glasgow. I would be pleased to become a member; and to my knowledge there are about twenty other breeders in this district who would also become members. I can inform Mr. Bradfield that there are a good number of Roller breeders in and around Glasgow, as I have had the pleasure of supplying a large number of birds to breeders in that neighbourhood. So, if Mr. Bradfield and Mr. Forrest would take up the question, and, with the kind assistance of CAGE BIRDS, get a number of breeders to meet in Glasgow, I will be very pleased to give a donation towards the expenses incurred. I hope that the fanciers in and around Glasgow will take advantage of Mr. Bradfield's kind offer and assistance, and come forward and form a Roller Club in Glasgow, and show the people that the Roller Canary can be bred and trained in Scotland as well as South of the Border.

JOHN THOMSON.

[We shall be glad to lend what assistance we can, in the way of publishing notices and reports of meetings, etc., of the proposed society.—Editor.]

Sir,—I was pleased to see that my article which appeared in CAGE BIRDS issue of Dec. 16, entitled "Roller Canary Breeding in Cold Caledonia," had been the means of finding out that there was at least one residing in Glasgow who had at one time been, and is still, a fancier of this variety of the Canary. Mr. Bradfield in his letter says he was one of the original founders of the British Roller Canary Club in London. I can assure you, Mr. Editor, that it is delightful news to me to know that we have such a practical man in our midst, because novices in the Fancy in this part of Scotland have not been able to get a clear explanation as to what is meant by the different tours of the Roller Canary's song. We often read in CAGE BIRDS the results of the different song contests that take place in England, but wherein lies the difficulty in understanding the various names given, such as bell, schockel, water bubble, glucke, bass roll, etc.? These terms are really foreign to me, as I have never been able to come across anyone who could explain the different tours properly. I am certain Mr. Thomson, of Stevenston, N.B., and myself will be delighted to make Mr. Bradfield's acquaintance, and if he would kindly furnish his address or call at my address (11, Garrioch Quadrant, Maryhill, Glasgow), I shall be glad to discuss with him the proposal of forming a Roller Canary Club in Scotland. We have our valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, to assist us, and I feel certain, as Mr. Bradfield says, the Roller Canary has only to be heard in its beautiful song to be appreciated more than it is in this part of the country. If there are any other members of the Fancy interested in the formation of a club, I shall be glad to hear from them on the subject.

Do Our Shows Encourage the New Beginners?

Sir,—Most weeks, on opening CAGE BIRDS, one sees the notice from secretaries "no entries," or "entries short," "entries extended," etc. Now, if committees and secretaries would only open their schedules and provide classes for the young hands, those who have only just started in the Faucy with a bird or two, and so encourage them to do more, things would be different. A class should be provided for birds purchased by novices; there should also be a class for non-fed birds. Then, again, this might be extended to British birds—novice, field-moulted birds, say. The time has come when societies should encourage the new men in the Faucy, so that they may be able to take the places of the old men when their day has gone over. I take it there are some such classes as I suggest provided at some of the shows, but every show should hold out encouragement, and help start the new blood in the Fancy. There are now some so-called novices who are quite "old hands"; these have had birds for years, and well know how to manage and show them. It is nothing unusual to read, respecting a bird in the novices' classes, "good bird, could have won in the open," etc., and I want to see young fanciers who only possess a bird or two given a chance, to encourage them to go in for birds more strongly. This would make it better for the Fancy all round, besides providing a market for the surplus birds. Still, when one looks back, say, ten, fifteen, or twenty years, and sees what strides the Fancy has made, it is really surprising. I believe that all the bother as to the "cruelty of keeping birds in cages" will only have the opposite effect—it will boom the Fancy and cause many more to enter it. I think also that classes should be provided for best-matched pairs of Canaries, also for a pair of Hybrid or Muling breeders for young or new fanciers. Novices stand quite as good a chance in getting a winning Mule or Hybrid as the old hands. I do not say, of course, that they would breed such a good exhibition Canary as the old hands who have a lot of birds and can mate up such birds as will produce a good specimen. I also think committees should go one further, and give a class at each show for children under a certain age. But this might be objected to by some, as children whose fathers have birds could show the parents' birds. I know of a good number of children who have birds, however, and they might, I think, be encouraged to enter by charging no entry fee and giving a small prize. I hope these few remarks will be read and considered by all show officials so as to start young beginners.

Wild-Bird Life.

Early Songsters.

Christmas has passed without our experiencing Christmas weather. It is now so exceptionally mild and almost springlike that the wild birds are getting a little bit out of hand, and unless we soon get a spell of sharp frost to check their ways, we shall have them acting in a manner quite unusual for mid-winter. Although the weather in a sense is unseasonable, still it is pleasant to listen to the song birds in the early morning. As is natural, the Song Thrush leads the way, and he requires some beating in the musical department. There are several species that are probably more persistent singers, as, for instance, the Yellow Bunting, Skylark, and Robin, but no bird forces himself upon one's attention more than this bold fellow does. In the first place he is generally performing in the vicinity of buildings. He will take up his position either in the branches of a fruit tree in one's garden or upon some large elm close by. His song is loud and far-reaching, and no one within fifty yards of him can fail to notice it. Listening to the various birds singing the other morning, it appeared to the writer that all the performers were young ones. Their song consisted of long, continued, running notes, with an occasional defined utterance, giving one the impression that the singers were only learners. There was an absence of phrasing and of the clear, distinct notes that one hears in the old birds' song. Young birds certainly commence singing earlier after the moult than adult specimens. There may be many reasons for this. Young ones are generally vigorous and strong, and appear to go through the first moult without an effort. As they do not cast the tail and long wing feathers, there is less strain upon the system, and they have, of course, not gone through the wear and tear of the breeding season, which in many cases is prolonged well into the autumn. Nearly all young ones commence to warble before they throw off their nest feathers; then they discontinue for a time, and commence again if the weather be favourable when they have nearly acquired their new plumage. Of all wild birds perhaps the young Robins are the first really to sing.

Wings as Weapons.

The Peewit is very conscious of the power of its wings as a means of defence, and will beat off Crows and Gulls from the neighbourhood of its nest with great courage. The Redshank is aware of this, and frequently places its own nest within a few feet of the strong-winged bird.

Parasites on Birds.

In this country Swallows and Martins appear to suffer more from the attack of insects than do any other birds. The particular parasite that attacks them is very nearly a quarter of an inch in length, and some nests are infested with them. It is just possible that when a pair of Sparrows annex the nesting site of the Martins they find the home too warm for them, and so after a time make another move, allowing the rightful owners to return.

FORFAR.

Forty-first annual show of the Forfar C.B., etc., Association, held in the Reid Hall, 30th December and 1st Jan. Cage birds were nicely staged in the upper hall, an ideal place for such a show, being well lighted, free from draughts, and kept at a nice even temperature, which was much appreciated. Entries did not come up as well as we have seen them, this, no donht, owing to so many shows being held at this time. But we trust that the attendance came up to expectations, and that the show was a financial success. The President (Mr. Ernest Grant) is a true fancier, and a gentleman who is looked up to for his unbounded kindness and liberality. The hon. secretary, Mr. J. F. Watson, and his assistant were indefatigable in their efforts to ensure success. They were ably helped by the Committee, Messrs. W. Coutts, J. Bowman, A. B. Reid, W. Warden (vice-presidents), A. Low, J. Low, J. Duncan, D. Cable, G. Cable, J. Smith, D. Duncan, J. Shepheard, J. Fyfe, W. Wisbart, W. Gould, A. Tyrie, A. G. Stewart, J. Cable, J. Fairweather, C. Wishart, and W. Smith. Judges: Norwich, Mr. W. Bishop (Stirling), Borders, British and Foreign birds, Mr. J. H. Adam (Glasgow); their awards appeared to please all.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING C.B.S.

Eleventh annual members show, held in the White Lion Hotel, Dec. 16th. The room is a large one, and well adapted for a bird show, being free from draughts. The entries totalled over 200, and the quality all round was excellent. Cup for best young bird bred by the exhibitor was won hy Mr. R. Lawson with a grand yellow Norwich hen, but afterwards turned over to Mr. Fenton, who was 2nd with a good stylish Yorkshire, the first bird not being eligible. We are pleased to see the novice come out on the top, as this is Mr. Fenton's first year of breeding and exhibiting; good luck to him, and may he breed a cup winner next year. All the exhibits were well looked after by a good body of fanciers, and there was a grand muster of visitors present all day. The secretary's duties were discharged in a capable manner by Mr. R. H. Dixon. The awards were made by Messrs. R. W. Moles (Durham) and A. J. Notley (Hetton-le-Hole).

ORMSKIRK.

Annual show of the Ormskirk C.B.S. held Nov. 25th in the Church House Assembly Hall, large well-lighted, adjoining the quaint old Parish Church. A very nice entry resulted. The prizes were on the sliding scale, the Society adding 6d. to each entry of 1s. per cage, all to be given in prize money. Several silver medals and other valuable specials were offered; and these helped also to induce keen competition. Nor., as is the rule here, were very good in quality and type. Yorks were also very smart. Borders were a treat for a members' show, and very keen was the competition. This is going to be a stronghold for these jaunty ones. Mr. Tiffin is a most capable secretary, and has all the business in apple-pie order. There was a capital attendance of visitors. Mr. C. Houlton judged, and exhibitors were well pleased.

Under Cross-Examination.

An Interview with Mr. J. C. BARNES (Sheffield).

While on a visit to a recent show in the Sheffield district, writes one of our representatives, I noticed a well-known fancier and judge—Mr. J. C. Barnes, to wit—very freely and kindly giving information about the Canaries that were on view, to quite a number of beginners in our hobby. It occurred to me that his "hints" will be welcomed by the wide circle of budding enthusiasts reached by our favourite, CAGE BIRDS, and I determined that on the morrow I would visit Mr. Barnes at his home, and put him under "cross-examination." He was nothing loath; and so in due course I found myself on the car bound for the suburb of Walkley.

Once in Northfield Road, I soon located No. 113. My luck was in, for after exchanging greetings in the true Fancier's spirit, Mr. Barnes told me he was at liberty for the rest of the day. Good, I thought; here goes!

First, however, I espied several very valuable silver cups displayed about the room, also a quantity of silver plate, etc., all highly prized by the owner, and I stopped to admire these trophies. Many meritorious specimens must have been benched at one time or another to capture such a choice lot of "specials." Naturally I next expressed a desire to see the birds; so the stairs we mounted. The bird room is situated at the end of the first landing. It is very spacious, a matter of 18 feet long by 12 feet broad, with a large double window facing due south, which has a pleasing outlook over a well set-out garden. It also possesses capital top light—a shaft-like arrangement, this, which affords efficient ventilation without draughts. The ceiling is whitened, walls distempered a delicate shade of pink, and floor covered with neat oilcloth. Two small tables hold the various utensils, etc., necessary for every-day use. Upwards of 70 single breeding cages, all of uniform size, 21½in. by 16½in., enamelled blue inside, and all loose fronted, are nicely arranged in such a position as to obtain the most light. Then there are flight cages capable of accommodating a matter of 20 birds in each, 11 of them, got up to match the smaller cages. Truly Mr. Barnes' bird-room and its furniture border on the ideal.

A Goodly Collection.

Coming to the birds, I could see at a glance that Mr. Barnes is a stickler for type and quality, while those two great essentials, substance and colour are not overlooked. On mentioning the fact that size predominated in many instances, Mr. Barnes replied: "Yes; you know a 'good big 'un' will always whack a 'good little 'un,' and no mistake." Certainly, wide, rising heads, thick necks, deep chests of fine width, short wings and tails, clearness of cut and correctness of carriage were characteristics, possessed in abundance by this stock of Norwich Plainheads. The cock birds were truly a magnificent lot, and the majority could hold their own in the keenest of competition, while the hens were simply superb. We saw 6 large flight cages, with about 20 in each cage, and a better collection of sweetly moulded damsels it will be hard to find true to type, feathered to perfection, and of rare size and colour. With such an array of charming creatures, winners are bound to be produced.

Mr. Barnes also keeps some Yorkshires of great merit, birds of wonderful length and position, with grand backs and wing carriage, and very leggy and stylish. Space forbids a lengthy mention, but in a nutshell, we may say that they are equal in merit to their Norwich brethren, though not quite so numerous.

A Rain of Questions.

Then I commenced to fire away my questions at this well-known authority on Norwich Plainheads and Yorkshires in an endeavour to enlighten those Fanciers who are plodding along in the early stages of their careers.

For breeding purposes, which do you prefer, buff cock to yellow hen or vice-versa?—Buff cock to yellow hen; my belief is that the progeny then are larger and stronger. A clear should be mated to a mkd. bird, for this simple reason that the youngsters come out clears and marks, suitable for the various classes provided.

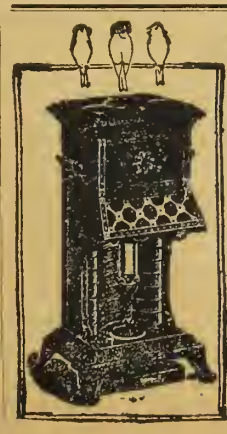
What is your opinion on the use of green blood and heavily marked birds?—My candid opinion is that green blood is the real fountain of colour; the experience of 20 years has proved this correct.

As regards quality, substance and type?—Use good feathered hens, as quality comes from the hen as a general thing. Substance, it is an admitted fact, is obtained, and retained by constantly breeding with large male birds. The hen is answerable for that great essential, type; good shaped hens are invaluable.

Do you advise using one cock with two hens?—As a rule I would not advise this procedure. I like one cock to one hen; by so breeding, stamina and substance are retained better, I am convinced.

As regards showing, where do you find the novice often fails?—In Norwich, far too many birds are shown "too long in body"; and in Yorkshires many are too thin in neck. My advice to the novice is to visit a show or two, and study the winners. He ought to progress more by so doing, than by just reading about the winners.

Have you anything to say about the washing of these birds?—Well, I should advise one who is not well up in this to tub his birds a full week previous to show day, spraying them lightly each day after being washed, this giving them ample time to "fine down" before being judged. The novice often leaves soap in the feather. The birds should be well rinsed on "wash day," and not a particle of soap should remain.



To Get Condition.

Can you give the novices a "tip" as regards procuring that high condition necessary for success on the show bench?—Well, now, at one time or another, this has been published in CAGE BIRDS, but may be some present-day Fanciers have missed it. Procure one pint of the best port wine, 1lb. of the best honey, 1oz. of crystals of citrate of iron and ammonia. Heat the wine and add the honey, stirring well until dissolved. Then place the citrate in this liquid. The latter takes a little time to dissolve, but with a little stirring all comes right. When cool, bottle up tightly. It is then ready for use. I advise giving this, with the usual egg and bread food; that is eggs boiled hard, chopped up finely, with bread crumbs added (or biscuit). Add enough of the port wine mixture to make the egg food just moist. Give to each bird half a teaspoonful, say twice or three times a week. It is safe to use, and is not fattening, therefore is good for all varieties of Canaries. I have used it with great success.

Chatting on "things in general" Mr. Barnes said that in his opinion the Norwich Plainheads are advancing. Fanciers are getting them more chubby, shunning long-bodied birds. The Yorkshires are also on the up-grade. Better quality prevails at the present time and position is being well looked after.

I consider, he went on, that to-day the shows are carried on in a very straightforward manner, and that the Fancy is cleaner than ever it has been before. As you know full well, my travels of late years have been North, South, East, and West, and on every hand I have met genuine sportsmanship amongst the exhibitors. I have officiated as judge at many shows this last few years, and have been well supported; in fact, I am very proud of the many record entries obtained, where I have been adjudicating. Judges are always pleased when plenty of work is found them. I have just been engaged to officiate over part of the Norwich Plainhead section at the forthcoming Crystal Palace Show.

My time had been spent in an enjoyable manner, but train time was quickly approaching, and I was bound to get away. After having partaken of Mrs. Barnes' kindly hospitality I made tracks for the station, and was soon en route for home.

Another "Humanitarian" Bubble Pricked

Caged Birds and the Spread of Disease.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London. Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. CUSHNY, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto.

More Local Hon. Secs.

This week I have the pleasure of announcing the following additions to our list of Hon. Secs. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE should be represented by a local hon. sec. in every town, so that the knowledge may be brought home to every individual bird-keeper that there are people whose one aim it is to prohibit the keeping of cage birds, and that only such an organisation as CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE can put up an effective defence against the action of these faddists and bring forward evidence to refute the unprincipled mis-statements made by them in their propaganda. Members acting in the capacity of local hon. sec. could do much in introducing our certificate scheme to the notice of the bird-shop keepers in their own town, and in getting them to co-operate with us in our intention to show our opponents that the keeping of a bird does not involve the perpetration of the barbarities they associate with our hobby. In order that the names of all CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE hon. secs. may be included in the list about to be published in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1912, they should reach me not later than January 20th.

Purley, Surrey.—Mr. H. Halhead, St. Heliers, Foxley Hill Rd.
Hull.—Mr. C. E. Jacklin, 48, King's Bench St.
Belper.—Mr. A. R. Holden, Bankfield House, Chevin, Belper.
Bridlington.—Mr. J. Howard, 14, Cemetery Rd.
Battersea.—Mr. J. Best, 4, Battersea Rise, Clapham Common, London, S.W.

Reduced Admission to the Shows.

With the end of the present show season almost in view there remain to be held only two shows of those previously announced as granting preferential terms of admission to members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. These are GUISBORO, held on Saturday, 6th inst., the date of this issue, and SUNDERLAND, at Miners' Hall, Roker Avenue, on 12th, 13th inst. To these is to be added:

BATHGATE, 29th Jan.

The admission to this show for LEAGUE members will be nincpence and fourpence.

I am pleased to gather from numerous letters received that the concessions made during the season now closing have been greatly appreciated all round. They have resulted not only in increased attendance at the shows affording them to our members, but in a general extension of the good fellowship among bird-lovers generally which it is one of the objects of the LEAGUE to promote, and I have reason to believe that next season our list will be of much greater proportions.

"The Animal World's" Latest.

After a rest of some months in its attacks on cage-bird keeping, "The Animal World" comes out with a scare headed "Caged Birds and Disease." It begins by saying "There is very little to be said in favour of keeping birds of any kind in cages," and for even this admission that there is something, however little, to be said, I suppose we must be proportionately grateful, for the "humanitarians" have hitherto persisted in taking the line that the keeping of cage-birds under any conditions is an unmitigated barbarism.

The leaderette then goes on to say that medical men have "recently" called the attention of the public to the fact that many birds may be dangerous as carriers of tuberculosis, and it instances the statement of a French doctor "some years ago" that Parrots were "very efficient carriers of consumption." "Frequently tuberculous infection may be traced to caged birds. Ordinarily there is a high death-rate among birds living in cages, especially when there are several together. Tuberculosis spreads among them. The ailing birds propagate the bacilli and become a source of infection for the occupants of the house. In addition, tuberculous matter may pollute the food, especially milk, butter, cheese, bread, jellies, and cold meat. When it is considered that of Canaries alone some 400,000 are sold annually in England, it will be seen that we need to keep a careful watch on the health of our feathered pets, and in this way help to protect our own."

Now let us enquire somewhat into this. We who know something of our subject know that ordinarily there is not a high death-rate among birds living in cages. It is putting the matter very moderately to assert that the ordinary length of life of a bird in a cage is five or six times the ordinary length of life of a bird exposed to the vicissitudes of Nature, and that portion of our critic's statement may be dismissed as needing no refutation in its absurdity. To expose the fallacy of the statement that tuberculosis (consumption) is common among cage birds, and is transmissible from them to human beings, is a very simple matter. The trouble is to bring the contradiction to the knowledge of the readers of "The Animal World" and the potential subscribers to the funds of the R.S.P.C.A. for the delectation of whom the long exploded fallacy has been re-hashed.

The Real Truth.

It is not likely that the Editor of "The Animal World" would welcome evidence in refutation of his pronouncement, any more than he would welcome any arguments putting the keeping of birds as pets in a light different to that in which it is his business to represent it, so I will content myself here by quoting very shortly from a lecture delivered by that distinguished pathologist, Dr. R. H. Clarke, M.R.C.S.—a lecture at which it was my privilege to be present. "Tuberculosis in cage birds is a very rare disease. I have examined microscopically hundreds of dead birds and have never yet met with a case.....nor known of one demonstrated by any competent observer.....it is not creditable for so-called experts who are either too ignorant to recognise well-known diseases when they see them, or too lazy to look for them, to go on year after year taking money to give people misleading information." This, I think, will be sufficient for the present, and I shall be glad at any time to pursue the matter further in the unlikely event of the Editor of "The Animal World" desiring evidence that tuberculosis in birds is not only a very rare disease, but is not, even when it does occur, communicable to human beings.

How Cage Birds League is Spreading.

In previous notes I have recorded the accession to the LEAGUE of members in Canada, the United States, and S. Africa. I now have pleasure in welcoming a Vice President living in Portugal, Lacy Rumsey Esq., of Oporto, whose name will be found added to our list at the head of these columns. Mr. Rumsey writes.—"I quite agree with all that CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has done and is doing, and am willing to subscribe annually the amount enclosed. If at any time any further support is necessary I shall be quite willing to make a further donation."

Answer to Correspondent.

W. BENNETT.—Thanks for cutting. There is, as you say, a wide field for the energy of the R.S.P.C.A. in the suppression of the cruelties incidental to the hunting of the carted stag. You would perhaps do well to send the cutting to the Editor of "The Animal World," 105, Jermyn St., London.

SUBSCRIPTIONS AND BADGES.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London). Editor,

(9).—All queries must be addressed the "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

Norwich Going Light.

W. T. Manning.—You give me very good details as to your treatment so far, but very little clue as to what symptoms are exhibited. The "going light" may simply be due to starvation, and the discolouration around nostrils may mean little more than that the bird is in a smoky or dusty atmosphere. Catch the bird and examine closely whether the colour is in the beak substance or merely a soiling of the surface. I fancy the bird has already had far too much treatment, so I advise you to drop most of it and treat strictly as follows for a fortnight. Then report result, referring to this reply. Continue your present method of cleaning cage, strew it with clean gritty sand, and keep it in a nice, bright, and airy place, but quite free from draughts or extreme variations of temperature. Allow bird to bathe when it desires to do so. Continue staple of plain canary seed. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape separately, and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days give a piece of bread the size of a chestnut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for three consecutive days, and for the remainder of the fortnight give four drops each of tincture of gentain, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day in the water.

Was it Tapeworm?

Ada.—The specimen certainly is not tape-worm, nor, indeed, any worm at all. It is in all probability simply an indigestible fibre from the stalk of some green stuff, such as watercress, which was only partly expelled on account of sluggish action of the bowels. A saline aperient in the water would have been better than giving charcoal. Stick a small cuhe of hard common table salt in the wires for bird to peck at for a day or two. Also add a small pinch of Epsom salts to its water for one day only, and for two or three days afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian, and four of aromatic sulphuric acid. As regards feeding up your Norwich for showing, from what you say I should think it not unlikely that the person to whom you sell your birds has a better judgment than yourself in selecting just the sort of birds that will develop and make up well. Much may certainly be done by judicious feeding, but it is too late for you to attempt anything in this way now. After next moulting season cage up separately those birds you want for show which appear deficient in chest, and give them every second day a piece of bread the size of a walnut, sopped in milk, drained, two or three drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, linseed, and broken groats. Keep the bowels regular by means of sufficient green food, and moderate or cease this "feeding up" as soon as your object is attained.

A Variety.

W. S. B., Dulwich.—(1) Give the hen with bare patch on back half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days dissolve as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece, in the drinking water. Slightly anoint the bare patch twice a week with Lanocyllin until new quills begin to show. Probably no contagious element about it. (2) Except in very rare cases, there is no necessity to put insect powder on birds. Freshly ground pyrethrum powder is the best. If you cannot get this, use Keating's. A small bellows distributor, or rubber ball with nozzle is the proper thing to blow it into the plumage. Failing these, place a heap of powder on piece of paper, then get a small pledget of cotton wool, and dab it lightly first on the powder, then about the plumage, working against the tips of the feathers to allow powder to drop into the plumage. (3) Painting inside cages is quite harmless if you take care not to return the birds until paint is quite dry and the smell evaporated. (4) I suspect the tail feathers of these birds have worn down or broken off, and the stumps retained. Catch them and see if this is so. If it is, gently withdraw the stumps at, say, three operations, at intervals of four or five days, taking four each time, which will necessitate three operations. If stumps are not there, treat same as No. 1, but omit the anointing. (5) I prefer buying seed separately and mixing as and how required. Plain canary is the best staple. A little summer rape every second day, a scrap of egg food or sponge cake once or twice a week, and a little mixed seed about twice a week. (6) A good mixture consists of two parts each hemp, inga, and millet, one part each teazle, black rape, and broken groats, and a half part each of maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame, and just a sprinkling of yellow mustard and linseed.

Moulting Again (K. F.).—It is possible the bird did not quite complete his moult in autumn, in which case he will finish now at any mild spell of weather we may have. If he did finish before, then he is almost certain to be exposed to great changes of temperature. This must be quite avoided. Keep him in a cosy temperature—not cold, nor yet overheated—free from draughts, and as equable as possible day and night. As staple diet, give a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a few grains of hemp, and a morsel of banana or bit of watercress, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of crushed spongecake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Add a pinch of Epsom salts to its drinking water for one day only, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day for a fortnight, or you may drop this sooner if the feathers cease dropping.

Patchy in Colour (Greenie).—The colour-fed hen which is very patchy in colour has either been badly fed, did not moult properly, or has lost feathers since the moult, which have been reproduced in natural tone and cause the patchy appearance. In either case you can do nothing now, as the colour is only influenced by feeding when the bird is moulting. You place a wrong construction upon the information that it is necessary to go on feeding if you wish to retain the colour of a colour-fed bird. What is really meant is that you must repeat the course of colour-feeding at each succeeding moult. When each moult is quite finished colour-food should be dropped for the rest of the year, save only in the case of show specimens, which are usually given a little occasionally right through the show season to provide for such a contingency as feathers being broken or knocked out by accident, or of birds unexpectedly moulting a few feathers, and thereby preventing patchiness, as occurs in your bird.

CANARY QUERISTS.

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Bound Up (A. A. G.).—Cut all hemp out of the dietary for the present, as it will only increase this trouble. Give plain sound canary only as staple, with a few crumbs of sponge cake about twice in a week, and a spray of watercress, if obtainable in good condition and free from frost, every second or third day. Also give a sweet grape each day for a week or so. Break open the skin and attach grape to the end of a perch, sprinkling it the first day with a pinch of maw to induce bird to take to it at once. For one day only you may add twelve drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water.

Food and Housing (Green Hand).—(1) Good sound plain canary only is the best staple diet for all general purposes. A pinch of mixed seeds, as frequently mentioned here, may be given separately as a treat now and again, but should certainly not form a staple article of diet. You should get one of our practical handbooks "Canary Breeding," House's "Manual," "Our Canaries," or the Nutshell booklet on "The Canary" for full details of general feeding. (2) Certainly keep the cock and hen apart in separate cages until ready to mate for breeding, which should not be earlier than the end of March.

Economy in Egg Food (Frank Jones).—On the face of it it does seem an expensive method to buy eggs to make fresh egg food daily for one pair of birds, but even if you did so it might easily prove cheapest in the end. If you got only one ordinary egg each day much of it would be wasted. Could you not arrange to have a supply of common bantam eggs, or even spare pigeon eggs, either of which would make ample food for a day for one brood, and you might, perhaps, get these eggs for a mere song. When only required in such small quantities several of the prepared foods on the market, which many fanciers use with success, come as cheap or cheaper than buying fresh eggs to prepare the food fresh daily. Scalded puppy biscuits without meat also make a very useful substitute. You would find the matter dealt with very fully in the early parts of "Our Canaries."

Distinguishing Sex (Novice Sex).—No, I'm afraid there is no really infallible method of distinguishing the sex of Canaries. Sexual distinctions have been so nearly obliterated in the domestic Canary as to be practically non-existent. It is only by a kind of instinct or insight, which comes of close observation and practical experience, that a fancier is able to sex a given bird "on sight," so to speak, and even the most expert may make a mistake sometimes. This insight cannot be conveyed in writing; go on closely studying the birds, especially those of known sex, and the ability to discriminate between them will gradually dawn upon you. Study also the plate of a pair of Norwich in Part VI. of "Our Canaries," where Mr. Norman has most cleverly caught the sexual distinction in external appearances. Colour is no guide whatever; those who tell you this know no better. The song now should be a very reliable guide to sex, and in a month or so the young cocks will begin to show a more prominent and pointed vent than the hens.

A Trio (Novice).—(1) You do not say whether this bird shows signs of wheeziness. If it does, considering its history of being kept in a window, its case is probably hopeless. See that its cage is quite free from mites, keep it strewn with clean gritty sand, in a cosy but not overheated place, and quite free from draughts. In addition to its usual seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and four of sherry mixed in it every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of the seed mixture advised to "W.S.B., Dulwich (6)." (2) Keep a piece of cuttlefish, or a cube of hard common salt, in the wires for bird to peck at. If this does not suffice to keep beak in order go on trimming it back as required with a small pair of sharp scissors. (3) The pair of birds ought to have been separated last autumn, and not put together again until ready for nesting next spring. Separate them at once, until about the end of March. As a beginner you would do well to get "Our Canaries," or "Canary Breeding for Beginners."

Lean-to Shed (Bostonian).—The structure of the shed is decidedly faulty, the walls being much too thin, which accounts for its severe fluctuations. I doubt whether you can make it quite perfect as it stands, but the following alterations will make a considerable improvement. Remove lining boards here and there to enable you to fill in the space between the walls with sawdust or wool waste from floor to roof. Replace boards removed, and then cover the inside with felting, or thick, strong brown paper. Also superimpose a second roof of thin boards covered with felt, allowing an air space of an inch between the two roofs. If the floor is on the ground level raise this at least six inches. Make ventilating apertures in the highest angle at each end, and others near the floor at the centre of the front. Cover the window with small mesh wire netting, and make the second and fourth panes from the end to open for use in the summer. If the ground is damp, or water logged in winter, the only thing to do is to lay a good drain sufficient to carry off moisture and keep the ground reasonably dry.

The Sex Question (Shemale).—See reply to "Novice Sex." In practically all normal cases the cocks should be getting in good stout song now, and this provides a very reliable guide to sex. Some hens make fair attempts at singing, but they are comparatively few, and very rarely get beyond what can only be termed twittering in comparison with the full, sustained warbling of the cock, during which the throat is greatly inflated, and palpably throbs as the notes are produced.

Not Moulting (Jethart's Herc).—(1) I take it these birds have moulted very slowly, and that you have not noticed the fact. Considering they are in such good health and condition, you need not feel at all concerned about their non-moulting if this is really the case, and may quite confidently mate up when the proper time arrives, with quite the full average chance of success. The greatest risk is, if they have not moulted, that they may drop deeply in moult just on the verge of the mating season, in which case you would be lucky to get two rounds each from them, but still, considering their ages, this would be quite sufficient. If you find any signs of moult in the next month or so, such as the birds going off song, or getting dull and sleepy, at once move them to a fairly warm and equable room in order to get the moult through as quickly as possible, when they may be ready for mating by the end of April. (2) The slipped hind toe should have been treated as soon as possible after it occurred. Any treatment would probably be quite useless now. It will be no serious detriment to him breeding successfully.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

An Ailing Hangnest.

E. D. P.—This bird has evidently caught a bad chill during the changeful weather—rain, gales, etc.—we have recently experienced. It would be better during such periods to keep the birds confined to the shelter, but not at a high temperature, this would be quite safe in your case, as, if I remember rightly, the shelter of your aviary is well lighted and roomy. Your treatment is satisfactory. Continue the warmth, but while leaving it fairly restful, encourage it to take some exercise and leave it in a room that does not become cold at night. Your diet is very satisfactory, but at the present time the more milk sop it takes the better. Offer at present: Insectile mixture, ripe fruit, milk sop and mealworms, or other live insects. Continue the Ipec. mixture, but for one day give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in two tablespoonfuls of water, and repeat this dose after an interval of three days, of course omitting the Ipec. mixture on these occasions. The milk sop should consist of Nestle's milk, boiling water, crumbled sponge cake, Mellin's food, and a little honey. Report progress a week hence.

All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Rosella and Bad Plumage.

F. C.—The principal diet of a Rosella should be canary and white seed, ripe fruit, nuts (if it cares for them), grit and a piece of clean cuttlebone continually in the cage. Keep a mixture by you of hemp, sunflower, oats, and paddy rice in equal parts, and give the bird about one tablespoonful every other day. If it cares for it, a few pieces of plain biscuit is very wholesome and will be beneficial, but some individuals will not eat biscuit. It is a good practice to put a pinch of grit (not sand) into the daily supply of seed mixture. The Rosella is a hardy species, but you must not subject it to draught, and you must keep it in a position in your kitchen where the temperature is the coolest and most regular. Give it one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in its drinking water once a week, and on other days put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates into the daily supply of drinking water. Also continue the quassia bath once a week. A little fresh lettuce and well cleaned watercress occasionally will be beneficial.

King Amazon Unwell.

Terrill.—The bird is in quite a bad way, and I fear gone too far to save, but while there's life there's hope. Bathe (foment) its eyes with a warm decoction of camomile flowers, at least daily, well dry the plumage after on a soft cloth. The bird must be kept warm, out of draught, and its bowels moving freely, by giving 2 drops of Dinneford's Magnesia, direct from a quill to the beak, as often as required. Keep its cage strictly clean—remove and burn all voidings as soon as made. Diet: Seed mixture, canary, white millet, oats, hemp, dari, grit and sunflower seed, in about equal parts—the whole to be well mixed; boiled maize (boil till soft, drain off all water, then allow about 20 drops of Byno-phosphates to soak into it), this only keeps fresh one day. As it has been used to sop, take a piece of stale bread, sprinkle it with sugar, and then moisten with water and phosphates in equal parts. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts and plain biscuits, and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Report progress a fortnight hence.

Budgerigars.

Budge.—(1) Possibly, but I think the plumage will be renewed in due course now. (2) The only thing you can do is to win its confidence, but no bird is literally "finger tame" unless it will see the finger and rest thereon under any conditions. Let it have a fly round every other day, but do not leave him out too much till you have quite won its confidence. Only as a last resource should I cut its wings. (3) Union with the F.B.C. would certainly bring you into touch with all private owners, as also will an advert. in our columns. (4) There is no such book as you refer to—it is impracticable—the circulation of such books is somewhat limited, and the costly nature of colour work makes them almost prohibitive.

A Correction (Ringnecks, Cockatiels, etc., J.R.B.).—In this reply I am made, by the printers, to say: "Leave them together another week"; this should read: "Leave them together for another year."

Outdoor Cage (J. H. C.).—For so comparatively small a cage, neither the Budgerigars nor Java Sparrows should be kept, they often prove combative in such confined quarters. You ought not to have more than a dozen birds in the cage, and if you are in a Northern county you must have a wood and glass shutter to cover the front during the winter months, and arrange some system of ventilation without draught. The following in pairs would be a nice series: Zebra Finches, Silverbills, Long-tailed Grassfinches, Avadavats, Gold-breasted Waxbills, and Bronze Mannikins.

Enamel for Cage (J. L. H.).—Get a small tin of quick drying cycle black enamel (varnish); paint the wire with this, inside and out; in fact, black the whole of the interior; the cage base, bands and top centre rose paint with white enamel (outside only), and cage will look very effective and be quite innocuous if you let it dry for two or three days before putting in the birds. Note: The varnish and enamel must be put on smoothly and evenly, without leaving any lumps for the birds to nibble at.

Chinese Spectacled Thrush (V. A. G.).—Their song capacity appears to be variable, but I have heard some good ones, and again others that were rather indifferent—it is a Blackbird type of song. It would require soft food, ripe fruit and a fair supply of live insects, but once settled and over the importation hardships, it would do well on somewhat similar treatment to that given to the English Thrush and Blackbird. It is a handsome bird, deep reddish brown above, tawny-buff below, with variegations of black in the form of shaft streaks and some lighter areas; also a narrow white ring round each eye. I saw one offered not long ago at 15s., but 25s. to 30s. would be a more average price for a decent bird.

Cardinals (B. W.).—(1) The song of Red-Crested Cardinals is not sustained as a rule, and in the aviary is only uttered freely during the breeding season, the call is mellow, and sweet, but the song though fluty, somewhat ear-piercing. (2) Use a "mist" sprayer at mid-day on genial days, and keep strictly out of draught till dry—as a rule these birds are free bathers. If you were to accustom it to come out of its cage and put a shallow vessel of water, within range of its vision it would soon learn to take and enjoy a "tub." (3) It is a South American species, ranging over Southern Brazil, Argentine Republic and Bolivia. It is hardy, sprightly, and beautiful.

G. H. B.—There is not a great deal wrong with your bird; its quarters, too, are all right, providing you can give it fresh air without draught. At night put a cover round the sides of cage, but only partially cover top of the cage. This cover should be passed through boiling water monthly. Choose the first genial day, and spray the bird with a dilute quassia solution, using a "mist" sprayer, and repeat the operation weekly whenever weather permits, but keep the bird warm till dry. In addition to seed mixture, supply ripe fruit (most Parrots are fond of sweet apple), nuts, and plain biscuit. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in the cage, and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. Either keep water in the cage or allow it to quench thirst three times daily. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Put half teaspoonful of byno-phosphates into the daily supply of drinking water, but once in a week in lieu of the above put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the water; commence with the latter, and then repeat weekly, though if the voidings are at all hard, it would be better to give two doses of the Magnesia during the first week. It would be well to let the bird take a little exercise outside its cage daily, but windows must be closed. Report progress a fortnight hence.

Coping with Red Mite.

Annoyed.—This is a matter often dealt with in our pages, and I am surprised you have not noticed methods of exterminating red-mites given therein. The only possible method of coping with these pests (to keep them down to a minimum, that is) is to deal with them immediately any are observed about. When very numerous they spread from the cages to the walls and then, of course, the latter require cleansing, too. Your best plan is to empty the cages and paint every crack and crevice (woodwork and wirework) with a mixture (equal parts) of petrol and turpentine. Let it run freely into the joints, especially places which show signs of harbouring colonies of the pests, both outside and inside the cages. The walls, etc., should be washed with a solution of carbolic (try Calvert's strongest, made according to the directions accompanying it). There will be no red-mites left then, unless you let any escape you. Let the birds be sprayed with luke-warm water to each pint of which has been added not more than two drams of sulphuretted potash. Use the potash twice or thrice, at short intervals. Don't let the mites get the upper hand again. Keep some of the petrol and turps by you and use it on the cage joints, etc., occasionally, as may be necessary. I find the best method of keeping mites out of the nest-pan is to dust thickly under the lining with Cook's co-fectant powder (obtainable cheaply of any chemist). After the young birds are 7 or 8 days old a little can be dusted on top of the lining, too.

A Wild Seed Mixture.

Alick.—The mixture is a good one of its kind, but is what I term a "crude" sort of mixture—I mean by this that there is not sufficient variety of seeds of the right kind in it. It is "bird rapes" which make up the bulk of all screenings from threshing machines. For use with Linnets it can be vastly improved in this way. Mix equal parts of gold of pleasure and sesame, with half-parts of lettuce, plantain, and mustard (yellow) seeds. The bulk of this mix with two equal parts of the wild seed mixture. Give a teaspoonful of this one day and a teaspoonful of best old hemp (cracked) the next day, and this should soon bring any healthy Linnet into rousing song.

A Show Hawfinch.

J. Painter.—Yes; now is as good a time as any to buy a Hawfinch to moult for show. The bird itself is the main thing, of course; if it has the requisite points the "time" is not a matter of much moment. Size is very important. It is safe to say a show Hawfinch needs to be as big as possible, consistent with fine quality of feather. The ideal colour is as near a rich reddish chestnut as possible, deepening on the back, and on the head. The chest and shoulders must be very broad, and the head bold and wide, set on a short, thick neck. A narrow-headed bird, or one "hammer-headed," as it is termed (narrow either at front or back) is to be avoided. The wing markings must be rich and well defined, especially the bar, also those peculiar shaped, blue-black wing feathers with the metallic sheen. The bib is a most important marking. It should be as nearly as possible a perfect V shape, clean cut at the edges, and dense, solid black in colour—the wider and bigger the better. A "thumb-nail" shaped bib is equally goood, however, to my way of thinking. A common failing with otherwise good Hawfinches is to run pale in colour on the forehead—such birds are generally, however, on the pale side in colour all over.

The Snow Bunting.

Ayrshire.—Size is a great point with this bird, too; a wide chest and broad head are also essentials in the show bird. The ground colour should be as pure a white as possible. Like all the Buntings, the Snow seems to care for little of any seed other than canary; mine also pick over and eat small quantities of wild seed mixture, likewise groats and hemp (crushed by being passed through a seed mill), also my Finch mixture treated in the same way. They like a little insectivorous mixture (such as I prepare for my small Softbills), among which I mix a few cut-up mealworms. This I consider most beneficial. Of mealworms they should have one or two daily; other suitable forms of live food they also relish. Green food they are not keen after, but take "nibbles" at any of the kinds I put into the cage (young leaves of watercress, rape seedlings, shepherd's purse, chickweed, etc., according to season). A long, low cage (like a glorified Lark "runner") is the best type, with a canvas top for fresh-caught examples. I put in two stoutish perches, which, of course, are low down. But they spend a lot of time on the floor of the cage, and their feet should be looked to, so that they do not get clogged. Coarse sawdust is an excellent covering for the cage floor, but is so apt to get into the food and water vessels.

A Try for Linnet Mules.

J. A. T.—I don't think you will have much difficulty in getting your Linnet to mule; he seems a very likely bird. A buff hen, if big and stoutly built, is all right; a yellow is preferred, because the Mules from such are generally richer in colour. The stock mixture now should be: canary and teazle two pints each, summer rape one pint, and linseed half-pint. If the birds are in a cold room now, about half-a-pint of hemp can be added to the stock mixture. A feed of maw and niger, and a good wild seed mixture can be given frequently (varied) by way of a change. Let them have a little green food, especially rape seedlings, in the winter, and flowering dandelion tops and the young leaves, also seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, plaintain, and groundsel freely in the spring and the summer. Many good makers put up a special Linnet (or Finch) mixture in packets, and a feed of this occasionally makes an acceptable variation from the ordinary stock mixture. To bring them in condition quickly the great "secret" is to give them a good daily supply of the best old hemp, and crack it lightly, so that they feed well off it. Also put in the "side-pan," or "tit-bit" drawer, daily a teaspoonful of the following mixture: Two ounces each of gold of pleasure, niger, plaintain, sesame, and thistle, one ounce each of mustard (the golden-yellow seed), dandelion, maw, cornflower, and lettuce. It is the finest "tit-bit" or "refresher" (call it what you will) that I know, and there is no waste. This treatment will bring any bird into breeding condition at the earliest possible moment.

Managing a Song Thrush.

Arthur Jayes.—The "Melox," etc., which I recommend, will answer well for a show bird, if some high-class insectile mixture is added to it and some suitable live foods given, also fruit and berries, according to season. But a better (though not the cheapest) method is to feed the bird on the following lines (any good corn dealer would mix you the stock food). stock mixture (store it in tins): Finely ground chicken (or game or pheasant or partridge) meal, six parts; ground silkworm pupæ, meat meal, good ants' eggs and dried flies, one part each, by measure. Get the chicken (or other) meal without grit. If you have any difficulty in doing so, finely crushed puppy cakes (or puppy meal) makes an excellent substitute; or the "broken" biscuit obtainable from the grocer. If the latter be used, add an extra part of meat meal and silkworm pupæ. Damp quantity required for daily use with grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or cold boiled potato. Vary them frequently, and add a teaspoonful of preserved egg flake, or half a hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, occasionally. Give some mealworms daily, and any other live insects you can lay hands on, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. "Black-beetles" are very much relished, likewise snails, by the Thrush. The bird must be allowed every facility for bathing.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Anxious.—Fatty degeneration of the liver, with localised hemorrhages, due to the breaking of the tissue. This is a disease of some standing, and arises from the taking in with the food or water of impurities which set up destructive changes in the organs of digestion. I presume your former losses were of a similar nature, and arose from the same cause. Make a fresh start by getting an entirely fresh supply of seed, and mixing with the drinking water sufficient Condy's to colour it slightly.

W. J. B. Blake.—Broncho-pneumonia, following on a chill, induced by retarded moult.

W. D. Eley.—Crested Norwich died of pneumonia following on septicoemia, a condition in which the blood becomes affected. There was no indication of contagion, nor was the diet in any way associated with the cause.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Ideas (W. Williams).—We have given a very similar perch before.

A Photograph (J. Broad).—We thank you for sending this, and will certainly try to utilise it.

Bird Pets (D. McArthur).—Our best thanks to you for your interesting communication.

An Interesting Event (E. P. S., W.A., and others).—Thanks for your notification.

Cuttings (H. Strong, G. Harding, S. A. E., and others).—Many thanks for the newspaper cuttings sent us, which we will utilise as space permits.

A Suggestion (W. R. Pike).—We are much obliged to you for the suggestion, but our innate modesty, we are afraid, stands in the way of its being carried out; we'll promise you to think it over, however.

A Revival of the Late Thrums Cage Bird Association.

Sir,—A meeting of fanciers was held on Dec. 23, in the Airlie Arms Hotel, Kirriemuir, for the purpose of trying to revive the late Thrums C.B.A. There was an excellent attendance of local fanciers. After the object of the meeting had been explained, a discussion took place, when it was unanimously agreed to form a society. The following office-bearers have been elected:—President, Mr. D. Lawson; vice-president, Mr. W. Buttar; secretary, Mr. Joe Stevenson, 6, Muir Street; treasurer, Mr. J. Ewart; along with a good working committee. After the office-bearers had been elected it was unanimously agreed to hold an open show on the old date, namely, the second Saturday in December, 1912.

JOE STEVENSON, hon. sec.

Do Birds Want Their Freedom?

Sir,—To prove to our faddist friends that it is not cruel to keep wild birds or any bird in cages, I may say I have a hen Bullfinch that I take out of her cage and put on the table. She will then walk about for a short time and look to see if there is anything to eat; then she will go back into her cage and shut the cage door after her; and until she gets the door quite closed she is not satisfied. After that she seems quite content. She never once tries to fly or use her wings. And the best of it is she has done this entirely on her own accord, for I have never attempted to teach her in any way. I should think this is another proof showing that when well treated birds much prefer cage life to exposure to the uncertainty of getting a living in a wild state. I never think of closing any of the room doors whilst the bird is out, and she never once has attempted to fly through the open doors, although there is nothing to prevent her doing so; she always makes straight for her cage, and does not seem happy until she gets there. Permit me to wish CAGE BIRDS and CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE every success and a most successful New Year.

A. HOLLINGSHEAD.

A Visit to Two Prominent Bradford Fanciers.

Sir,—The other week-end found me at Dudley Hill with a little time on my hands, and, of course, as a birdy man, my first thought was: "Where can I pop in and have a look at a few birds?" Well, as I was not very far from the residences of Messrs. Ogden Brothers, I thought I would look in. My first call was at the house of the elder of the two brothers, and he has two rooms for his birds, capable of holding a large number. The first item when you visit a Yorkshire breeder's room is to have some birds run out into show cages for you to look at, and there they have a lot worth the running out—far too many to enumerate here. But I also notice a six-compartment travelling cage, and the question came, "Are you sending some abroad?" "Yes," he answered, "we are sending three pairs out to Messrs. Eastway Bros., New Zealand, by the boat sailing this week. Will let you have a look at them all." First came a clear pink-eyed buff cock that I knew well as a winner last year, and with him is gone a neat yellow hen that had been paired with him the last breeding season, and as breeders the progeny showed that they had hit it, the couple having produced some clinking birds, amongst them being the yellow hen that has done so well for them on the bench this season. Next we had out a thigh-ticked yellow cock and a clear buff hen, both winners at Y.U. shows of first prizes, then a pair of cinnamon marked birds, both winners also, a rare, long-sided, nicely marked yellow, and a smart marked buff hen, the usual failing of the cinnamon marks—stoutness of body—not being evident in either. Part of these were in the room of the other brother, "t'young 'un," Luther, who has also two rooms at the disposal of the birds, one in particular containing a large number of fine birds of the Yorkie type.

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

Club Shows in Belfast.

A Suggestion to Amalgamate.

Sir,—As you and most of your many readers know, there are two clubs or societies in Belfast, each holding a young bird show annually, confined to birds bred during the season; and at each show members can exhibit two birds in each class. When all accounts are paid, the balance is paid over the different classes as prize-money, running down to the third or fourth prize birds. The Belfast Ornithological Society is the oldest club in Ireland, and formerly its members represented fanciers of all varieties, but latterly it has been principally identified with Belgian and Scotch Fancy Canaries. The Norwich Club, as it is generally termed, is composed of members who breed the Crested, Plainhead, and Yorkshire varieties, and is now more of a general club than when founded. Now my idea is that these two clubs should amalgamate. It would be to the advantage of the Fancy generally. The same purpose would be served by one show instead of two at half the cost in most matters, such as rent of hall, advertising, etc. The show season is now a bit congested in Ulster, and this would free a week and relieve it a little; and if my suggestion was adopted possibly a different date from any in use could be adopted for the amalgamated club show. These clubs each hold their annual meeting in January, at which rules are revised, if necessary, and other business done that can only be done at the annual meeting, and I would suggest that these two clubs at their annual meetings appoint two or more members each to meet and discuss this matter. They could then put the case before their own members, and the way could be left open at the annual meetings for any arrangement to be carried into effect that might be agreed on; otherwise this could not be done for twelve months. The course I have suggested would bind neither club to anything. As your reporter, when dealing with the last Ulster O.A.'s open show, remarked, there is perfect harmony in the Fancy in Belfast, and as union is strength I hope to see my suggestion carried out, when we would have in Belfast a club show equal to most open shows and much larger and better than many now held.

PROGRESS.

The Food of a Nightingale.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. C. Harrison's enquiry about my method of feeding Nightingales, I have much pleasure in stating that same is simplicity itself; and it only requires that there shall be proper care in the preparation of the food to bring about success. The staple food is dried ants' eggs, and the best quality is the cheapest in the long run. The ants' eggs are mixed with grated raw carrot just sufficient to make them absorb the moisture of the carrot. This mixing I do overnight, letting the food stand in a basin pressed down to soak until next morning; then I stir the ants' eggs up well with a fork, and by varying the menu, add one day dried flies (scalded) about one-fifth of the bulk, the next day, instead of the dried flies, using ground silk-worm pupae; the day after I substitute for these, if the weather should be cold, finely ground hemp seed. These ingredients must be well mixed together, so that the food, when passed through the hands, feels crumbly moist to the touch. If it is sticky, add a little Osborne biscuit or grated sponge cake. When the birds show signs of coming on song, I sprinkle a pinch of yolk of egg on top of their food, or wasp grubs, previously soaked (if obtainable), and in addition give a mealworm or two a day, gradually increasing the latter to twelve a day, four in the morning, four mid-day, and four in the evening. I would, however, caution beginners to be very careful in the use of mealworms, as the too-frequent use of same (they act as a great stimulant) is often the cause of ailments and consequent disappointment. Mr. Harrison wants to know whether I keep my birds in a heated room. Yes, I do; but I never let the temperature exceed 65degs., trying to maintain an average of 60degs. during the day. During the night the temperature falls to 55degs., sometimes 50degs., but I find that the birds take no harm as long as they are protected against draughts. Unless small insectivorous birds are kept in an aviary where they can enjoy plenty of exercise, a little artificial heat during the winter months is necessary, but the birds must not be kept too warm, as too much heat is apt to throw them into soft moult just at the time of year when one is looking forward to a period of song, and all one's pains and labours have been in vain for that season. In conclusion, I may say that I am always at home on Sunday mornings, and if Mr. Harrison, or any other fancier interested in Nightingales, will give me a call to hear the birds sing, I shall be pleased to afford him that opportunity.

Some Favourite Foreign Birds and Their Story.

A "Cut-throat" Who Killed His Wife?

Sir,—I regret to inform you that I have just lost one of my favourite bird pets in a rather unusual manner. I have had a Ruddy Cowbird for nearly three years now, and one of his chief joys was to execute a rapid series of back-somersaults. He would do a dozen of these "off the reel," as the saying is, and my Starlings in vain tried to imitate him—from his top perch downwards. I never saw any bird do anything like it. This, alas! caused his death, for a few days ago he missed his balance and came down crack on his head on to the bottom of his cage and died instantly from concussion. As he died in lovely condition and was a good specimen, I presented him to the Scottish National Museum, who, not having one in their collection, gratefully accepted him; so, even dead, poor "Jimmy" will be useful. He was a happy little chap, an ardent wooer of my other birds (regardless of sex, too), and never tired of carrying round grasses or feathers to them, throwing back his head in a ridiculous manner, and singing lustily. Alas! they ignored his efforts, and he made no conquests. In fact, his efforts were misconstrued, and he was repulsed now and then. Absolutely tame and confiding, he would come for a worm, go in and out of his cage at the word of command, and even try and open his door when told. For one of his species he was a good singer, and the first to start off in the morning; and when pleased or spoken to made a curious "cluck-cluck" sound, very quickly and loudly. And he loved his bath, "clucking" all the time. To see him chase my two Starlings out of the basin and keep them at bay until he was finished was a sight for the gods! He cost me a humble half-crown only, but I refused eight times that for him this year from an envious and wealthy exhibitor. His loss, following closely on the loss of a talking Starling whom I had for four years last month, has cast a gloom over by little bird room that new purchases will not dispel. The Ruddy Cowbird from South America is not shown or kept much, I believe. Possibly his sombre colours are to blame for this. I find him a rather interesting bird, though. He is hardy, easy to keep, has a restless manner, and a shrill (if a little snarp) but continuous song that is pleasing. My specimen knew his name, too, and whenever I approached his cage he uttered a quick, chattering sound which became quicker and louder as the expected mealworm was produced. His black beak and beautiful eye relieved the mouse-grey of his head and breast, and a funny jerky way of sticking his big tail up as he hopped about showed off his pretty brown tail and back admirably. I still have my veteran Budgie, whose third hen promises better than his previous ones. The first led him "the devils' own pace," and I gladly sold her; and the second, after laying an egg and breaking it, left this world, having achieved sufficient, I suppose, for her ambitions. I hope yet to see him a proud father of some primrose-coloured baby Budgies. He is a good bird, biting me when asked, and upsetting every water tin within reach without being asked. A curious bad habit, eh? And apparently all out of pure cussedness. The sight of a "rat's tail" brings him to the door at once, and he will nibble it to pieces in a twinkling, out of my little girl's hand. I do not know which of them enjoys it most. A pair of young Budgerigars amused us lately. I had put them into an odd Canary cage on their arrival until I had time to look at them properly, and when I got home at night, to my surprise, I found they had crushed their way out by the water hole and got in somehow beside my adult pair. There they were, all in a row, sitting quite contented—"friends in captivity," I suppose. My Cutthroat, I may add, killed his wife, and has been much happier since, suffering no remorse, and constantly repeating his short and limited song, puffing out his feathers in a most quaint way all the time.

Edinburgh.

Under the White Rose.

DURING the holidays fanciers have been enjoying themselves immensely at their members' shows, and as most of them were the completion of the year's competitions, they lacked none of the interest usually centred in finals. I hear that at Bradford City the competition for the points specials for the year's members' shows was extremely keen, ties and single point differences being the general run of the top scorers.

MORLEY had a nice show on Boxing Day, the British bird section being a real treat; and it was a pity none of them were over at the Cinderella show some weeks ago; they would have been in the running with certainty. I would advise the Yorkshire County B.B. and M.C. to have a look round this district for a few new members—45 entries in five British classes is not bad for hereabouts.

EACH of the two societies at Hebden Bridge held a members' show on Dec. 23, and both were very good, some nice birds being put down. But it is a pity both were not rolled into one; there would then have been some keen competition, which would have been an advantage. Cannot something be done? I did hear that on Dec. 30 both the Sowerby Bridge and the Heptonstall societies were having a combined members' show, so perhaps when they get together they will begin to talk, and when they begin to talk one never knows what will come of it. Let us hope in this case it will result in the fusion of two if not three of the above-named societies. Think of the old saying: "United we stand, divided we fall." Wibsey and Queensbury have these combined shows at times, and I see they had one booked for Dec. 30 also. As a rule these combined shows are good—better than being held singly—and are looked forward to with interest by the members.

I HAVE heard a little good news to-day anent the Bradford National Show. A prominent official of a Bradford Naturalist Society (unfortunately I do not know the society's name) asked me the question if we were likely to have another such show. Of course, I answered that in all probability there would be another, and he said that, along with several others, he had attended the late show, and that they were delighted with it; and at their meeting following the show he had been called upon to give an account of the birds staged; this description had gratified all present, the Mules, Hybrids, British, and Foreign birds especially appealing to the general tastes of the members, and they want another year to be posted up near the time, so that all can attend.

"Cage Birds" Literary Competition.

Cash for Your Experiences.

In response to numerous requests, we have decided to hold another Literary Competition, and to offer £10 10s. in prizes. So, readers, utilise your leisure moments to put on paper, for the benefit of your fellow bird-keepers, that knowledge of birds and their management which is stored away in your head. Turn your spare moments to profitable account. Remember that all articles published by us will be paid for (note rules), also that photographs and drawings may accompany articles.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on Mating Canaries to Breed Exhibition Specimens. Any variety of Canary may be dealt with (i.e., Norwich, Yorkshire, Crest, Roller, etc., etc.) and the selection of the stock birds and the way to mate them, with a description of the good points to be looked for, and the faults to be avoided, should be fully gone into, and the reasons for the writer's advice should also be stated.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on the Management of Canaries. Competitors may deal with any one variety (such as the Norwich), or more than one variety (such as the Norwich and the Crest together), and questions relating to the general management from either the domestic or exhibition side; or the article may deal with any particular phase of Canary management, such as (1) How to prepare birds for breeding, (2), The procedure during the breeding season, (3) The rearing of young birds, (4) How to moult birds successfully, (5) How to colour-feed, (6) How to train young birds for the show-bench; or any side of Canary management the competitor may choose.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on any topic relating to British Birds. The habits, appearance, breeding, and management, etc., of any one particular species (such as the Goldfinch, Thrush, Skylark, etc.) may be discussed, or the birds may be dealt with collectively, or in groups, as may suit the desire or knowledge of the essayist.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on the art of Mule or Hybrid Breeding, whether in cage or aviary, and between any species of bird (either British or Foreign).

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay on any topic relating to Foreign Birds. The habits, appearance, breeding and management, etc., of any one particular species may be discussed, or they may be dealt with collectively, or in groups, as may suit the essayist.

One Guinea Cash for the best original essay written from the aviarist's point of view, embracing the fitting-up and management of a bird-room; or the fitting up, stocking, and general management of an aviary (outdoor or in) whether of Canaries, British Birds, or Foreign Birds, or a suitable combination.

A beautiful original Painting of birds (framed) Value Four Guineas, will be awarded for the best essay, in the opinion of the judges, out of all the sections.

Closing Date, January 15th, next.

RULES.

(Read these very carefully.)

Each essay must be clearly written (or typed) on one side only of each sheet of paper used. Violation of this rule may entail disqualification.

The length is left to competitors, but essays should not contain less than 1,000 words, wherever possible.

Faults of spelling and grammar will not be counted against any essay, practical utility, interest, and simplicity being the chief essentials.

No name or address must be put on any essay, but each must be signed with a nom-de-plume, the sender's name and address being attached on a separate sheet of paper.

The Editor's decision will be final. Competent assistance will be called in to aid him in arriving at his decision.

All essays sent in (and any accompanying sketches or photographs) become the property of CAGE BIRDS, but all which are published (over and above the winning essays) will be duly paid for according to their worth to us.

S. BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Members' show held December 26th, in the Assembly Rooms adjoining headquarters, Sydenham Hotel, a very fine room, well lighted and free from draughts. The society owe a good deal to the show manager, Mr. J. Wright, for the splendid way in which he carried out his duties. He was hard at work from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., and without him very little of the staging would have been erected. Messrs. Stevenson, Hughes, Smithers, Davey and Burke were a grand lot of stewards, and rendered great help. Mr. Chairman Willmott also lent a helping hand at the opening, and assisted with the rush of visitors during the afternoon. Mr. J. H. Rog judged. The President was unable to open the show, so the secretary took the handsome cage and bird which was to have been publicly presented to him, later on in the evening, for which the doctor tenders his very best thanks to all members. Close on 190 birds were staged, and the Yorks. were a fine lot, the hen class of 16 being a fine display. Many well-known fanciers dropped in during the afternoon, and the society have good cause to remember their first venture. Specials: Best bird and best unflig. Yorks., Mr. J. Hughes; best novice, silver cup, best novice unflig., Mr. J. Adcock; best Yorks. hen, Mr. H. Kidner; best novice Nor., also Nor. unflig., Mr. West; silver medal for best Nor. hen, Mr. F. Derney; Border and marked Border, Mr. A. Murray; best Mule or Brit., Mr. A. Ward; Crest, Mr. A. Jones; best bird moulted in A.V., Mr. E. T. Willmott. Special winners for most points: Gent.'s umbrella, silver medal, cruet, Mr. J. Hughes, 34 points; Yorks. drawing, Mr. J. Burke, 17, also wins handsome china vase. Art calendar, most entries, Mr. Clay; Mr. Murray, 13; Mr. Broomfield, 12; most entries least points, Mr. Ankers. The secretary has already received further new members, the result of the show, and hopes all members will attend the meeting, January 10th, to receive prize money and specials, and bring unsold tickets with them.

Glasgow C.B.A. Triumph Over Difficulties.

Grand All-round Show.

Close upon 1,000 entries: Scotland's record gathering of Yorkshires: Excellent management.

Glasgow and Dist. C.B.A. held a very fine show on Jan. 2 and 3, in the Crown Halls. This plucky society had many difficulties to overcome, not the least of which was the scarcity of entries up to within a few days of the holding of the exhibition. But the officials manfully faced the position, and, as a result of whole-hearted effort, they "pulled the chestnuts out of the fire" in great style, and a show resulted of which any society might be thoroughly proud. We sincerely hope it will prove a success financially, as it is not pleasant to have a deficit to deal with after the hard work inseparable from the running of any large show, though the members have not allowed such an unfortunate situation to damp their enthusiasm in the past.

In the hope of helping the "gate," the society engaged a very central place, and the Crown Halls made a first-rate venue, the main room being of grand size, holding the birds comfortably, and having plenty of space for visitors. The light is only fairly good in the daytime, owing to one side of the room being without windows, but as regards comfort and freedom from draughts it would be hard to beat. The birds were splendidly arranged, on up-to-date staging, and their needs were attended to in the best possible manner by as good a band of stewards as it has been our fortune to meet.

As show managers the Society had the advantage of the services of Messrs. M. Craig (vice-president), and W. Hutchison (president), and these good fanciers worked very hard indeed, setting a fine example by their cheery manner of grappling with the hundred and one things which always seem requiring attention. Mr. Fred Bowman, too, is a real first-class secretary, never knowing what it is to be beaten by work, and he had his fill of it here, and to spare. The late entries must have brought him many sleepless hours, but through it all he just "kept smiling," and the success which resulted is striking evidence of the ability with which he carries out his duties. He is a right good man for any society to have on its side. The committee comprise Messrs. E. Barron, J. Brown, A. K. Chalmers, Allen Chalmers, T. Forrest, J. Godber, R. Heggie, R. Jeffrey, J. Laurie, G. Martin, J. M'Leod, J. M'Lay, G. M'Laggan, F. Paling, J. C. Sinclair, A. Sloan, R. Thomson, F. Taylor, S. F. Wood, and J. Young, with J. Strank (treasurer) and R. J. Anderson (vice-president). They left no stone unturned to make things move along as smoothly as possible, and are to be congratulated upon the result. Messrs. Barron, Craig and Taylor did great service at the Scottish National Show in forwarding birds on from that fixture, and it is a pity the railway officials mis-read the labels in a few cases and sent the birds back to their homes, instead of on to the Crown Halls, this unfortunately, causing the teams of several exhibitors to be absent.

The judges were Messrs. W. B. Mackie (Nor.), J. Craig (Bord.), J. W. Bruce (Yorks.), L. J. Arrigh, and A. Cochrane (Mules, Brit., and For.), and C. Campbell (Crests), the latter gentleman being called on to officiate at the last moment owing to the heavy entry in the Plainhead classes. Despite the dull, wet morning, these fanciers seemed very happy in their awards, few grumblers being heard. They had the help of a band of excellent stewards.

The Yorkshires and Cinnamons.
Judge, Mr. J. W. Bruce.

Yorks. were a feature of the show, such a large collection never having been drawn together at a Glasgow exhibition. All the leading crack English and Scotch fanciers had teams forward, and the competition was of the highest order. However, the judge, after a careful selection, managed to pick out the winners to the general satisfaction of the exhibitors. Mr. J. W. Bruce (Coldstream) judged these varieties.

YORKS. CL., ETC., YELL. CK. WIBSEY AND QUEENSBURY (Combined).

Wibsey and Queensbury C.B. Societies' first of two joint shows, to be held home and home, was held Dec. 30th, Horse and Groom Inn, Wibsey. The entry was not as good as it might have been, only 69 birds being staged. Mr. F. Armstrong (Halifax) judged, and had no easy task in placing his awards. The Queensbury fanciers took premier honours, gaining 131 points to Wibsey's 82 points, which was very disappointing from our point of view, seeing that we were showing at our own headquarters. After the show about 30 sat down to a meat pie supper, served in the very best style by our host and hostess, and here again the Queensbury lot gave us a whacking. The remainder of the evening was spent in a jolly fashion with songs by various members, and clog dancing by a marionette.

KILMARNOCK.

Kilmarnock O.S. annual show held New Year's Day, in the Agricultural Hall. The entry all over was well up to that of former years, being 30 better than last year. Borders and British were the features of the show, some real good ones being out. The hall is an ideal place for a show, being comfortable and well lighted. The management was A1, this being one of the best conducted shows held at this time of the year. Mr. G. Edwards (Leominster) had forward a large team, and captured cup for most points in the cage bird section. Mr. J. Blane had things well in hand, and is to be congratulated on the success of the show. Mr. J. W. Bruce judged, awards being well received.

LIVERPOOL (Amalgamated).

The sixth annual amalgamated show of the Liverpool B.B., Wallasey, Birkenhead, Bootle and Garston Societies was held in the St. Mary's School on Dec. 16. The Committee were: Messrs. G. Benson, J. H. Isaacs, T. Eccleston, G. Morton, J. Richardson, L. Hamilton, F. E. Hawkes, J. Jones, and T. James, with Mr. Wm. Mallinson as hon. sec. The Yorks. and Yorks. Greens included some of the very best. Norwich and Norwich Greens had 21 classes provided in all, but only 17 birds turned up. Why more did not turn up we fail to understand. Borders, too, were not by any means what might have been expected here, but the quality was good, Hybrids and British Hardbills were nice, though not quite so numerous as we are used to in Liverpool District. Evidently many Norwich, Borders, and British birds were away at open shows. There was a good list of cash and other specials, besides prize money on sliding scale, and in the hands of a good committee and a most capable sec. in Mr. Mallinson there should have been at least 400 or 500 exhibits. Great credit is due to all who did send entries, and they well deserve all they got. Mr. Wellings judged Yorks., and Mr. Chas. Houlton the rest.

RUGBY.

Ten-mile radius show, held at the Geisha Cafe, Dec. 27. Competition in many classes was very keen. The awards were carefully selected and gave general satisfaction. Mr. J. W. Veasey makes a most obliging secretary, the management being all that could be desired. Mr. H. Leng secured special for best Canary with a smart ticked yellow. Four classes were reserved for novices, and each contained birds of the right type. Mrs. Marshall won special with a grand clear yellow. This society is making rapid strides to success, and would do well to extend radius. Mr. Geo. Hall (Leamington) judged.

NORTHAMPTON (Hand-in-Hand).

This old-est. society's 26th annual show was held December 26th and 27th, at headquarters in Wellingboro' Road. There was an excellent show of Norwich, many well-known winners being present. The Yorks. classes were well filled; in fact, it was the finest show for this particular breed the society has ever had. The committee, with Mr. Ette, chairman, and Mr. Law, Secretary, had everything nicely arranged, and are to be heartily congratulated upon such a successful exhibition. Mr. A. Keech (Bedford) made the awards, which were well received.

ENTRIES POOR BUT FINANCES GOOD AT PAISLEY.

Fine Display of Scotch Fancies and Belgians.

The Paisley O.S. opened their annual two-days' exhibition in the New Drill Hall on 1st January. The hall is admirably adapted for a show of this sort, having ample flooring accommodation; and being lighted from the roof, the light is all that can be desired. The building is heated by radiators, and this enables an even temperature to be maintained. The cage birds were artistically staged at the inner end of the hall. The Scotch Fancies were started at the left-hand side and continued to about the centre, from which point the Norwich commenced and were arranged to the right. Mr. Lambie, the secretary, though new to the duties, proved a capital secretary; he is a past-master in the art. The Scotch Fancy Canary entries totalled 200, with 23 Belgian Canaries, which was about equal with the previous exhibition. The quality of the Scotch and Belgian Canaries was very even, and of a good standard. The Norwich sections showed a considerable decrease on last year's number, but the quality was quite up to the average, some good birds being staged. The entries all over were much less (about 200) compared with last year, but the finances are better than was showed by last year's accounts. The Glasgow show and Paisley show both being on the same date certainly told on the entries on both sides. Various sales were effected, but they were not equal to what would have been the case had the exhibits been entered at purchasable prices; they were nearly all prohibitive in price, and the demand was in excess of the supply; a number were catalogued at £100. The public patronised the event, and were much amused at the humpy-backed exhibit. The non-fancier cannot understand this mysterious specimen; it has to be known to be appreciated. The judges for the two opening sections were Messrs. Black and Park (Govan), Caldwell (Bailieston), Fulton (Partick), Prentice (Clydebank) and Baird (Paisley); they got through their work by 2 o'c. Other judges: Messrs. A. Robertson (Rutherglen) for Norwich, R. B. Gibb (Glasgow) for Yorks, H. Bennet (Kelso) for Borders, and R. Y. Raine (Cathcart) for the Mules, British, and foreign birds. Cup for best young Scotch Fancy Canary was won by Mr. James Smith, of Govan, with a yellow foul cock. The runner-up was the yellow hen belonging to Mr. Montgomery.

FALKLAND (Fife).

Fifty-third annual exhibition held in the Town Hall, January 2. The hall is a capital one for a cage bird show, being well lighted all round, and the birds being staged on one side and at the end, left plenty of room for visitors. There was a good increase in entries on last year, and the quality was first class. The Executive Committee were early in attendance, and from the president downwards one and all worked hard for the success of the show, the vice-president, Mr. Angus, devoting a lot of time and experience to the work, while Mr. Litster (treasurer), and Mr. Anderson (secretary) worked well. Mr. McLaughland was the cage bird steward, and he helped materially to make the show the success it was. Mr. W. Mitchell (Perth) judged, and his awards were well received.

YORK C.B.S.

Members' show, held Boxing Day in All Saints' School Room. Mr. H. Todd (Darlington) judged, and his awards were well received. The birds were beautifully staged, and made a grand display. Several of the Norwich winners have taken premier honours at most of the recent shows. Mr. Zimmerman is to be congratulated on getting the special in the British section, with a grand Thrush the first time shown. As this is my first show as secretary, I wish to thank all who helped me to make it a success, and trust that at our next members' show every member will endeavour to bring some exhibits.

SWANAGE.

Second annual show, held at the Drill Hall, Dec. 28th. Cage Birds were staged in a separate room, and were well looked after by Mr. W. Edmunds. The classes did not fill so well as could be wished, and several had to be amalgamated or cancelled. This was especially unfortunate in the Mule and Hybrid classes, there being several worthy of premier honours. Taken altogether, the exhibits were excellent. Mr. W. O. Brooke judged. Every credit is due to the Rev. M. Thwaites (the sec.) for the excellent arrangements made.

Budgerigars: c, Miss Bignall, good Amazon.

TRURO.

Truro C.B.S. annual show, held in the Market House, Boxing Day. Entries were well up to expectations, and the quality all-round was of the very best. Norwich and Yorks. classes were well filled, and competition was very keen. Mules and British were very hot, and were a great attraction, especially the Bullie class, which was about the warmest and most level lot seen in the West this season. Mr. C. H. Toy was again at the helm, and well backed up with a good committee of fanciers, a foregone conclusion that both exhibits and exhibitors had the best of attention. Mr. E. White judged.

MID-RHONDDA C.B.S.

Second annual members' show held December 26th, Assembly Rooms, Tonypandy. Although only a members' show exhibits turned out well, especially so in Yorks. and Borders. The popular President (Mr. I. Morgan) secured most of the spoil with a rattling strong team of Borders, winning special for best Canary in show, also best Yorks. and best Border, as well as the challenge bowl for most points, although Mr. Wm. Morris proved a worthy runner-up for this trophy with 75 points. Best novice Yorks., Mr. J. Jones; Mr. Legg secured spl. for best Brit., and Mr. T. Player second best, with a Greenie and Goldie respectively. This society would do well to further extend their show another season. Mr. Legg makes a hard-working and painstaking secretary. The committee one and all are fired with the right grit, and should make things hum in this popular mining district. The cards were placed by Mr. T. L. Castree.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Members' show held December 28th in Montgomery Hall, a light and spacious place, free from draughts, and centrally situated. Upwards of 270 birds, nicely staged, were on view. Yorks. were the special feature, making a superb collection. Special for best in show fell to a cl. yellow hen of lovely symmetry and teeming with quality, owned by Mr. H. E. Wilkinson. Taking the show all through, great progress has been made. Mr. F. Jones (President), Mr. T. Hemmings (Vice-President), Mr. W. Oxley (Treasurer) are true to the core, and better officials the society could not wish for. Mr. A. Hobson (Secretary) and Mr. J. Woolhouse (Assist. Secretary) know how to manage things correctly. Both work hard, and are courteous to the extreme. A word of praise should also be given Master Hobson, only a lad, but he did capital work both at this show and at the late successful open fixture. The stewards were Messrs. Lockwood, Drabble, Curley and T. Hemmings, praise being due to them for the way in which they went about their duties. There was a good attendance of visitors. This show terminates the Sheffield series (six all told), each and every one recorded as a success. Silver cups were won by Messrs. H. E. Wilkinson (Yorks.), A. Lawton (Nor.), P. Walsh (Brit.); best vhc's (3) Messrs. Bainbridge (Nor.), W. H. Webster (Yorks.), H. Lockwood (Brit.); best novice, J. R. Webster (unflighted cl. yell. Yorks.); best 4th, H. E. Wilkinson (Nor.), W. Bingham (Yorks.); Ramsden's, Mr. J. R. Webster. Judge, Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield); his awards were well received.

RADSTOCK (Somerset).

Held Dec. 28. The cage birds were staged at the end of the hall in a nice light. Unfortunately the three open classes were cancelled, probably owing to the fact that this section was not advertised in the Fancy Press. Another year with judicious advertising, there is no reason why this section should not be equal to the other sections of the show. Mr. B. Clark acted as hon. secretary, with Mr. H. Young as chairman, and these were ably backed up by an excellent lot of fanciers, all as keen as mustard. Those responsible for the cage bird section were Messrs. H. Brimble, F. Chivers, O. Tricker, J. Horler, M. Latcham, B. Wareham, and F. Woodland, who are deserving of every support. Mr. Keegan (Bristol) judged.

YELL., YORKS. CK.: 1, sp., vhc, hc, Brimble and Latcham, fine long-sided bird, good position, in splendid condition, a clear win; 2, c, Horler and Fricker, cl., good length, nice head and wings; 3, Woodland, capital yellow, nice position, good head and quality; 4, Nash, good position, not quite the length of winners. BUFF: 1, sp., hc, Brimble and Latcham, first, grand bird, fails only a little in wing carriage or would win at any show; 2, vhc, second very smart, good head, length and position; 3, Lippiatt, nice bird; 4, Chivers, some thought might have been higher, good one. BUFF HEN: 1, sp., 3, 4, hc, Horler and Fricker, first, grand upstanding bird, lovely quality, good wings and position, clear win, 3, another good bird, 4th, also a nice one; 2, Woodland, wing ticked Buff, nice quality bird, of good position. YELL.: 1, sp., c, Brimble and Latcham, first, lovely clear, grand length and position, beautiful quality, a gem; 2, 3, 4, Horler and Fricker, fine team, fit for any open show; vhc, Woodland. MULE OR HYB.: 1, 2, 3, A. Stock, all Goldie Can. Mules, first, light Mule, nice size, 2, heavily varieg., Mule, larger than first, 3, very smart varieg. mule, all in superb condition; 4, Woodland, dark Mule, small, but good colour.

CHESTER.

Once again the Chester C.B.S. held their annual show on Boxing day in the Assembly Rooms—a place admirably fitted for an exhibition. The Chester fanciers are making rapid strides, as this year the exhibits would have held their own in open competition. Every bird that was benched was fit to win. This is far in advance of anything attained before in Chester. Another splendid feature was the number of visitors who came from Liverpool, Manchester, Runcorn, Wrexham, Llandudno, and even as far as Carnarvon. The secretary, Mr. J. Swindley, is the right man at the helm, and he received great support from Messrs. Richards, Bracegirdle, and Thompson, as stewards whilst Messrs. Whitlow, Wright, Gardner, D. Jones, Guy and Baxter looked after the wants of the birds and visitors. A grand lot of specials were given and the following are the principal winners:—Best Yorks., and best Nor., Mr. T. P. Baxter; best Hardbill and Softbill, Mr. J. Yates; best Novice Nor., Mr. T. Thompson; Hydes, Mr. J. Bracegirdle; Sandifords, Mr. T. P. Baxter. Mr. H. W. Battye judged.

PAIRS:—Cancelled. MULE OR HYB.: 1, Whitlow, rattling good dark Linnet Mule, splendid colour and markings, put down in fine form; 2, Bracegirdle, another of the same cross, small but extra good colour. GOLDFINCH: 1, Yates, on its own, champion cut blaze, lovely col., fine bars, nicely buttoned; 2, Thompson, not quite so good in blaze, lavishly tanned, good bars and buttons, shows a nice collar; 3, Lackley, solid colour blaze, nice tanning and bars; vhc, Whitlow. BULLFINCH: Cancelled. Linnet 1, 2, Yates; 1, cone shape, great size, beautifully pencilled, nice nut-brown throughout; 2, equal in size, grand pencilled head, just a wee bit open on breast; 3, Thompson, fine col., very broad back, more of the Nor. type; vhc, Whitlow. A.O.S. BRIT.: 1, Yates, ex. good Waxwing, colours quite perfect at wings, rare form; 2, Whitlow, lovely Thrush, very steady; 3, vhc, hc, Lockley, grand Lesser Pole.

"CAGE BIRDS" ANNUAL FOR 1912

Is now in preparation, and with the co-operation of our readers will be a greater success than any of its predecessors. Any suggestions for new features, or for the improvement of present features will be welcomed by us.

TO SECRETARIES OF SOCIETIES.

Free.—The Insertion of full particulars (name of society, latest list of officials, place, time, and nights of meetings) in the Alphabetical List of Cage-bird Clubs. Remember, no society should be missing, for this feature of "Cage Birds Annual" is the only Directory of its kind in existence. Secretaries who have moved please let us know your new address.

TO JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

Free.—The insertion of their names and addresses, and the varieties in which they specialise, in the List of Judges. The only condition is that judges must have officiated at one of the recognised shows. Remember, this list is the only complete one published, and is universally consulted by show officials.

TO OUR TRADING FRIENDS.

Free.—The insertion of names, addresses, and specialities in the Bird Trade Directory. No matter what you sell, so long as it has to do with the Fancy, particulars are inserted free. This directory is of exceptional value and fanciers the world over find it indispensable. For one shilling names can be thrown up in heavy black type.

Breeders, Exhibitors, Judges, and Advertisers generally: Do you want something that will bring you orders throughout next year for a "mere song"? If so, just try an advertisement in the "Annual."

AT A VERY LOW COST IT WILL BRING YOU

BUSINESS FOR A WHOLE YEAR.

NO ROOM FOR GRUMBLING AT CARLISLE!

Increase of 60 Entries; Over 500 Birds in all.

Carlisle and Dist. C.B.S. 36th annual show, held in the new Mart Hall, on 30th Dec. and Jan. 1st. On the whole the show was a great success, the entries totalling 60 more than last year, and reaching over 500 in all. Mr. Wright, the secretary, is a very painstaking official, energetic and obliging to a degree; he was backed by a strong committee, consisting of Messrs. Reay (chairman), Herring (vice-chairman), Brown, Johnstone, Cranston, Jones, Carrick, G. Johnstone, Dawson, Lawson, Dockerty, McFarlane, Fraser, Nixon, Gill, J. Nixon, Hutchinson, Harrison, Pearson, Pennington, and White. On the whole the affair was a great success. The Border Fancies came up in good numbers; this variety was well patronised in almost every class, and, considering the Scottish National was held on the same dates, there was no room for any grumbling. Nor. and Yorks. were another feature, some hot stuff being forward. The Mules, British and Foreign birds were also very good, some fine specimens being present. The Borders were under the supervision of Mr. Poole (Workington) and Mr. P. Mackenzie; the Mules, British and Foreign birds, Mr. John Dixon; the Nor. and Yorks, Mr. G. Goulden. We noticed that what was alleged to be a pure Canary had been entered in the Mule class; this bird was passed by Mr. Dixon as a Canary. The novice Border medal was won by Mr. Coulthard with a buff ticked bird; a spanker it is, and was runner-up for the open medal. The open medal B.F.C.C. was won by Messrs. Smith Bros. (Coldstream) with a lovely buff hen. Special for most points was won by Mr. F. F. Lawson; most points for members, Mr. F. F. Lawson, 1; Mr. J. Dixon, 2; Messrs. Wright and Son, 3. Taking the show through, everything passed off successfully—ideal birds, an ideal hall, and efficient management, made everyone feel that they had entered upon a happy New Year, and, as far as the awards went, generally speaking, grumbling seemed to be a thing of the past. We were pleased to meet a number of Gateshead, Haltwhistle, Scotch and other fanciers, who seemed to be perfectly at home with their brethren.

The Canary Classes.

BORD. FCY. YELL. CK. (14): 1, Ayre, grand col., correct type and quality throughout, good head, well laid on wings; 2, 3, Pearson; 2nd, grand col., nice type, a wee bit long sided, nice head and tail; 3rd, same remarks apply, good bird; 4, Ellwood, Newcastle winner, good one; 5, Nicholson; 6, Pennington; 7, Patterson. DALBEATTIE.

The 26th annual exhibition of the Dalbeattie O.A. (open to the counties of Dumfries, Kirkcudbright, and Wigtown) was held in the Town Hall, 1st January. The hall is an ideal place for a cage bird show, being splendidly lighted and free from draughts. The entries on this occasion showed a large increase compared with that of last year, and the quality of the exhibits was grand. The Borders and Nor. were a splendid lot, the quality in each section being well up to the mark, and including many well-known winners at recent shows. The Yorks., though few in number, were a really grand lot for type and quality, and for colour combined they would be hard to beat. Mules and Hybrids were a very choice lot. The Goldfinches came up to those of former years for type and quality, and as usual there were many local-caught birds in the class in the pink of condition, while many field-moulted birds out of the tickets will yet do good work for their owners. The British bird classes brought together some really fine specimens of local birds. The foreigners, though not large in numbers, were a fine show. Of the arrangements we cannot speak too highly; they were in the hands of the most courteous and obliging secretary, Mr. G. C. Robertson, with a hard-working committee, consisting of Messrs. Rae and Trainor in the bird section, paying attention to the wants of the birds. Mr. J. Martin (Castle Douglas) made the awards, which were well received.

FOR., A.O.S.: 1, 2, 4, McKinnel and Son; 3, Heron. The birds in both Selling Classes were good value for the money.

BOLTON AND DISTRICT ROLLER C.S.

Annual singing contest, held in the Assembly Rooms, Joiners' Arms Hotel, Deansgate, Dec. 29th and 30th, and Jan. 1st. There was a very good entry, 157 birds being entered, which constitutes a record for Bolton. The birds were of exceedingly good quality the fanciers, no doubt, now that the season has got advanced, being able to send their best birds, and the room was a veritable hall of song. The judges, Messrs. G. Wareing and J. Lyons, had hard work to adjudicate on the merits of a lot of the birds. A great number of the birds were very backward in singing, and it took a long time to judge them. On the Saturday there were a great number of visitors; the members of the Provincial R.C.C. arrived together, headed by their genial skipper, Mr. Percival, and the room had quite an animated appearance as they were discussing the merits of the different birds, and the judging sheets. Afterwards they held their monthly meeting in the club room of the Bolton Society. The following birds did not sing: Class 1, Nos. 10, 25, 33, 36, 45, 47, 48; Class 2, Nos. 9, 14, 32, No. 8 arrived too late for judging; Class 3, No. 9; Class 4, Nos. 6, 8, 15, 24, 26, 32, 39; Class 5, No. 6.

KENDAL.

Kendal and Dist. show, held in the Town Hall, Boxing Day, confined to Westmorland or twenty-one miles from Kendal. The hall was a very comfortable place for the occasion. Entries came up fairly well for a district show, some very fine specimens being staged. The secretary (Mr. Wilson), after booking the numbers, placed the slips in the corridor, so that exhibitors could mark their catalogues as the judging proceeded. The committee were all workers, and paid great attention to the exhibits. Mr. A. Wellings (Prescot) judged.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Published in 8 Monthly Parts at 6d. each, post free 7d. Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid. The practical and comprehensive work for which all Hybrid breeders have been waiting.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the Operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."
